Nazis Acclaim Horthy.

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 24.—Chancellor Hitler tonight guaranteed the inviolability of the borders of neighboring Hungary in an exchange of toasts with his guest, Admiral Nicholas Horthy, regent of Hungary, at a magnificent state dinner.

Emphasizing the centuries of friendship and co-operation between Germany and the old Austro-Hungarian empire, Hitler said:

"This firmly founded community based on a mutually unshakable trust will be of special value to both peoples now that we as neighbors through historic events (union of Germany and Austria) have found our definite historical boundaries."

Italy's Amity Stressed.

Admiral Horthy, in responding, stressed the three-cornered mutual friendship of Hungary, Italy and Germany and their common will for a "just peace."

Hitler, like Horthy, dealt with the three-cornered friendship of Hungary, Italy and Germany. He said he was convinced that historical German-Hungarian co-operation "not only serves the interests of our countries alone but also, in close collaboration with our befriended Italy, is a pledge of a dignified and just general peace."

Recall World War Ideals.

Both men recalled common ideals for which their nations fought "shoulder to shoulder" in the World War.

Cheering crowds braved leaden skies and drizzling rain today to welcome Admiral Horthy to Berlin.

A special train brought Horthy and Chancellor Hitler to Berlin from Hamburg late this afternoon. The break in the "Hitler weather" hitherto enjoyed by the Hungarian ruler and his party failed to dampen the enthusiasm of crowds greeting the two chiefs of state.

The long procession of automobiles passed through decorated, flood-lighted Brandenburg Gate and along many-pillared Unter den Linden, recalling the majesty of Premier Mussolini's state visit to Germany last September 25-30.

Telephone Co. Drivers Take Safety Pledge

Commissioners Offer 3-Point Plan to Reduce Traffic Killings.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Washington's war on traffic evils pressed steadily forward on several fronts yesterday, with the following developments:

The Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., holder of one of the city's best safety records, enrolled 85 trucks and 300 drivers in The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce permanent accident-prevention program.

The Commissioners' advisory safety committee drafted tentative agenda for long-range highway planning, stressing the essential "three E's" of traffic control—enforcement, education and engineering.

A weekly series of safety meetings for youngsters between the ages of 9 and 14 was opened at the Young Men's Christian Association.

Sister and Nurse Save Boy, 2, After Fall in Fishpond

The quick-wittedness of his 5-year-old sister, Mary, and the skill of a former nurse who lives next door yesterday saved the life of Carl Whetstone 3d, 2, after he had fallen into a fish pond at the rear of his home at 56 East Maple street, Alexandria, and remained beneath the water at least two minutes.

The boy was playing with his sister, when he stuck his toe in the pool, then slipped into the water. Mary summoned Mrs. Thelma Cook, a neighbor, who, with the aid of Mrs. F. B. Whitehead, another neighbor, pulled him out. Mrs. Cook then used artificial respiration.

Two Guards Held in Jail Suffocations

Mayor of Philadelphia Rows With Prosecutor Over Arrests.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 24.—Two prison guards were held on homicide charges today in what on official statement called the "baking to death" of four hunger-striking convicts in steam-heated punishment cells at the Philadelphia County Prison.

The arrests precipitated a tug-of-war between Mayor S. Davis Wilson and District Attorney Charles F. Kelley to fix the blame for the prisoners' suffocation during an organized revolt against "monotonous" food.

Called "Wanton Cruelty."

Two leading investigators declared the convicts stifled in an almost air-tight cell block in which steam radiators had been turned on full for two days. The investigators and a county judge said the circumstances showed "utter ferocity" and "wanton cruelty."

Mayor Wilson ordered the arrest of the guards, Alfred W. Brough, 39, and Francis Smith, 43. Homicide squad detectives took them to City Hall.

When the men appeared before Magistrate Nathan Beifel, Assistant District Attorney John A. Boyle protested that the arrests were "premature" and asked the magistrate to exclude testimony. Beifel agreed and held the guards without bail for a hearing next Tuesday.

Later Boyle obtained from Common Pleas Judge Gerald F. Flood a writ transferring the guards from police custody to that of the district attorney. He notified police his office was "taking complete charge of the investigation."

Flood held the men in $2,500 bail and ordered them brought before him next Tuesday. Their attorney promised to raise bail for their early release.

"Baked to Death."

In a joint statement, Boyle and Coroner Charles H. Hersch said the suffocated prisoners "went through the horrors of Hades . . . in a one-story building equipped with steam radiators turned on full in August weather."

"In two days' steaming they literally baked to death," the statement said.

[Four separate investigations into the deaths were under way by the coroner's office, the State welfare department, the district attorney's office and the homicide bureau, the United Press said.

[According to Hersch, the men were kept for two days under intense heat with no water supply except for occasional flushings of the mechanical toilet, which was stuffed with a shirt, permitting water to flow to the cell floor and become boiling hot. The cells were 8 feet long and 4 feet wide.

[The four victims—Joseph Walters, 28; Frank Comodeca, 46; Harry Osborne, 22, and Joseph McQuade, 26—were found early Monday morning by two guards. The flesh had dropped from their hands and at the county morgue relatives described them as unrecognizable and apparently "parboiled."

[Joseph Forte and Morris Spatz, the survivors, said, according to Hersch, that they lived through the two days and nights by keeping their noses close to two tiny openings in the cell door.—Editor's note.]

Arrayed in Their Sunday Best, Rural Mailmen Cheer Wallace

The welfare of the rural letter carrier and that of the farmer are closely linked, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace told more than 1,500 delegates to the national convention and their wives at their annual banquet at the Mayflower Hotel last night.

Wallace then quoted figures he had made public in a statement earlier in the day in reply to the charge that farm conditions were as bad in 1938 as in 1932. He repeated that the 1932 farm income totaled $4,328,000,000, as against a 1938 income of $7,560,000,000.

"When the rural free delivery originated in 1896, it was regarded as a form of socialism," Wallace said, in praising the work of delegates and the men they represented.

Rural letter carriers are good neighbors, said Wallace, adding:

"The New Deal stands for good neighborliness inside and outside the country."

Wallace spoke extemporaneously in place of Postmaster General James A. Farley, who was prevented by official business from attending the banquet. The latter wired his personal regrets.

Arrayed in their Sunday-go-to-meetin' clothes, the men who drive the country's highways and dirt roads the year-'round delivering mail to farmers in isolated sections off the beaten path gave Wallace a rising vote of welcome.

Texas drawls mingled with Yankee accents in the spirit of the country "social," as delegates ex-

Tydings 'Welcomes' Campaign Fund Quiz

Southern Marylanders 'Galled' or 'Regretful' at the Purge.

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

The descendants of those who came over on the Ark and the Dove with Leonard Calvert, Lord Baltimore's brother, in 1634, are very much vexed with the descendant of Claes Martenszen Van Rosenvelt, who landed in New Amsterdam in 1643.

To get down to current political events, the Democrats of St. Marys County—most of them, at any rate—think President Roosevelt made a mistake when he attacked Senator Tydings as a "betrayer" of the New Deal and gave his blessing to Tydings' rival for the senatorial nomination, Representative Lewis.

Some sadly "regret" the President's intervention in a State political campaign, but others say they are "fighting mad" over it.

"Roosevelt's done some good things," said a tobacco farmer. "He's also made some mistakes. Well, that's all right; no man can be right all of the time. We think Tydings has done a pretty good job. But the President comes into our State and says he is going to Roper Discusses 'Deal' of Senator, Cummings Over 124 Ships.

Senator Tydings yesterday "welcomed" an investigation of Maryland campaign expenditures asked by his New Deal rival for the Senatorial nomination, Representative Lewis, with the statement that "I have nothing to conceal."

He added:

"As a matter of fact, I may have some suggestions to offer the committee (the Senate Campaign Expenditures Investigating Committee, Morris Sheppard, Texas, chairman), as how best it can find out what actually is going on in the Maryland campaign."

This was one of several outstanding developments of the bitter campaign resulting from the Presidential attempt to "purge" the Democratic Party of men President Roosevelt held had not voted with the Administration. Among other developments were:

Secretary of Commerce Roper's charge that Senator Tydings frequently in 1934 attempted to persuade the Secretary to live up to a contract entered into by the United States Shipping Board and a scrap-iron dealer for sale of 124 war-time merchant marine vessels. Later, all but 46 were delivered as contracted, in a "deal"

Wallace Says Farms Are Not 'Back to 1932'

Calls Problem 'Difficult,' Declares AAA Will Be 'Flexible.'

By Robert C. Albright.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday described the farm situation as "difficult" and declared the AAA is prepared to adopt "flexible" policies if needed "to continue to hold agriculture in a state of balance."

He vigorously denied farm conditions are "back to 1932" and asserted that "the fundamental structure of our program is sound." Nevertheless, he declared the AAA will hold itself ready to make "additions" to the program if future developments require them.

"I am surprised some people would say we are back to 1932; it is not true," said Wallace. "They are just talking through their hats . . . Farm income is under last year, but by no stretch of the imagination can it be said to be back to 1932. That is creating a wrong impression."

Aroused by stories he said had appeared in Eastern newspapers, Wallace devoted most of his press conference to a rebuttal of comparisons with 1932 farm conditions, using specific commodities. He estimated 1938 farm cash income, in-

Austrians in Rush For Nazi Divorces

Vienna, Aug. 24 (AP).—Extension of the new German marriage laws to Austria has caused a rush of applications for divorces by couples who were separated, but could not be divorced under the old Austrian law. Under old Austrian law marriages in which one partner was a Catholic were indissoluble under Austria's concordat with the Vatican.

Senator Sees An 'Attack' on 'Tax-Exempts'

Brown, Levies Committee's Chief, Favors Direct Approach in Laws.

A "great frontal attack," bringing future issues of Federal, State and local securities under taxation, and removing reciprocal exemptions from Federal and State official salaries, was predicted yesterday by Chairman Prentiss M. Brown, of the special Senate committee on tax-exempt securities and salaries.

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, forecast enactment of a simple statute removing the exemptions, as recommended by President Roosevelt. He favored placing the legislation before the Supreme Court for a ruling. If it was thrown out by the courts, he said, Congress could sponsor a constitutional amendment or try indirect tax methods.

Brown declared for the direct legislative approach to tax-exempt revenue sources following conferences with Assistant Attorney General James W. Morris and C. F. Stam, expert for the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue. He said his special committee would not meet to take action until January.

The Senator estimated about $60,000,000,000 in Federal, State and

Nazi Press Calls Morgenthau Red War Conspirator

Special Cable to The Post.

Berlin, Aug. 24.—Der Angriff, organ of Dr. Paul Josef Goebbels, on its front page today violently attacked United States Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau as an alleged leader of international Jewish-Bolshevist conspiracy, which is preparing a new war, apparently against Germany.

Angriff's story revolves around "mysterious" negotiations which Morgenthau is asserted to have had in and near Paris, with Leslie Hore-Belisha, Leon Blum, Mandel-Rothfield, Walter Lippmann and others.

Charles West Sent to Ohio By Roosevelt

G. O. P. Leader in Idaho Denies 'Invasion' to Beat Pope.

President Plans Parley Later This Week With Farley.

By Sidney Olson.

President Roosevelt's resounding slap at "political immorality"—the practice of Republican voters crossing party lines to defeat New Deal Democrats—brought quick response in Washington last night.

Even as the President in Hyde Park turned to another maneuver, the dispatching of Charles O. West, his former Congresional observer, to stump for New Dealers in Ohio, these developments happened:

Senator Brown, chairman, pledged Senate Democratic Campaign Committee support to all regular nominees unless their primaries were "improper."

Chairman Hamilton of the Republican National Committee called the President's statement "an indictment of the election laws of a number of soverign States."

Fred Babcock, Republican State chairman, Idaho, denied that his State's Republicans had entered the Democratic primary August 9 to defeat Senator Pope, and noted that the total vote in the Democratic gubernatorial contest totaled 3,000 more than that in the Senate race.

LaFollette Defends "Purge."

President Roosevelt prepared to discuss primary situations throughout the Nation with Postmaster General Farley at Hyde Park later this week, as rumors recurred that the two had split over whether Pope was to re-enter the Idaho campaign as an independent.

Representative Joseph Martin of Massachusetts, chairman, Republican Congressional Campaign committee, predicted a G. O. P. gain of at least 70 seats in the House in the fall elections.

Senator La Follette, in Madison, Wis., where he is preparing to campaign against re-election of Senator F. Ryan Duffy, New Deal Democrat, defended President Roosevelt's right to conduct the "purge."

Senator Sheppard, chairman, Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, suggested a Constitutional amendment to empower Congress to prescribe primary election conditions in contests for Federal offices.

Sheppard's committee also authorized an investigation of the campaign being conducted in Maryland by Senator Millard F. Tydings, anti-Administration incumbent.

Refers to Idaho.

Senator Brown said regular party nominees could expect complete committee support "unless something was fundamentally wrong" with the nominating primaries.

Brown referred directly to the Idaho primary, where Senator Pope, fervent New Dealer, was whipped by a 2,858-vote margin by Representative D. Worth Clark, conservative Democrat. He added, however, that he was inclined to think that the regular Democratic nominee (Clark) would not have any opposition other than from Republicans. This ran counter to the belief that President Roosevelt, in speaking yesterday, cleared the way for Pope's re-entry in Idaho as an independent.

G. O. P. Chairman Hamilton said: "In view of his recent political activities, Mr. Roosevelt must have had his tongue in his cheek."

President Roosevelt conferred yesterday at length with West at Hyde Park, the Associated Press reported,

Hines Gives Lie To Racketeer's Story of Bribery

GEORGE WEINBERG.

Weinberg Says He Gave $30,000 to Help Win Dodge Election.

Tammany Leader Introduced Them

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, Aug. 24.—The gang of the late Dutch Schultz put up more than $30,000 through James J. Hines to elect William C. Dodge district attorney of New York County in 1933, George Weinberg, one of the gangsters, testified today in Supreme Court, where the veteran Tammany leader is on trial, charged with conspiring to give Schultz and his policy racket protection from courts and police.

Furthermore, Weinberg testified, Hines introduced him personally to Dodge in the offices of Joseph Shalleck, now one of the counsel for the defense, saying "this is one of Dutch Schultz's boys," and informing the candidate that Schultz was providing the campaign fund.

The former district attorney, informed in the afternoon of Weinberg's testimony, said "I never saw him; never spoke to him; and he never spoke to me. He never gave me any sum whatever, nor did anybody else ever donate to me at all. The campaign committee always handled these matters." He said he hoped he would be called as a witness to refute the Weinberg story.

Stryker Shows Records.

A sharp blow at the testimony of Weinberg that he had conducted negotiations between Hines and the racketeers by visits to Hines' apartment, 444 Central Park West, during the summer of 1932, was struck late this afternoon by Lloyd Paul Stryker, chief counsel for the defense. He confronted Weinberg in the densely packed courtroom with exhibits which later are to be placed in evidence; records from the electric light, gas, and telephone companies, the landlord of 444 Central Park West, and a trucking company which moved the Hineses there for $22. They showed that the power in Tammany and his family did not move to that address until October, 1932.

This was several weeks later than the time when Weinberg swore again and again he visited Hines there. The white-faced gangster stuck to his story while Stryker went at him hammer and tongs, forcing him to admit to a habit of perjury and confess he was a burglar, a convict, a crook, a "fixer" of crooked gambling odds, and a member of a mob of extortioners.

Not once until this afternoon had Weinberg faced Hines from the stand, so far as reporters could see. In the cross-examination, Stryker forced him to face the accused.

Hines Says "You Lie."

"Stand up, Mr. Hines," Stryker instructed his client. Hines rose, facing Weinberg on the witness stand. The gangster stared straight at him, expressionless. Asked if after seeing the data placed before him he still clung to his story of having visited Hines at his home in the summer of 1932, Weinberg answered flatly, "Yes."

"You know you lie," the Tammany leader said to him in a calm, conversational tone, that carried without a rise in his voice, throughout the hushed courtroom.

Instantly the room was in turmoil. Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora—who was candidate of the Recovery Party against William C. Dodge for the district attorneyship in 1933—admonished the defendant not to make another similar outbreak. "You know you are represented by counsel here," he said. Hines walked back and took the armchair at the head of his counsel table. As Stryker phrased an apology to the court for the outbreak,

Chicago Chiefs' 'Unholy Profit' Inquiry Asked

Clergy Bewails Gambling 'Take' in Appeal to Gov. Horner.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—The Chicago Church Federation asked an official investigation today of what it called the "take" in Chicago's gambling business to determine "what officials participate in this unholy profit."

The federation, declaring a "scandal of first magnitude is brewing in Chicago," made its request in an open letter to Gov. Horner, asking him to institute the inquiry "if the city and county refuse to investigate."

The federation's action came shortly before axmen of State's Attorney Courtney struck again in his war against Chicago handbooks.

Two squads wrecked two more alleged handbooks, seized five men and routed about 450 patrons, many of them women, in the eighth and ninth raids since last Wednesday.

A police court freed 49 gambling raid defendants today, ruling the establishments were not adequately described in search warrants.

The church federation submitted to the Governor a list of 78 establishments it said were reported "as being gambling joints."

Holt Charges Plot To 'Gag' Him by Brother's Arrest

Clarksburg, W. Va., Aug. 24 (AP).—Senator Holt, youthful Democratic critic of the Roosevelt Administration, charged tonight his enemies were trying to "shut me up" as a Federal indictment was returned accusing his brother of forging indorsements of two WPA checks.

The brother, Matthew S. Holt, jr., 40, former WPA district engineer, was charged with indorsing checks issued two years ago to Max Lynch, Parkersburg WPA worker.

Matthew Holt was discharged from WPA less than a week after his brother had charged in the Senate that F. W. McCullough, then State WPA administrator, was "using the WPA to elect himself Governor."

Army, Hurt by Jibes at Blues, May Doll Up With Red Braid

A little perplexed and more than a little hurt by critics of its sartorial taste, the Army revealed yesterday it hopes to equip all enlisted men with a resplendent dress uniform of contrasting shades of blue, set off with scarlet piping and—when occasion demands—a large quantity of scarlet braid.

The dashing full-dress outfit will, however, be distributed throughout the Army only if the recent proposal to switch service uniforms from olive drab to slate-blue is carried into effect.

It was explained that the Government would save so much by making the change to the blue service uniform that it would be enabled to supply the dress uniform without extra expense. The dress uniform at present is used only by men on duty at the White House.

In addition to the monetary saving, the new service uniforms are expected to be less visible, more comfortable and much simpler to manufacture. The slate-blue color is a mixture of white and one shade of blue, while the olive drab is said to be a blend of numerous shades.

Capt. O. D. Hopping, of the Quartermaster Corps, explained yesterday that the exact shade of olive drab is so difficult to obtain that on one order for 500,000 yards, nearly 20 distinct shadings were produced.

The color difficulty has made drabs comparatively expensive, Hopping pointed out, adding that he expected the new shade, if adopted, would be much more easily manufactured.

TVA Foes Gave Away Whisky, Inquiry Hears

But Citizens' Group Leader Denies He Ever Talked of Such an Idea.

By the Associated Press.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Aug. 24.—L. J. Wilhoite, head of Chattanooga's Public Power Board which is erecting a distribution system to provide TVA power in competition with the privately owned company, said today the possibility of an agreement by TVA to buy out the Tennessee properties of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation was "insufficient to justify delay."

He told the Congressional investigating committee inquiring into various aspects of the TVA that the city had made every effort to buy the local properties of Tennessee Electric Power Corporation, Commonwealth subsidiary, but had been unable to persuade the company to accept what the power board considered a "fair and reasonable price."

Cites 1,000,000 Loss.

He said the people of Chattanooga were losing $1,000,000 a year by paying the electric rates charged by Tennessee Electric and could not afford to wait upon the outcome of negotiations.

The two Republican members of the investigating committee present, Representatives Wolverton, of New Jersey, and Jenkins, of Ohio, condemned the action of the Federal Government in providing through PWA 45 per cent of the cost of the public system and helping to destroy the value of the existing system.

Jenkins said to Wilhoite, "I think your testimony has established that the United States Government is ready and willing to put out of business any power company anywhere in the United States."

Tell of Liquor.

In carrying out the current phase of the investigation, looking into efforts of the private companies to thwart public power projects, Francis H. Biddle, counsel for the committee, put on the stand three former employes of the Tennessee Electric Power Co., who now are employed by the municipal power board.

They told of activities during the referendum three years ago on the public power issue, designed to defeat the measure at the polls, which included providing liquor to voters, soliciting votes against the projects and participating in the purchase of two vacant city lots in the names of some 100 nonresident Tennessee Power employes, to permit them to vote in the city referendum.

Robert Emerson, one of the witnesses, testified that he broached the idea of distributing liquor to Fred B. Frazier, head of the citizens' and taxpayers' association formed to fight public power, and that Frazier had told him to go ahead. He described distribution of the contents of a case of whisky, explaining, "in elections around here a good deal of whisky is given away."

Frazier, a former school commissioner who had testified previously, returned to the stand and flatly denied he ever had discussed giving liquor to voters with Emerson or anyone else, or that a penny of the association funds had been spent for that purpose.

Green Refuses To Join CIO in Latin Meeting

May Extend Rivalry to South America; Calls Mexican Parley 'Red.'

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 24.—William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declined tonight to join the C. I. O. in setting up a new Latin American labor organization, and hinted broadly at making the C. I. O.-A. F. L. fight an international affair.

Green said he had turned down an invitation from Vicente Toledano, general secretary of the Conference of Mexican Workers, to attend a meeting September 5 in Mexico City where labor leaders from North and South America have been summoned to organize the Latin American trade union congress.

"I regard it as a meeting of extreme leftists and Communists," Green said at a press conference.

"Because of this type of leadership," he added, "the American Federation of Labor could not subscribe to the economic and political philosophy which they proclaim, and which will be sponsored and approved at the conference."

To Advance Communism.

John L. Lewis, C. I. O., also has been invited to the conference and, it is understood, may be represented there by Lewis and several aides.

"We are of the opinion," Green declared, "that it is being promoted for the purpose of advancing the cause of communism in Latin American countries. The C. I. O., in all probability, will be there to represent its membership."

New proposals for closer co-ordination between Government, labor and industry, emanating largely from the A. F. of L. State meeting in Buffalo, N. Y., were not taken up by the council. Neither was there action on reports from Hyde Park, N. Y., that President Roosevelt is considering a Government-labor-industry conference on changes in the Wagner labor relations act.

Latin Labor Lags.

"There is undoubtedly merit in the proposal," Green said. If the A. F. of L. is requested to attend, it will do so. We have definite ideas and plans which we propose to present to the President and Congress later, relating to changes in the act."

The strength of the inactive Pan-American Federation of Labor, Green said, was to be found largely in North and Central America. Such South American republics as Brazil, Argentine, Chile, Paraguay, Uruguay and Bolivia, he added, had some representation in the organization.

Labor organizations in those countries, he said, were more political than economic and he added that the Pan-American Federation had considered sending a commission south to explore and determine the status of South American labor organizations.

Maverick to Write 50-Cent Book on Constitution; Miles Fairbank Tells of Puerto Rican Pride.

He arrived on the S. S. Puerto Rico en route to Washington to confer with the Secretary of the Interior on the program of the Reconstruction Administration in the island next year.

"The Puerto Ricans are a proud people and are struggling for racial justification," said Fairbank. "They resent the fact that their status is undefined. Perhaps a dominion status would solve that problem. Statehood would probably have its difficulties."

JACKSON, MISS. — Mississippi will be represented in the Seventy-sixth Congress by the same House delegation that handled its national affairs for the past two years.

Voters in a Democratic primary yesterday gave substantial majorities to six of the seven incumbents. The seventh was unopposed for renomination.

Balloting was light, due to lack of national issues. The New Deal was not involved. Total vote for the State was not expected to exceed 125,000.

DOVER, DEL.—William F. Allen, of Sussex County, Delaware's only Representative, will head the State Democratic ticket in a bid for re-election in November.

Allen was renominated yesterday by the Democratic State convention which also named a slate of candidates for State offices and produced indications that Josiah Marvel, jr., of Christiana Hundred, would contnue as State chairman.

NINETY-SIX, S. C.: The word of Joseph H. (Tieless Joe) Tolbert is:

"I don't want to monkey with anybody else's primary."

Of the letter written by James W. Arnold, of Athens, Ga., asking Republicans to support Senator George against Lawrence Camp, who bears the indorsement of President Roosevelt, Tolbert said, "Jim was just hot-headed. That letter will do George more harm than good."

Action on Bridges Asked by Veterans

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 24 (AP).—The thirty-ninth annual encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars urged today prompt disposition of the case of Harry Bridges, Pacific Coast C.I.O. leader accused of fomenting strikes and conspiracy to cripple the United States Merchant Marine, and advocated deportation of the labor figure if he were convicted.

The encampment rejected resolutions calling for withdrawal of diplomatic relations with Russia and a boycott against Japanese goods, but resolved to continue opposition to "subversive forces."

Park Films Show Virgin Islands Life

Motion pictures of the Virgin Islands and of life among the Navajo Indians will feature the National Capital Parks weekly amphitheater program in Fort Bunker Hill Park tonight. The program will begin at 8 o'clock.

Tomorrow night, at the same time, Dr. Frank Thone, biological editor of Science Service, will address a campfire gathering in Pierce Mill picnic grove, Rock Creek Park. If the weather is inclement, the program will be held in the auditorium of the North Interior Building at 8:30.

The parks office also announced two events for Sunday, a bird walk through Montrose Park from 7 to 8:30 a. m., and a tree and flower walk between 2:30 and 4:30 p. m., on a trail along Difficult Run, Va. George A. Petrides will conduct the morning walk, which will begin at the Thirtieth and R streets entrance to the park.

A week-end boat and bus trip to and through the Colonial National Historic Park at Williamsburg, Va., including Yorktown and Jamestown, will be sponsored by the parks office September 10-12. Further information on this and the other events may be obtained by writing or telephoning the office of National Capitol Parks.

Election Opponent Gets Absent Governor's Job

Lincoln, Nebr., Aug. 24 (AP).—Gov. R. L. Cochran, Democrat, is scheduled to go to Oklahoma City September 26. When he leaves Nebraska the powers and duties of acting governor will go to Charles Warner, speaker of the unicameral legislature and Republican nominee to oppose Cochran in the November gubernatorial election.

U. S. July Income Is First to Improve Over 1937 Figures

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Roper said yesterday that, on a seasonal basis, national income improved in July for the first month in a year.

The total of wages, dividends, rents and other sources of national income was slightly lower in July than in June, but did not go down by the usual seasonal amount, he explained. The seasonally adjusted index of income rose from 78.3 per cent of the 1929 level in June to 79.1 per cent in July.

He estimated that the national income in the first seven months of the year was approximately $35,300,000,000, compared with $39,000,000,000 in the similar period of last year. Statisticians who prepared the figures said, however, they could not say yet whether the July improvement indicated that 1938 national income would be much higher than $60,000,000,000 predicted earlier in the year.

Lewis Urges Peace for U. A. W. Before Auto-Making Hits Peak

By the Associated Press.

John L. Lewis, striving doggedly to avert a permanent split in the United Automobile Workers Union, advanced a series of peace proposals yesterday to factions warring over leadership of this once fastest-growing C. I. O. affiliate.

The C. I. O. chairman talked more than five hours with Homer Martin, U. A. W. president, about a possible settlement and then called in an opposing faction, headed by three expelled union vice presidents.

The nature of Lewis' suggestions were not disclosed, but it was learned he urged upon both sides the necessity of solving the union's difficulties before automobile production reaches a peak in a few weeks and harmonious leadership becomes imperative.

Martin left late in the day for Baltimore to address union members on the eve of a National Labor Board election in the Glenn Martin airplane plants. He said the parleys would be resumed tonight.

The U. A. W. has been embroiled in a factional dispute for months over leadership and policies. Last June 12, four anti-Martin officers were suspended for alleged disruptive tactics. Martin charged some with communistic connections. Three vice presidents subsequently were expelled.

Farnsworth Plea Denied by Court

New Orleans, Aug. 24 (AP).—The United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals today denied a rehearing for John Semar Farnsworth, former United States Naval officer, convicted of espionage charges in Washington, D. C.

Farnsworth was sentenced February 26, 1937, in the District of Columbia Federal Court in connection with an alleged conspiracy to turn over code books and writings revealing national defense of the United States to two foreign attaches.

The Circuit Court recently affirmed the lower court's dismissal of Farnsworth's application for a writ of habeas corpus, and rehearing was sought primarily on the grounds the original indictment was defective.

PWA Has Projects Worth 152 Million Being Constructed

By the Associated Press.

The Public Works Administration announced yesterday that construction had begun on $152,794,000 worth of Federal projects.

The Administration also approved 33 new non-Federal projects.

To date allotments for Federal projects amount to $196,840,871. The act authorizes $200,000,000 of construction. Projects now are in operation in every State and remaining funds for Federal works probably will be used for expansions, officials said.

Today's list of non-Federals called for $2,904,678 of construction toward which PWA made grants of $1,307,101 and loans of $89,000.

Party Committee Gives Vermonters Vote Tips

Vermont residents who have registered in person for the primary election September 13 may vote by mail, the Democratic National Committee explained yesterday. Absentee ballots must be secured from the town clerk of their place of legal residence. All persons are qualified to vote this year who have voted every general election year since their initial registration.

The Vermont unit of the Democratic Absentee Voters Bureau, 1406 G street northwest, can supply application blanks for absentee ballots for both primary and general elections.

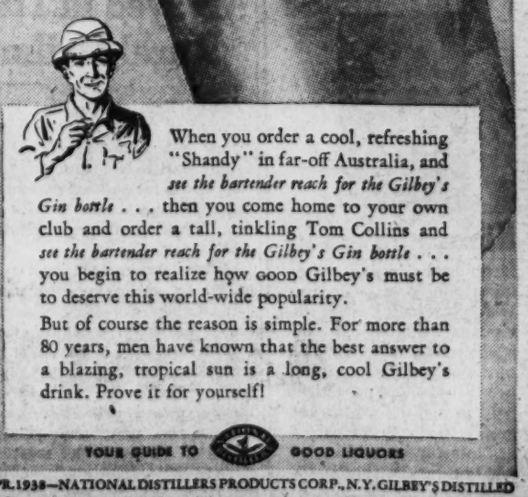
The World's Cool Drinks begin with GILBEY'S GIN



When you order a cool, refreshing "Shandy" in far-off Australia, and see the bartender reach for the Gilbey's Gin bottle . . . then you come home to your own club and order a tall, tinkling Tom Collins and see the bartender reach for the Gilbey's Gin bottle . . . you begin to realize how good Gilbey's must be to deserve this world-wide popularity.

But of course the reason is simple. For more than 80 years, men have known that the best answer to a blazing, tropical sun is a long, cool Gilbey's drink. Prove it for yourself!

Woman Plucks Her Eye Out on Reading Bible

Believer Also Lops Off Hand as Family Prays in California Home.

By the United Press.

Merced, Calif., Aug. 24.—Mrs. Ola Irene Harwell, a gaunt-faced religious fanatic from Oklahoma, who took literally the Biblical admonition, "If thine eye offend thee, pluck it out," tonight had only one eye and one hand, but she said her soul was "clean."

Lying on a hospital cot while a group of amazed physicians watched her fight for recovery, the woman stared calmly at them with her remaining eye and pronounced her self-maiming a "spiritual" success.

Matthew XVIII, 8, 9.

Mrs. Harwell had been reading the Bible during the nightly family prayer meeting, when she came to a passage in the Book of Matthew, Chapter 18, verses 8 and 9, which said:

"Therefore, if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off and cast them from thee; it is better for thee to enter life halt or maimed than having two hands or feet to cast into everlasting fire.

"And if thine eye offend thee pluck it out and cast it from thee; it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire."

Mrs. Harwell glanced up from the Bible, and told her husband and children without raising her voice that her eye and hand had "sinned." She left the cabin and got the hatchet from the woodshed.

Cuts Out Eyeball.

Then, with blood streaming down her cheeks, she laid her left arm on a concrete block and wielding the hatchet with her right hand, struck three blows at her wrist.

Then she walked calmly back into the room and finished the prayer meeting. Her husband went to the home of a neighbor, who called a Pentecostal preacher. The woman was taken to a hospital where physicians finished the removal of her slashed eye and completed the surgery on her arm.

Harwell was held by police on an open charge, pending Mrs. Harwell's recovery or death.

Cleveland Slum Combed for Clew To Torso Killer

Cleveland, Aug. 24 (U.P.)—Police, tracing the history of a tattered quilt, tonight concentrated on investigating the city's toughest slum section—the "roaring third" police precinct—where they were convinced the "mad butcher of Kingsbury run" has his torso-murder "laboratory."

Detectives jailed six employes of a rag and paper company who were the last known handlers of the ragged quilt, presumably before the sex-crazed butcherer of 13 men and women obtained it to wrap parts of his latest victim, found eight days ago in a water-front dump.

The ramshackle homes of the six were searched in an effort to find a new and stronger clew to add to the quilt. The search was fruitless, however, and police pressed their hunt to other dwellings throughout the area, positive that their trail was the hottest in the mysterious case's four-year history.

2 Workmen Hurt Seriously in Falls

Two workmen were seriously injured in falls here yesterday.

Losing his balance while at work on the Mellon Art Gallery, Hugo H. Schmidt, 39, of 4930 Canal road northwest, plunged 30 feet and sustained a fractured right leg, a possible fracture of his skull, internal injuries and cuts and bruises.

Schmidt, an employe of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, was taken to Emergency Hospital, where physicians held little hope for his recovery.

Virgil Robinson, 24, colored butler, of the 1200 block of T street northwest, was hurt about the spine, neck and body when he fell from the first floor of a house at which he works at 3011 Gates road northwest. He also was taken to Emergency Hospital.

Motorman Guilty Of Recklessness

For the second time in the history of the District, a street car motorman was convicted yesterday of reckless driving and ordered to pay a $100 fine or serve 30 days in jail. Judge Walter Casey imposed the sentence.

The defendant, Howard P. Dillon, 25, 500 block of Eighth street northwest, was operating a street car that ran into the rear of an auto in the 1300 block of New Jersey avenue northwest on June 1. The driver of the car, Harry W. Brown, 46, 215 Fourteenth street northwest, said his car was not in motion at the time of the accident and had been at a standstill for at least a minute before the crash.

Taxi Union to Discuss Insurance Firm Tonight

50 Firemen Join First Aid Course

More than 50 District firemen have enrolled in the first of four courses in First Aid instruction to be given by the District chapter of the Red Cross during the next 40 days, Gordon O. Stone, director of first aid and life saving of the District unit, announced yesterday.

The lessons began last Monday at 1730 E street northwest, and are given annually to selected members of the Fire Department. The course, Stone pointed out, has the indorsement of Chief Engineer Charles E. Schrom.

Boy, 2, Hurt by Wringer.

Two-year-old John Robert Kane, 2443 Fortieth place northwest, received minor injuries yesterday when he caught his hand in the wringer of his mother's washing machine. He was treated by Dr. James Whisman of 2400 Thirty-ninth street northwest, for bruises.

13 Feared Dead As Japan Fliers Strafe Airliner

By the United Press.

Hongkong (Thursday), Aug. 25.—The U. S. gunboat Mindanao arrived today with Hugh L. Woods, of Winfield, Kans., pilot of a Chinese airliner which was forced down by Japanese planes, reportedly with loss of 13 lives.

Woods said at least several of his 17 passengers were killed when the Japanese planes machine-gunned them as they struggled to reach shore after the airliner was forced down in the Pearl River near Canton.

It was announced officially that 13 of the 17 Chinese passengers were dead or missing.

Machine-gunned Passengers.

Woods denied the Japanese shot at the airliner while it was still flying, saying they merely powerdived to force it down.

He said, however, that they swooped low and loosed concentrated machine-gun fire on the passengers after the plane landed and they were trying to reach shore.

Offices of the Chinese National Aviation Corporation—which owned the plane—said in announcing the disaster here that five Japanese planes converged on the big airliner and opened up with machine guns, causing the pilot to lose control. The plane then crashed into the river, its riddled fuselage resting in shallow water with the tail sticking in the air.

Woods said he was instructed by the corporation not to make any statement.

Although the United States Pan American Airways owns 45 per cent of the stock in the corporation, it does not direct operations, and no American protest or claim for damages was expected.

Tried to Out-Fly Them.

Woods said he picked up the Japanese naval planes soon after leaving Hongkong early yesterday and he attempted to out-fly them. The Japanese overtook him near Wangmoon, however, and dived on him repeatedly. The pilot managed to bring his plane down in the river 10 miles east of Shekki but the Japanese continued bursts of machine gun fire and struck down passengers and crew as they attempted to wade ashore.

It was believed the Japanese hoped to kill or capture Sun Fo, high official of the Chinese government, who had just returned from Moscow after negotiating limited Soviet Russian military assistance for China. Sun, however, had not taken the plane.

33 Are Indicted By Grand Jury

Eleven charges of housebreaking and larceny were reported against John E. Perry, 22-year-old colored youth, when the District grand jury made a formal report to Justice F. Dickinson Letts in District Court yesterday.

Perry is said to have burglarized the homes of several wealthy colored persons in the upper northwest section of the city, stealing such items as pens, watches and jewelry.

In all, the grand jury returned 33 indictments:

Indicted in Death of Neglected Boy

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

Instead of taking her 9-year-old boy to a hospital when he suffered acute appendicitis, Mrs. Lillian McKenzie Volstad (left) called in Wilbur Alvis (right), a self-ordained minister of the Apostolic Church in Los Angeles, to heal the boy by prayer. The boy died four days later. Following testimony of physicians, the pair was indicted for manslaughter.

Thieves Get Everything From Socks to Radio

Burglars visited a secondhand store at 1916 Fourteenth street northwest early yesterday and took just about everything in the store but the fixings. Reported missing were a dozen suits, a radio, four suitcases, 15 dozen pairs of men's socks, three dozen neckties and 12 pairs of shoes.

Using the suitcases to carry their loot, the burglars also carried away about 15 watches, a dozen rings, seven watch chains, an assortment of jewelry trinkets and men's traveling kits. Abraham Solomon, proprietor of the store, told police it was the second time in six months his place had been robbed.

Held as 'Pants' Burglar, Man to Face Grand Jury

George H. Garner, colored, 24, of the 4000 block of Neal street northeast, alleged to be the "pants" burglar responsible for a $500 series of thefts here, was held for a grand jury under $3,000 bond yesterday when he appeared in Police Court on a charge of housebreaking.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Homecoming Spans 35 Years Of Garfield Fun

Back to the scenes of youth on a sunny summer afternoon came 400 playmates of other years yesterday.

They were the alumni and alumnae of Garfield Playground, attending the third annual homecoming.

Across the baseball diamond they dashed with the vigor of sandlot kids. High up in swings like Miss "Pigtails" of younger days they travelled. One or two skipped rope. They devoured "snowballs" with the gusto of children, inquired about old friends who hadn't appeared, and recalled every era in the more than 35-year-history of the playground.

Mothers who learned their games there came with daughters now growing fast in the same environment, much modernized. Three generations sat on the wall and chatted. Shouts and gayety drowned out the roar of the trains that now and again thundered along the underpass toward the river.

"Hello, Miss Susie," they said in many differently pitched voices to Mrs. Evelyn Sheridan, director of the playground, who originated the homecoming. Most of them had played there under other teachers, and the "Miss Susie," who is not "Miss Susie" at all is youngish and enthusiastic.

Old John White, retired and 80, whose three sons grew up on the playground, was there with the boys—Jim, 34, and a District fireman; Phil and Ollie.

The White boys, who have families of their own now, remembered days before the war, when the old playground, for which their father fought, saw historic changes. They recalled the horses and the buggies and the carriages that were the principal menaces to life and limb in the street, although always the trains rumbled by.

The boys went off to war, but they never forgot the lessons on the playground, even when they were in France and used to write "Dad" every time they could. They were glad of the homecoming which Mrs. Sheridan initiated. They never have missed one and never will.

Out on the diamond two clergymen played on the same team with merchants from the neighborhood, and on the other side, several policemen fielded and batted like boys.

When it was all over until next year, the "boys" and "girls" filed by "Miss Susie."

"It was grand," they said. "Goodbye, Miss Susie."

Then they went home into Southeast Washington, tired and sunburned and filled with happy memories of youth recaptured.

'Grads' Flock to Garfield Playground for Homecoming

$30 in Death Car May Cause a New Landis Court Row

The $30 found in the blood bespattered automobile of a convicted wife slayer became the issue in a prospective court fight yesterday.

Mrs. Sadie Beckert, mother of Mrs. Grace Blanche Landis, fatally beaten by her husband, former "rookie" firemen, James L. Landis, yesterday obtained a court order requiring the property clerk of the Police Department to show cause why he should not surrender the money to her as administratrix of her daughter's estate. Landis is now serving a life term in Leavenworth Penitentiary for the crime.

Police found the money in the car shortly after they broke down Landis' alibi that he never left his fire post and was on duty when his dying wife was found last May.

Attorney Jean M. Boardman, who represented Landis at the trial, said the money belonged to his client and that he would intervene.

Error by Typist Costs State $20,000

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 24 (AP).—A typist's error apparently will cost the State of Mississippi $20,000.

The Legislature appropriated that sum to put out a gas well fire and fixed a 10 per cent tax on other wells from August 31 through March 31 to reimburse the State.

In the bill, it was discovered yesterday, the dates were typed August 31, 1939, to March 31, 1939, ending the tax before it starts.

Maritime Board Voids Agreement Of 2 Pacific Lines

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission voided yesterday an agreement which it said was "restricting competition" between the Matson and Dollar Steamship lines in the Pacific trade.

It said the agreement was "detrimental to the commerce of the United States," but that the companies might file a new compact consistent with this decision.

Under the agreement, which was for a ten-year period, Matson contracted not to engage in service between the mainland of the United States and Asia, the Philippines or Guam, with specific exceptions. Dollar agreed not to solicit Hawaiian traffic or act for any line except Matson in this service. The contract called for Dollar to pay Matson 50 per cent of gross receipts from Hawaiian business which came to it unsolicited.

Wallace Denies Farms Are Back To 1932 Level

cluding Federal benefit payments, at $7,500,000,000, against $4,328,000,000 in 1932.

"The situation that exists is no particular surprise to me," he said. "I've been predicting it for several years . . . I predicted real grief unless something was done. Those things were done belatedly. It may be necessary to do still further things; I don't know."

He said that while "the situation is not back to 1932 in any sense," the country conceivably might experience a combination of weather and bad business conditions over a series of years "that would put us back."

Recalls Problems.

Wallace said he told the American Farm Bureau Federation in 1935 that the "real problem of agriculture was to move its great surpluses to market. Again in June, 1937, he said he told the Senate Agriculture Committee, that with a year or two of ordinary weather, and lacking "unexpected foreign demand," the committee might be faced with a "disquieting" situation.

He said a Senator protested he was unjustified in saying conditions could go back to "abnormal" 1932 or 1933, and he replied: "Senator, the same situation which produced 1932, may perhaps in some measure still be with us." He said he referred to failure to recognize the ultimate sudden stoppage of foreign demand.

Wallace declined to name the newspapers he said carried stories that farm conditions were "back to 1932" because he said it was "probably accidental" and "certain news boils to the surface." But he said any paper giving publicity to such information indicated "hatred may overcome desire for gain."

Wants to "Meet Facts."

Twice he reiterated: "It is conceivable that if we don't meet the facts of business and weather we can go back to 1932."

Wallace announced he may have something to disclose on his projected subsidized export of 100,000,000 bushels of American wheat, in co-operation with Canada, later this week.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King announced in Ottawa that a delegate from the United States Agricultural Department would confer with Canadian agriculture officials today on wheat marketing and other farm problems, Associated Press dispatches said.

Wallace told reporters here he would discuss his own attitude toward co-operative wheat exports with Canada in a speech Saturday before the International Conference of Agricultural Economists at Montreal.

The Secretary denied reports he was at odds with the State Department on the proposed subsidized wheat exports, because of conflict with Secretary Hull's reciprocal trade program.

"This department," he said, "and the State Department are as usual in complete harmony. You will find a basis for complete harmony in my Canadian speech."

He said the subsidy program contemplated only that "under an emergency situation we may temporarily apply specific methods for the time being. Of course, if applied in any broad fashion over a long period of time, it might bring grave embarrassment."

Canada already had worked out a subsidy arrangement for its own farmers, when Wallace announced last week he would seek to work out a co-operative program. He said yesterday he was very anxious "to be in complete harmony with Canada;" that while Canada naturally sought to move as much of its own wheat as possible "we think she will see our position and be willing to co-operate."

Hines Gives Lie as Gangster Tells of $30,000 Paid to Elect Dodge Prosecutor Over Pecora

Hines

To the allegation in Weinberg's testimony of Tuesday that Hines "fixed" a case against Schultz's policy mob by a word to Magistrate Hulon Capshaw at a District Club "beefsteak" the magistrate answered today:

"There is not a word of truth in any statement that I ever had any conversation with the defendant Hines about the case referred to or any other case which came before me as a magistrate."

Names Dixie Davis.

In Weinberg's testimony, this morning, concerning the gifts of the Schultz gang to the Dodge campaign in 1933, he named himself and J. Richard "Dixie" Davis, counsel for the mob, as the men who paid Hines, and said his own payments were never less than $2,000 and never more than $3,000. The payments continued until shortly after the election, he said, when Hines told the gang he needed another $2,000 or $3,000 to clear up campaign expenses. He said he gave Hines money five or six times during the campaign, and then told "Big Harry" Schoenhaus, another gangster, who kept books for the mob, instructions to apportion the contributions among the policy bankers of Harlem, each in accordance with the size of his business.

This afternoon, Weinberg told of driving Hines to Bridgeport, Conn., to meet Schultz. With the policy racket all shot to pieces because Schultz was not around to "strong-arm," the "Dutchman" was trying to affect economies. He had to cut Hines' pay, Weinberg said.

At Schultz's behest, according to the gangster, he and Davis went to Hines' home, and drove him up into Connecticut. There was a conference in the Hotel Barnum, in Bridgeport, in which Schultz explained to Hines, he said, that "his case was pretty expensive," and "things were pretty tough." He told the Tammany leader, according to Weinberg, that he would have to cut down on protection payments, and Hines took the cut without demur.

Thereafter the payments were only at the rate of $250 a week through 1936, he said, given to Hines in sums of $1,000 or more from time to time.

He said he paid Hines seven or eight times in 1936, and the only answer he recalled on the stand as coming from the Tammany leader to his "see you again," was "How long will it be?"

It was in 1933, Weinberg said, that he talked to Schultz about the coming municipal election. "The Dutchman" was then a fugitive from Federal authorities. Schultz said the witness ordered him and everybody else in the gang to "help Jimmie Hines," and to "give him all the money needed."

The name of Dodge was not mentioned at that conference, he said, but a week later Davis told him Schultz's orders were to use all the money possible to "help Hines elect Dodge."

Schultz, Weinberg said, bade the mob concentrate its efforts on electing Dodge. It was Schultz's political judgment, later proved accurate, that "Dodge might have some chance to win," whereas the mayoralty candidate, Mayor John P. O'Brien, might not, against Mayor LaGuardia.

He told of giving Hines $3,000 and $2,000; said Davis gave Hines money on numerous occasions. At the time, he testified, he was accustomed to carry between $3,000 and $5,000 in his pockets at all times.

Credited to "Combination."

He told Harry Schoenhaus the amounts given to Hines, he said, and Schoenhaus had the amounts credited on the books of the "combination," dividing its among the expenses of the larger policy bankers. Among these contributors, he said, were "Big Joe" Ison, Alexander Pompez, Schoenhaus, the Maloney brothers, Elmer and Eddie, and Marcial Florez.

Deviating from his story of political intrigue, Weinberg related trouble the "combination" had with Pompez and Ison in 1934, when the two policy bankers had been hit and came down on Schultz for money with which to pay their losses. The two bankers claimed there ought to be ample money in the "bank roll" to pay all winners, since profits then stood at about $100,0000. The sum in the bank vault to which Weinberg and Schoenhaus had the key, however, was down to between $10,000 and $20,000 at the moment, because of heavy "borrowings" by Schultz.

Schultz started tapping the "bankroll" heavily in the spring of 1935, Weinberg said, taking $25,000 one time, in excess of the $4,000 weekly which was to have been his share in the "combination" revenues. By March, 1934, he had "borrowed" $275,000.

Pompez and Ison said they could not remain in business unless Schultz paid off winners, and when Weinberg told them Schultz had taken the money they countered that they couldn't collect from Schultz. Weinberg went to the fugitive and, according to his testimony, offered to try to help Pompez personally but Schultz advised him to let both bankers quit the "combination." Schultz told Weinberg to take all the business away from them he could, and bank on his own, promising that when he got through with his troubles with the Federal Government he would get both Pompez and Ison back into the fold.

The witness said he started policy banking then, on his own, taking a few of Ison's and Pompez's controllers, and using a capital of between $5,000 and $6,000.

Mailmen Don Sunday Best to Cheer Wallace

Letter

changed reminiscences of rural letter carrying, and cheered when their State songs were played.

Each delegation stood as the orchestra played its State song. When "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here" came along, the delegates refrained from saying "the naughty word," supplanting it with "h e c k," mumbled half-ashamedly in the presence of the ladies.

When the orchestra struck up "Jingle Bells," the delegates from the States far north, who sometimes use sleighs in their winter rounds, applauded.

The important question of the site of the 1939 convention, the association's thirty-sixth, will be taken up at this morning's business session in Constitution Hall. Nominations are expected in behalf of Chicago, Cincinnati, St. Paul and Portland, Oreg.

The final vote will be taken tomorrow, when next year's officers will be elected and installed.

Another event of interest today will be an address by Superintendant J. Ed Cooper, of the Postoffice Department's rural mail division. Cooper, a former president of the National Rural Letter Carriers Association, is looked on as "one of the boys," since he was elevated to his present position directly from a rural mail route.

The 26 States whose carriers have achieved 100 per cent membership in the association will be awarded loving cups this morning, and the 'mileage and per diem" committee will report on ground covered by carriers since the last convention.

This afternoon the group will take a boat trip down the Potomac, with Walter Johnson and Representative Thomas G. Burch, of the House Postoffice Committee, as guests of honor. Johnson will autograph baseballs.

Letter carriers talk shop as much as anyone else, according to C. C. McDevitt, of Washington, editor of the National Rural Letter Carrier, but they can do more about it than most people because of what is known as the 'mutual exchange" system.

When two convention delegates put their heads together in the Mayflower lobby, the chances are that they are discussing a prospective "swap." One of the two may want to move West for his health while the other would like to come East to be near his children.

So they decide to exchange routes. All that is needed is the consent of their respective postmasters. The Postoffice Department has never objected to the procedure, McDevitt says. He carries numerous requests for "swaps" in his magazine.

G.O.P. Chief Sees Big Gain in House

Three Youths Arrested In Gaithersburg Thefts

A series of barnyard thefts in the Gaithersburg area were believed solved by Montgomery County police yesterday with the arrest of three youths, ranging in age from 14 to 19, on charges of larceny.

Over a period of several weeks, farmers around Gaithersburg have lost by theft seven calves, four sheep and a number of laying hens.

Maritime Commission Issuing School Blanks

By the Associated Press.

The Maritime Commission began distributing blanks yesterday for enrollment in its seamen's training schools. Enrollment for the present will be confined to unemployed men of the merchant service. Officials said, however, they hoped at least 3,000 men and 300 officers eventually may receive training each year.

Notable Films Are Scheduled For Next Week

New Pictures and Revivals Head List of Diversions Indoors and Out.

"Alexander's Ragtime Band," unwinding an interesting and amusing romantic story and a "cavalcade of Irving Berlin songs"—there are 26 of them woven into the plot—will be the attraction at Loew's Palace Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In this superlative entertainment, the principal roles are played and sung by Alice Faye, Tyrone Power and Don Ameche, supported by Ethel Merman, Jack Haley, Jean Hersholt, Helen Westley, John Carradine, Paul Hurst, Wally Vernon, Ruth Terry, Douglas Fowley, Chick Chandler, Eddie Collins and many more. The picture was directed by Henry King in his best manner. The bill will be completed by assorted short subjects.

James Cagney, Pat O'Brien and Marie Wilson are cast in the stellar roles of the Warner Brothers' picturization of Bella and Samuel Spewack's stage hit of "Boy Meets Girl," which the authors themselves adapted to the screen with amplified comic effect. It is one of the most hilarious film farces of the season, with Ralph Bellamy, Frank McHugh and Dick Foran also in the cast. On the stage, Tony Martin and his orchestra and specialists will provide the headline entertainment of the new Earle bill, opening tomorrow. Featured with the band are Lola Jensen, song stylist; Beau Lee, comic singer, and Homer Rhodes, guitarist. The Honeys, dancers and acrobats, and Al Bernie complete the vaudeville bill.

The week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Capitol Theater will be featured by first Washington presentations of Paramount's epic of the Southwest, "The Texans," in which the foremost roles are played by Randolph Scott and Joan Bennett, supported by May Robson, Walter Brennan and a huge cast. The story is a rousing, semihistorical romance of the rough days when the West was in the building. The stage program for the new week will be furnished by George Hall and his orchestra, featuring Dolly Dawn, one of the most popular singers of stage and radio. The Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's orchestral contribution will augment the entertainment.

Announced as the first of Jane Withers' new series of major pictures, "Keep Smiling" will open on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater tomorrow for a week's engagement. Gloria Stuart, Henry Wilcoxon, Helen Westley, Jed Prouty, Douglas Fowley and Robert Allen appear in the principal supporting roles. An added attraction will be the first installment of the new action-serial, "Dick Tracy Returns," with Ralph Byrd in the role of the famous G-man of the newspaper strips. Short reels will complete the bill.

"The March of Time," devoting its footage to two important subjects—"The Man at the Wheel" and "Threat to Gibraltar"—a sport short, "Bit and Bridle," and a "Merrie Melodie" cartoon comedy will comprise the short-reel features of the bill opening tomorrow at the Trans-Lux Theater. Newsreel coverage of the world, as usual, will form the basis of the program.

"Mayerling," the most notable of the foreign-made pictures to be released in America in many months, will be revived at the Little Theater for the week beginning Sunday. The co-stellar roles are played by Charles Boyer and Danielle Darrieux, supported by a distinguished cast of European artists. The story concerns the mystery surrounding the life of a Hapsburg crown prince.

The new Mount Vernon open air, automobile theater announces Shirley Temple in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" as chief feature of the bill beginning tonight and continuing through Saturday. The feature will be supplemented by selected short-reels and will be shown at 7:55 and 10 p. m., with the last complete show starting at 9:20.

As an all-day and evening attraction, the Crystal Pool is leading in late August popularity among the 50-odd amusements provided at Glen Echo Park, free-admission amusement center. With Dave McWilliams music continuing in high favor, the Spanish Garden Ballroom is crowded nightly. The various other amusements are running at top speed, these perfect late-summer days.

A favorite play and a favorite actress are the lures held out by the Olney Theater for next week, when the new summer theater will offer Adelaide Hibbard in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" for a week's engagement, beginning next Monday night. Mrs. Hibbard will be supported by an admirable cast. Matinees will be given on Thursday and Saturday at 2:45 o'clock, with night performances at 8:40.

Sammy Kaye and his "swing and sway" orchestra will be in town this week-end for four moonlight cruises down the river on the S. S. Potomac. Two cruises will be made on Friday night, at 8:30 p. m. and 12:30 a. m., with the same schedule prevailing on Saturday night. This is an extraordinary opportunity for Washingtonians to dance afloat to the music of one of the best of the contemporary bands.

At the Cross Roads Theater next week, beginning Monday night, Arch McDonald will be starred in "The Old Soak," abandoned after one performance earlier in the season owing to an accident to Mr. McDonald. This production will mark the close of the Cross Roads' current season. The supporting cast will be one of the hayloft theater's strongest.

"Alabama," Augustus Thomas' drama of the South shortly after the close of the War Between the States, will continue for a second week at the Roadside Theater, beginning next Monday night. Anne Ives and George Farrington head a numerous and competent cast.

The Wilson Line steamer, City of Washington, continues its regular schedule of daily trips to Mount Vernon and Marshall Hall and moonlight cruises down the Potomac, with long passenger lists at every sailing. Dance music is provided nightly by Russ Cullen and his orchestra.

Current First-Run Film Plays Are Included in Quiz Contest

Several of the 94 Entries in $250,000 Prize Competition Now on Local Screens; Lust's Civic Enterprises; Conductors to Entertain; Theater Notes.

REQUESTS for information as to the details of the $250,000 Movie Quiz Contest have flooded theater managers all over the country since announcement was made through the trade press of the industry's new substitute for the time-honored, old promotional scheme of the "Greater Movie Season" campaigns in vogue in earlier years. Most frequently asked are questions pertaining to productions now being presented in various first-run houses, but concerning which prospective contestants for the important cash prizes have no information beyond the statement that they will be included in the contest.

BELL.

Since the Movie Quiz Booklets—there will be literally millions of them distributed—with complete information regarding the conduct of the competition and the full list of questions to be answered, will not be available for distribution by theaters until September 1, John J. Payette, chairman of the Washington Committee for the "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entainment" campaign, has clarified the situation as follows:

"Many of the photoplays appearing in the downtown theaters this week, as well as those opening tomorrow, are part of the $250,000 Movie Quiz Contest. While the Quiz questions about each of these attractions will not be available for contestants until next Thursday, the national committee assures us that a contestant who sees a 'Movie Quiz Picture' now should have no difficulty whatever in recalling the scene or situation about which he will be quizzed."

Among the current pictures included in the contest are "Letter of Introduction," "The Crowd Roars," "Boy Meets Girl," "Carefree," "The Texans," "The Amazing Dr. Clitterhouse," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Give Me a Sailor" and "Keep Smiling," each of which already has been on view in Washington, or will be next week.

There will be no charge for the Movie Quiz Booklets, which will be obtainable at any Washington theater starting September 1. In all, 94 pictures will be included in the contest, with entrants required to answer questions on any 30 of the 94 productions.

First prize will be $50,000, with 4,999 other prizes to be awarded. The capital prize winner will enjoy a "take" equivalent to that of the holder of a ticket on the "show" horse in the Irish Sweepstakes—and so, of course, will the income tax collector!

Anyhow, it seems to be worth shooting at.

Speaking of winnings, Master Ray (Twinkletoes) Bell—no relation—in charge of advertising and publicity for the loewcal Loew organization, has just pulled himself down another first award of $500 for the best campaign on Walter Wanger's production of "Blockade," in a national competition in which there were several thousand entries. This is the third major prize "Speedy" has won in the past few years, the first having been a trip to Europe for his work on David O. Selznick's production of "The Garden of Allah;" the second, Samuel Goldwyn's 500 smackers for the "Stella Dallas" business. In the meantime, he has knocked down enough plaques, certificates of excellence and whatnot to papier-mache his house. "Conglomerations" is what I always say—and how's about the loan of a couple of quarters to harvest a small crop of lemons?

Sidney B. Lust, veteran motion picture distributor and exhibitor, has gone civic in a big way. Not one, but three, items of community interest now are engaging Mr. Lust's earnest attention.

On September 12, returns of the balloting in Maryland's red hot primary campaigns will be read from the stages of Mr. Lust's Boro Theater in Bethesda, Arcade, in Hyattsville; Milo, in Rockville; Marlboro, in Upper Marlboro, and Cameo, in Mount Rainier.

As a contribution to the safety campaign being waged in and around Washington, Sid is throwing open the big parking lot adjacent to the Boro Theater, in Bethesda, as a daytime playground for children, to keep them off the streets and highways when traffic is heavy.

Another tug at neighborhood interest will be exerted by the organization of a football league, embracing communities in which there are Lust picture houses. Bill Jobs, former high school gridiron star, has been retained as manager of this sports branch of the Lust enterprises. If this idea catches on as it is expected to, a league football field will be established on vacant property adjoining the Boro, in Bethesda.

In the meantime, Mr. Lust would appreciate modest contributions of red clay and straw from his constituents, so that he may occupy his spare time making bricks.

There being too much misapprehension in the matter, the new Mount Vernon automobile theater, on the Richmond highway below Alexandria, Va., wishes to stress the fact that it operates seven nights a week. Because it opened on Monday, the erroneous impression has got abroad that there will be no Sabbath picture showings in the motor car airdome. On the contrary, there will be. A new bill will be inaugurated at the Mount Vernon each Sunday and Thursday night.

These orchestra leaders are social fellows.

On Friday night George Hall, conductor of the stage band headlining the bill at Loew's Capitol Theater, beginning tomorrow, will host a party in the Variety clubrooms in the Willard Hotel, assisted by Dolly Dawn, his prize canary, and Eddie Sherwood, former vaudevillian and Washington filmster, who broke into show business as a youthful singing protege of Percy Wenrich and Dolly Connelly.

Comes a cordial note also from Sammy Kaye, the "swing and sway" man, to be his guest on one of the four moonlight cruises aboard the S. S. Potomac, when he comes to town to tip the moonlight excursion business up on end with his music Friday and Saturday nights of this week. Okay, provided the good ship Potomac doesn't contract that "swing and sway" contagion. This desk was never cut out to be a sailor on anything rougher than a piece of plate glass.

Owing to "mechanical difficulties," it is a possibility that the new play by Anne Grosvenor Ayres and Frances Reynolds, daughter of the Senator from North Carolina, may not be able to undergo a pre-Broadway test of merit at the Olney Theater this season. Scheduled for next week, it has been supplanted, for the time being, by "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," with the beloved Adelaide Hibbard in the stellar role.

Rounding-Into-the-Stretch Note.

Come on, you Hains Point!

'Carefree' Is Laugh Carnival On the Screen at RKO-Keith's

By Nelson B. Bell

"Carefree" is precisely that—a rollicking, tuneful, happy-go-lucky comedy, with too few songs and not quite enough dancing to satisfy the Astaire-Rogers "fans," but with such a lively combination of pungent ingredients that, like Mercutio's wound, 'twill serve.

The story is a novel one, as such things go on the screen, although those with long and retentive memories will perceive in some of the applications of mechanical hypnosis and psychiatric "science" a farcical-ized recrudescence of certain of the dramatic elements in David Belasco's production of "The Case of Becky," in which Frances Starr was presented many years ago. A young socialite practitioner of psycho-analysis undertakes to aid a friend by dissecting the peculiar mental quirks of a lovely young woman who cannot make up her mind that she wants to marry him. In delving around in her "subconscious," through the medium of dreams which he induces by a late-supper diet that would kill a horse, Tony, the tony doctor, discovers that his patient has fallen in love with him, instead of with her persistent suitor of many years. This is a knotty problem which he endeavors to solve with the assistance of his power as a mesmerist.

Out of this preliminary situation—which, by the way, is arrived at a little tardily—the authors have derived a series of hilarious "gag" sequences that progress something after the manner of a Harold Lloyd or a Marx Brothers comedy. In all of these, it is Ginger Rogers who is the comic bit of the show. Her devilish desire to smash a large plate-glass window, being trucked through busy downtown streets—an ambition that is finally realized—her wild rampage with loaded shotguns on the skeet shooting range and the incidents of the wedding climax, in which she accumulates a very elegant "shiner," are high points in the picture's fun.

The dancing honors, of course, go primarily to Fred Astaire, whose most original conception, it seemed to me, was his golf dance when he attempts to make good to his unfathomable young patient his boasts of exceptional powers of concentration and coordination and the ability to do several things at the same time. This takes the form of a broken-rhythm number in which the star does a lot of trick driving off the tee while executing dance steps that only he can do. Later on, he joins with Miss Rogers in "The Yam," the most pretentious running-dance in the film. It runs all over the country clubhouse, out into the garden and back into the dining room and reveals how perfectly these two are mated as the screen's preeminent tap, ballroom and ballet artists.

Irving Berlin has contributed four songs to the carefree goings-on that are lilting and graceful, the best of the lot beng the "Change Your Partner" number, sung by Astaire to the hypnotized Miss Rogers while both were daneng—but not together—on the crowded ballroom floor.

All of the supporting cast are proficient. Ralph Bellamy is best when not simulating the intoxication to which he is supposed to be addicted. Luella Gear, whose fame attaches more to the stage than to the films, is characteristically amusing in a role that affords her not too many opportunities, and Clarence Kolb, as an harassed judge, repeats the success in a similarly humorous part in "Merrily We Live."

A new issue of the Pathe News and one of Walt Disney's better Donald Duck cartoon comedies, "Good Scouts," with its scene laid in Yellowstone Park amongst the bears and the geysers, supplement a feature that is not the biggest or best of the Astaire-Rogers vehicles, but one that comes as a welcome bit of enlivenment after their 16 months of professional separation.

Bring Orchestras Here Tomorrow

TONY MARTIN AND GEORGE HALL, who come to the Capital with their popular bands and specialists to headline the stage bills at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater and Loew's Capitol, respectively, for the week beginning tomorrow. The Post's New Yorker — By LEONARD LYONS

New York, Aug. 24.

A FIRE IN THE APARTMENT of Leon Gordon destroyed 300 of the artist's prized paintings, leaving him destitute of everything that represented his life's work. . . . Hendrik Willem Van Loon, Gordon's friend, was very consoling. He sent Leon an old fruit basket containing bananas, peaches, jelly, oranges and a fish. . . . "In starting all over again," was the accompanying note, "go in for still life. It's more advisable, because if things get tough in still-life painting, you can always eat your models."

CHICO MARX IS AN INVETERATE bridge player. His wife's complaint that he was paying too much attention to bridge resulted in a family dispute. . . . Mrs. Marx finally relented and played her hand wisely. She made an orderly trail of bridge cards, leading from the doorway of their home, up the flight of steps to the door of her room. She placed the jack of hearts at the threshold, nailed the queen of hearts to her door and pinned the ace of hearts next to her pillow. . . . "So you know what I—whom she meant to be the king of hearts—did?" Chico revealed later. "When I saw the queen of hearts—I finessed and went into my own room."

GUMMO MARX, fifth of the brothers, has a 5-year-old son named Robert who attends a kindergarten class here. When his teacher asked his name, Robert arose and announced, "I'm one of the Marx Brothers." His classmates heckled him, so the lad switched answers. "Harpo Marx is my father," he stated. . . . After school he told his parents about this. "Why did you say that Harpo is your father?" asked the boy's mother. Robert answered, "Who knows Gummo Marx?"

THE NAZI MAYOR of Eberswalde, Prussia, is a former plumber who now is enriching himself. He ordered a new home, costing 50,000 marks. Every day, for the next week, someone painted a sign on the city hall, reading, "Mr. Mayor, where did you get the 50,000 marks?" The enraged official then published a statement offering 1,000 marks reward for the arrest of the culprit. The following day a new sign was painted on the city hall. "Mr. Mayor," it read, "where did you get the 51,000 marks?"

In Hollywood — With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Aug. 24.

With Columbia buying 12 Jack London stories—(I didn't know there were that many left)—and all the studios dragging out their old ones for remakes, it certainly means we're going to have an outdoor year. You'll be able to sit in your favorite theater, when the snow's flying, and say: "Oh, how I wish I could be with 'Jesse James' in Missouri, on the railroad in 'Union Pacific,' 'In the Heart of the North.'"

HEDDA HOPPER

We're going outdoorsy with a vengeance. And it's time we took our he-men out of the drawing room and into the woods. See America first? Why, Hollywood's going to show you the whole wide world! We may not be pioneers, but we're mighty quick to take the hint. Musicals and epics are washed up. Warners are making "Sea Wolf" and "The Abysmal Brute," and Goldwyn's doing "The Lady and the Cowboy." Hope the latter will remain untamed. Twentieth Century will do "Jesse James," "Kentucky" and the next Jane Withers picture, all in color, which means long location trips, twice the shooting schedule, and more work for everyone.

David Butler stole a march on others by photographing the last Kentucky Derby in color. It's to be used in "Kentucky."

And what do you think the mad Ritz Brothers are up to? I'll be darned if they aren't going to do "The Three Musketeers." They'd better get Doug Fairbanks to show 'em how.

When Randy Scott was asked why his society marriage went boom, he said, "Guess her family just found out I had to work for a living."

Helen Hayes had "an act of God baby," but the Jack Dawns are giving us the first "Oxford Group" baby. The group kept them out of Reno.

Madeleine Carroll, dissatisfied with the way we treated her, is back, but without a contract.

You never can tell from the script what's going to turn up on the screen. At a big preview not long ago the feature did a terrific nose-dive. The following day the author's agent walked into his office, threw the script of the picture on his desk, and said: "I'd like to see you shoot this some day." He had read it the night before. He was taken to the hospital.

Now that Tom Kelly is going to play in "Peck's Bad Boy," I'm reminded of a story which happened when Tommy went back to his family in New York for the opening of "Tom Sawyer." They were housed in a swank hotel and while Mrs. Kelly looked on, the maid started making up her bed. Then she took a hand saying: "Here, let me do that." "But this is my job," the maid demurred. With a withering look, Mrs. Kelly replied, "No maid's going to put new wrinkles in my bed."

Visitors are not welcome on the "Trade Wind" set, because Joan Bennett is wearing a black wig, supposed to be a great surprise. Makes her more gorgeous than ever.

Marylanders, Irked at Purge, Favor Tydings

Folliard

fight him. I tell you, Mister, it kind of galls us."

St. Marys County, oldest in Maryland, appears to be overwhelmingly for Tydings at this time, and the same can be said for two adjoining counties—Charles and Calvert.

These three, together with Prince Georges and Anne Arundel, constitute "Southern Maryland" one of the greatest tobacco-growing areas in the world.

St. Marys, Charles and Calvert each have two delegates and a senator in the Maryland Legislature, which means that each will have three votes in the post-primary Democratic convention that actually will choose between Tydings and Lewis. Seventy-five votes, a majority, will be needed to win.

Normally the nine votes of the three counties would seem relatively unimportant, but they loom mighty big in this primary.

Prince Georges, a much more heavily populated county, has seven votes in the party convention. Cautious politicians put a big question mark over it today. The lower rural areas might be expected to vote pretty much the same as Charles and Calvert, but the areas bordering on the District of Columbia, are more urban in nature. Here are Hyattsville, Mount Rainier, College Park, Capitol Heights, Seat Pleasant and other communities populated almost entirely by families whose breadwinners work in the National Capital.

Anne Arundel for Tydings.

Anne Arundel County, of which Annapolis is the county seat as well as being the State Capital, likewise has seven votes in the party convention. The Tydings people are willing to bet money that their candidate carries this county, named after the pretty wife of Cecilus, second Lord Baltimore.

As for the three counties visited by this reporetr—St. Marys, Charles and Calvert—all appeared to think pretty much alike on the Tydings-Lewis race. Ordinarily the "burning question" might be tobacco. There is a whopping big crop this year, but the price is lower than it has been in years.

Tydings and Lewis each has accused the other of not having done anything about the tremendous Federal tax on tobacco (6 cents on a 15-cent package of cigarettes).

There are a lot of other things that, under ordinary circumstances, would engage men's minds, but overshadowing everything is the question of President Roosevelt intervening in the fight between Tydings and Lewis.

A party leader in La Plata, seat of Charles County, said he would have no trouble getting automobiles on September 12 to carry voters to the polls. He said that men whom he had never known to get excited over a primary before had volunteered to use their cars for that purpose.

Tydings Has His Foes.

That is not to say that there are no Lewis supporters in Leonardtown. There is one man in the area who would vote against Tydings under almost any circumstances. He went to Washington to see Tydings some time ago, found it impossible and has been angry ever since. Another man, a farmer, says that Roosevelt is "the only President who ever kept his promise to the farmers." Here and there in St. Marys and the other two counties are men who feel that President Roosevelt, working hard to put his program through Congress, ought to have men in Congress who will help him.

In Prince Frederick, seat of Calvert County, Ben Hance, a pro-Tydings lawyer, said he knew of a large family, the members of which had planned to vote for Lewis, but who switched to Tydings when President Roosevelt made his attack on the Senator.

Mr. Hance, who lives in the old house of Roger Brooke Taney, Chief Justice from 1836 to 1864, said that most of the people who benefited from Federal relief were colored residents. All of these, he said, were registered Republicans.

"We had one Democrat," he said, "but he died."

In North Beach, Calvert County, there are about 400 registered Democrats, most of them Washingtonians who have cottages there. Party workers said that "easily 75 per cent" of them would vote for Tydings.

Telephone Company Fleet Joins Safety Program

ing in the vicinity of school and community playgrounds.

A District motorist was indicted by the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter in the death of a pedestrian killed August 3.

Another driver was freed following an inquest into the death of a motorcyclist last week.

Four persons were injured slightly in local accidents and a Fort Howard soldier died in Walter Reed Hospital from injuries received in an accident on the Baltimore Pike.

Pledges "Utmost" Aid.

In joining The Post-Junior Board safety movement, Charles A. Robinson, general manager of the telephone company, pledged renewed efforts to promote safe driving habits among the firm's corps of truck drivers.

"We will do our utmost as an organization," said Robinson, "to help in this new safety activity. It is a fine thing and telephone company employes may be counted upon to co-operate."

John C. White, general plant manager of the company, cited a ten-year accident-free record within his department, and described organized efforts to keep mishaps at a minimum.

It was estimated that telephone company trucks cover approximately 785,000 miles a year.

Cox Outlines Plan.

At a four-hour executive committee meeting of the Commissioners new advisory group, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, chairman, outlined a four-point, long-range safety program for the city. In addition to the fundamental "three E's," it was decided also to include the problem of playgrounds in plans for the future.

The executive unit's agenda was submitted to various standing subcommittees for study and a final report is scheduled next Wednesday.

In the long-range plan, said Gen. Cox, the committee will study the enforcement question from the standpoint of more police, stringent regulations and scientific accident investigation.

Methods of reaching the general public with safety appeals, recommendations for engineering changes or improvements and the playground problem will receive careful attention, he added.

"If more police are needed, we want to be able to tell the Commissioners how many, why and where they are necessary," said Gen. Cox. "The same applies to other points on our tentative agenda—we want to give reasons for our recommendations."

A definite, vacation time program to educate children in the safe use of streets was undertaken yesterday by the Y.M.C.A. and American Automobile Association. Each week until school reopens, classes in safety will be offered at the Y.M.C.A. boys' department.

Yesterday the initial class was attended by more than 30 youngsters. Richard Ham, safety director, A.A.A., acted as instructor, and the boys were entertained with a special safety motion picture. A question and answer forum covering important phases of child safety followed the film.

To protect youngsters who are using city playgrounds in increased numbers, the Commissioners adopted a new traffic regulations banning parking "in front or alongside or on the opposite side of streets adjacent to any playground."

Commissioner Hazen said the step was taken "in the interest of child safety and more adequately to protect youngsters who try to do their part by picking safe places to play."

For the second time within recent weeks, a driver was indicted for manslaughter in connection with a highway death. The man held was Charles Wilson, colored, 19. He was held responsible in the death of George E. Slaughter, colored, 44, killed at North Capitol and O streets August 3.

Wilson, it was testified, was traveling at a high rate of speed en route to the hospital with his injured wife when his car struck Slaughter.

Although District streets were free from serious accidents yesterday, Louis A. Sommer, 24-year-old soldier, attached to Fort Howard, Md., died in Walter Reed Hospital from injuries received last Friday when struck by a car near Baltimore.

Mary P. Thomas, 45, of 1412 Floral street northwest was hurt yesterday when the automobile she was driving was in collision at Twelfth and Floral streets with another driven by Lina M. Holtzberger, 50, of 5005 First street northwest, a student driver. The instructor was Murrel B. Leach of 3358 Eighteenth street northwest.

Miss Thomas was treated at home by Dr. G. B. Queen, 33 Carroll avenue, Takoma Park, Md., for an injured shoulder and chest.

Asleep at Wheel.

When James Washington, colored, 35, fell asleep at the wheel of his car—according to police—two passengers were injured when the machine careened into a tree in the 1000 block of Fourth street northwest.

Lillian Wingfield, colored, 30, and Oscar Wingfield, colored, 13, both of 468 L street southwest, were treated at Gallinger Hospital for cuts and bruises. Washington also escaped with minor hurts.

Leland Nelson, colored, 6, was struck and slightly injured while playing in an alley near his home in the 1400 block of S street northwest. He was treated for bruises and lacerations at Children's Hospital.

At the District Morgue yesterday, gruesome details of the death of Milton W. Fuller, 19, were recited by witnesses who saw him struck while riding his motorcycle near West Virginia avenue and Fenwick street northeast April 7.

A coroner's jury released Sanford Ross, of 1114 F street northeast, accused of striking the youth, and blamed the accident on Fuller's negligence. It was testified the young man swerved his motorcycle, after warning another motorist that his tail light was not burning, and crashed head-on into Ross' car.

Bed ridden more than four months, his body mangled and broken, Fuller weighed but 62 pounds when he died, according to medical testimony. He had submitted to 30 blood transfusions.

before the lanky Ohioan, recently ousted from the Interior Department by Secretary Ickes, left for his stumping reconnaissance of the Ohio situation.

Senator Bulkley, ardent supporter of the President, is facing a stiff election battle in Ohio against a millionaire Republican, Robert A. Taft, son of the late Chief Justice of the Supreme Court. Further, Charles Sawyer, Democratic gubernatorial candidate, needs White House aid, it is undestood, and West will speak in his behalf also. West, fomer Ohio Congressman and White House liaison with Congress until Congressional leaders last fall begged the President to "call Charley off," is well and widely known in Ohio. West declined comment on whether he had been offered a new Government post. He has had no official position since Ickes odered him to resign as Undersecretary of the Interior.

The results of the Farley-Roosevelt conference at Hyde Park are keenly awaited here, where numerous informed sources have to some extent confirmed widespread reports that the two are "miles apart" over the Presidential purge-and-blessing tactics. Farley is interested, it is said, only in Democratic victories, and not in the candidates' affection for the New Deal. The President conversely wants firm Administration supporters.

Senator Brown, stating that his committee would probably spend from $20,600 to $40,000, stressed that the funds would be mainly placed in doubtful States, where races are more keenly contested. He named New York, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire, Ohio, Indiana and Iowa.

Carroll Suspected In Another Slaying

Senator Sees An 'Attack' on 'Tax-Exempts'

local securties are now tax free, and asserted future issues should be taxed both as a needed source of revenue and to remove tax inequities.

"It is most unfortunate that we now permit wealthy men to sterilize their money by puttng it into tax-exempt securities," he said. "The proposed legislaton would cause men of capital to be more inclined to invest in productive enterprise.

"Nor do I see any reason why an official working for the State of New York for example should not be taxed on his income just as the Secretary of Agriculture has to pay a tax to the Federal Government."

In support of his own and the President's position that "tax-exempts" can be reached by a simple statute, under the sixteenth amendment, Brown quoted a speech by Chief Justice Hughes, when as Governor of New York in 1910 he was urging the New York Legislature against ratification of the sixteenth amendment.

"The comprehensive words, 'from whatever source derived,'" Hughes was quoted as saying, "taken in their natural sense, would include income not only from ordinary real or personal property, but also income derived from State and municipal securities."

Brown declared Hughes then took the flat position the sixteenth amendment unquestionably authorized the Federal Government to tax State securities, and added: "It would be rather interesting to see what his attitude would be if the question is submitted to him."

"The proposal briefly," said Senator Brown, "is by simple act to tax State and municipal bonds and salaries, and at the same time to grant the States the right to tax Federal bonds and salaries. That is fair, and should strengthen our case in any test in the courts.

"This is all in order to put the question before the Supreme Court again. There is some hope we may look for a favorable decision."

Brown recalled that the policy of proposing legislation of doubtful constitutionality was first criticised when the Guffey coal bill was recommended by the President, despite doubts as to validity. The Senator said he took the position that "there is no other way of finding out." He said the Supreme Court ruled in Evans versus Gore, that "only by such legislation can these questions be settled."

Assuming the proposed direct move was invalidated by the courts, Brown said, there were several indirect approaches that could be followed. He mentioned the plan first proposed by Senator Glass while Secretary of Treasury, under which rates would be computed on a basis of total net income, including interest from tax-exempt sources, with the rate actually levied against only the nontaxable portion. He said Glass is "still interested" in that plan.

Another method, he said, would be to eliminate personal and family tax exemptions from that part of income derived from tax-exempt bonds. A third method would be to provide that no State or municipal bond declared tax-exempt could be sent in interstate commerce or through the mails. A fourth method, he said, would be through State compacts, or reciprocal agreements with the States, but he declared that would take longer than a constitutional amendment.

This Young Man May SOON BE BALD

He now seems to have a good head of hair, but each morning he worries over the hair which he finds in his comb and brush. His hair looks nice on the surface, but his scalp itches constantly and is covered with scaly, sticky dandruff. Unless he does something he will be bald within 5 years, because he has seborrhea oleosa, an oily type of dandruff, which responds only to expert treatment.

He—and you, too—can avoid baldness by doing what a quarter-million other men have done—by consulting Thomas. A Thomas specialist will examine your scalp (without charge) and determine exactly which of the 14 local scalp disorders are causing your hair loss. He will then direct the reliable, 20-year proved Thomas treatment to overcome those scalp ills. Your abnormal hairfall will stop, your dandruff will disappear; and new hair will start to grow on the thin and bald spots. Why not come in today for the free scalp examination, and see for yourself how Thomas is helping others to retain or regain their hair, and how Thomas can help you, too.

Italian Editor To Tell Inquiry About Fascists

Dies Committee Has Private Hearing in New York; More Are Likely.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 24.—Called before a Congressional sub-committee investigating un-American activities, Girolamo Valenti, anti-Fascist editor, declared today he would present evidence of "an organized movement of Mussolini agents to undermine our democracy and fascistize the Italians living in America."

Valenti, who said he was chairman of a New York anti-Fascist committee, was the first witness called before a three-man section of the special House committee headed by Representative Dies (Democrat), Texas, which has been holding hearings in Washington.

The sub-committee's hearing here was private and had not been announced beforehand. Representative Thomas (Republican), New Jersey, a member of the sub-committee, explained that he and his colleagues planned to inquire into "an important matter about which nothing can be said at present."

"With All Documents."

Valenti, former editor of La Stampa Libra, Italian language newspaper which has suspended publication, arrived with a subpena calling for his appearance "with all documents of a Fascist character in your possession."

Valenti, who said he planned to start a new anti-Fascist daily, to be called Il Popolo, declared he had a picture showing Gaetano Vecchiotti, Italian consul here, participating in a Fascist military meeting in Morristown, N. J.

"The Dies committee has not proved direct participation of Berlin or Moscow here," he said, "but we have this picture of the Italian consul participating in a Fascist celebration."

Vecchiotti sailed last month for a vacation in Italy.

Representative Thomas, questioned about Valenti's statement, said the sub-committee "assumed no responsibility" for anything given out by witnesses.

The hearings ended shortly before noon.

"If public hearings are held on material developed in New York," said Representative John J. Dempsey (Democrat), New Mexico, "they will probably be held here rather than in Washington."

He said there would be no open hearings before Labor Day.

French Paper Says "Liar."

George-Louis George, chief correspondent for Ce Soir, of Paris, made public the following telegram addressed to Congressman Dies:

"James B. Matthews is quoted by the newspapers as having testified before your committee that 'the French newspaper, Ce Soir, is owned outright by the Communist Party.'

"As chief correspondent for Ce Soir and editor of its United States central bureau, I strongly protest Matthews' irresponsible remark, and wish to state publicly that I consider him a downright liar . . .

"Ce Soir, a Paris evening daily whose circulation is approximately one million, is devoted first of all to straightforward news reporting. Politically, it supports the People's Front . . . Permit me to suggest, in conclusion, that Matthews be required to present proof of his allegations. If he cannot, I recommend a rest cure for his red hallucinations."

St. Paul, Aug. 24 (AP).—Gov. Elmer Benson, a Farmer-Laborite, today suggested that Communistic motives might be behind the Dies committee investigating un-American activities which produced testimony that Communists hoped to seize control of the Farmer-Labor Party.

"I am not sure but that the Dies committee, itself, is a front for the Communists," said the Governor. "The expenses of the committee should be defrayed by the Soviet government at Moscow rather than by the United States Government at Washington."

Runciman Aide Flies to London On Czech Crisis

Arrives Secretly to Discuss Deadlock in Sudeten Negotiations.

Special Cable to The Post.

London, Aug. 24.—The problem of preserving peace in Czechoslovakia took a surprising turn tonight with the unheralded arrival in London of F. T. A. Ashton-Gwatkin, chief assistant to Viscount Runciman, the British mediator in Prague, who is trying to negotiate a settlement of grievances between the Sudeten Germans and the Czechs.

Ashton-Gwatkin flew to London in the utmost secrecy. When news leaked out, Downing street confirmed it reluctantly, adding he had come on "purely private business," after which Ashton-Gwatkin conferred with Foreign Secretary Halifax.

It is understand Ashton-Gwatkin reported the situation in Czechoslovakia is approaching a dangerous showdown and asked instructions as to how much pressure should be put upon the Czechs to meet the new demands of the Sudetens.

Met Henlein Secretly.

Only last Monday Ashton-Gwatkin had a secret 3-hour meeting in Marienbad with Konrad Henlein, Sudeten leader, at which Henlein clarified the latest revised demands of the Sudentens for territorial autonomy and other concessions—demands which remain far beyond what Prague is willing to concede for the sake of peace.

When Ashton-Gwatkin returns to Prague in a day or two, he is expected to take back something in the nature of a compromise to prolong the negotiations and postpone any deadlock or explosion.

The related problems of Czechoslavakia, Spain and the Anglo-Italian accord were discussed this morning at an important meeting in the foreign office.

Present at this two-hour session were Prime Minister Chamberlain, Halifax, Chancellor of the Exchequer Simon and Chamberlain's closest adviser, Sir Horace Wilson.

Belief was expressed in informed quarters the British government within the next few days would declare afresh its attitude toward European events. The declaration, it was said, would take the form of an unmistakable assurance to France of British support should the French be involved in a conflict as a result of fulfilling their treaty obligations to the Czechoslovaks.

There were rumors a cabinet meeting might be called before the end of the week.

Hendaye, France, Aug. 24 (AP).—Reports from the month-old Ebro River battlefront in south Catalonia indicated tonight that Spanish government forces still controlled the west bank.

Concerted attacks by planes, tanks, artillery and troops had given the insurgents slight gains since the government's surprise thrust of July 25, government advices acknowledged, but only at a heavy cost and without budging the main government line.

On the Tagus River front, about 90 miles southwest of Madrid, insurgents reported their offensive was nearing the Guadiana River after capture of Puerto de San Vicente.

Insurgents hoped to push this spearhead southeast between Alamaden and Ciudad Real, to attack the rear of government defenses in the Alamaden mercury mining region.

Tydings 'Welcomes' Campaign Fund Inquiry As Roper Recalls 'Deal' in 124 Wartime Ships

Tydings

approved by Attorney General Homer Cummings.

Speculation as to the result of a telegram to the President from President H. C. Byrd of the University of Maryland, who has just obtained $1,024,650 from the PWA and who is reported to be seeking more for university construction and improvements. The telegram invited Mr. Roosevelt to speak at the university, presumably in opposition to Senator Tydings, who has been a close friend of Byrd. Byrd at one time had been urged to become a candidate for Tydings' Senate seat.

Roper's accusation was made during a press conference. First inkling of the "ship incident" was given, however, in a recent campaign utterance by Lewis.

Roper said that on November 5, 1932, before he came into office, the Shipping Board made a contract with the Boston Iron & Metal Co., Baltimore, for sale of the vessels as scrap. A price of $1.51 per gross ton was fixed although the domestic rate for scrap iron was $13.75 per ton. He decided to abrogate the deal because the scrap was destined for war usage in "another country."

On October 3, 1933, he said, he informed the company that he was terminating the contract although 34 of the ships had been delivered. By 1934, he said, the price of scrap had reached $19.23. "Senator Tydings came repeatedly to my desk during the spring of 1934," he said, "and took the position that I had no right to abrogate the contract."

Roper alleged that Tydings later sponsored resolutions requiring him to submit reasons for breaking the contract and questioning his authority to block the sale and added that an opinion by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings held that the "attempted sale was unauthorized, illegal and void."

A special board of experts then found 40 ships suited for scrap. The company agreed to accept them and waived claims on the remaining 46.

Cummings held that this "deal" was valid, Roper said.

Byrd Invites Roosevelt.

Dr. Byrd split publicly for the first time with Senator Tydings in telegraphing an invitation to President Roosevelt to "defend" in Maryland "your philosophy of Government."

Byrd's telegram denounced as "unfair" any inference that such a visit would be "something of a carpetbagging procedure."

"You are trying to do more for the common people of the country than any other President in history and the majority of Marylanders appreciate your efforts. Furthermore, those that do not agree with you would gladly yield the right to defend before them your philosophy of Government."

In Baltimore, Senator George Radcliffe, long-time friend of the President and campaign manager for Tydings, said such a visit by Mr. Roosevelt "undoubtedly" would arouse resentment against the New Deal. Radcliffe managed the Maryland Presidential campaign two years ago.

Kent Mullikin, Lewis' campaign manager, said the President "will have a very warm welcome if he should come."

Representative Lewis, upon hearing of Dr. Byrd's invitation, said:

"Probably no one in Maryland has had his fingers more accurately on the pulse of the people of the State than the distinguished president of the University of Maryland. When he sent his telegram to the president, Dr. Byrd was not only speaking for himself but for thousands of others who resent Mr. Tydings' slur that President Roosevelt is a carpetbagger.

"Contrary to Mr. Tydings' charge that I have sought outside help, let me say that I have not even discussed with the President whether he should or should not come to Maryland. I have had no intimations from him as to whether he will come or not, but I join Dr. Byrd in stating that the people of Maryland will always welcome the President of the United States in this or any other campaign."

Several months ago Dr. Byrd succeeded in obtaining a grant of $1,024,650 from the PWA for the University of Maryland. The grant is the largest ever made in the State by the Federal Government.

There have been frequent reports that university officials were considering applying for still more PWA money.

The PWA grant already available will be matched by funds appropriate by the last State Legislature to finance a $2,277,000 construction program at the College Park, Baltimore and Princess Anne branches of the university.

The Senate committee investigators, Chairman Sheppard said, will be instructed to report as soon as possible on two requests made by Lewis concerning alleged contributions to Tydings' campaign fund, and a charge by Tydings that the C. I. O. was helping to finance Lewis.

Lewis asked an investigation to determine if Morris Shapiro, president of the Boston Iron & Metal Co., and the Globe Brewing Co. had not contributed $5,000 to the Tydings campaign "on behalf of himself or the liquor interest which he represents."

Tydings listed no such contribution in his July 19 report to the committee.

The Maryland Representative also asked the committee to inquire into a $500 donation listed by Tydings as coming from M. G. Belding, secretary of the Globe Brewing Co., to determine whether it was not in fact a donation by Shapiro.

Committee action, Sheppard said, was expected to be taken on these reports before the September 12 primary.

Lashes at "Outside."

Senator Tydings lashed out last night at "outside influence" in the Maryland campaign.

"I want the people of this Nation to know there is still in this State a free and sovereign people who will stand for no outside influence to come in and thwart their will in the selection of its Representatives in Congress," Tydings said.

That, he added, was the 'transcendental issue" in his fight with David J. Lewis.

"Detachable Head."

Tydings told the Eleventh Ward Democratic Club:

"There is a new doctrine abroad in this campaign. The demand is made that the Senator have a detachable head, which he must leave with his hat in the cloakroom before going on the floor of the Senate. He must cease to think and then do what he is told—nothing else.

"If he doesn't, he's not a Democrat; he's a Republican or an economic Royalist.

"If Congress is going to be subservient to any man, or to any group of men, then we might as well go back to the days of King George and government by royalty."

Tokyo Believes China War Soon Will Peter Out

'Air Thick With Peace,' Says Official, Though Public Thinks Otherwise.

By Relman Morin,

Tokyo Correspondent of the Associated Press.

Tokyo—Well informed Japanese believe the war in China is nearly finished.

"The air is thick with peace," one high-ranking government official has put it.

For home consumption, however, Japanese officials make such statements as that of Lieut. Gen. Seishiro Itagaki, war minister, who asserted recently Japan would continue fighting as long as Chiang Kai-Shek remained head of the Chinese government, and added: "That may be for 10 or 20 years."

The government is calling on the public to make great sacrifices, and it is believed the various campaigns for thrift and "spiritual mobilization" would come to a quick end if the man on the street thought the war were nearly over.

It was an undeclared war, and informed Japanese believe it will be an undeclared peace.

In their view there never will be formal cessation of hostilities, with a meeting of diplomats to draw up the legal documents of peace.

Admire Chinese Soldiers.

The war simply will peter out. It will fall in successive levels from active fighting to guerrilla warfare and then to a condition of peace—without the diplomatic trimmings.

Publicly, Japanese military men say they will chase Chiang clear to the borders of Tibet, if necessary.

What they plan to do, however, is to carve out a chunk of China, along the coastline, then stop.

Once they stop the positions will be reversed. Japan will be on the defensive, content to remain within the borders of the 400,000 square miles her army of some 600,000 has taken from China since the war started July 7, 1937. Chinese will be forced to take the offensive to dislodge them.

Japanese army men have a genuine admiration for the Chinese soldier—but not as an offensive fighter.

"If the Chinese knew how to attack—and they don't—they could have pushed us into the sea," is their view.

Defensive War Cheaper.

Thus military men believe that when the Japanese army ceases to attack, the fighting gradually will slow down, then stop entirely. In this plan of inaction Japan would find two advantages—defensive fighting is cheaper both in blood and money, and Japan would have an opportunity to start reconstruction of the occupied areas so as to regain from them some of the money she has spent.

What Japan wants now is to get out as cheaply and quickly as possible. Japanese believe that once Hankow is taken both honor and necessity will have been met. They do not see the possibility of China making a serious effort to get Japanese troops off the mainland.

Daladier Aided By Own Party On 48-Hr. Week

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Aug. 24.—Premier Daladier received the indorsement of the executive committee of his own Radical Socialist Party today in his fight to obtain a modification of France's 40-hour law, to permit increased hours of work in industries connected with the national defense.

The meeting was the first of a series of political gatherings of various parties making up the Popular Front, this week, to discuss their attitude toward the new orientation in the government's social policy.

Meanwhile, French labor was preparing for a struggle to maintain the social reforms it won in 1936.

The partial dock strike, which has lasted at Marseilles for six weeks, spread today to Corsica, Algeria, Tunis and Morocco. Dockers refused to work overtime on Sundays or nights, also threatening to widen the strike front.

Million Chinese Block Japanese Hankow Drives

Troops Poised on 2 Fronts for Push to Capital; Enter Juichang.

By the Associated Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Aug. 25.—Japanese forces had fought their way into position today for a two-way drive against Hankow, Chinese provisional capital about which 1,000,000 defenders were said to be deployed.

Reports from the Central China fronts placed one Japanese force at a point 100 miles southeast of Hankow and another in position to strike overland 140 miles against the Peiping-Hankow Railway.

A heavily reinforced Japanese army reported it had smashed through the east gate of the town of Juichang in its advance up the south bank of the Yangtze River on Hankow, 100 air miles to the northwest.

From Central Anhwei Province came Chinese reports that Japanese columns striking westward from Hofei, provincial capital, reached Kwanting and Taokichen, footholds for an assault on the Peiping-Hankow Railway, probably at a point about 100 miles north of Hankow.

Japanese were believed to have abandoned, at least temporarily, attempts to strike at Hankow along the Yangtze's north bank, but the force at Juichang was in position to advance another 30 miles to the northwest in an attack on Yangsin.

Chinese were said to be strongly entrenched around the six lakes west of Yangsin, which is only 55 miles east of Sienning, the nearest point on the Canton-Hankow Railway.

Canada's Premier Sees Trade Pact Ready in Month

Ottawa, Ontario (Canadian Press), Aug. 24.—Prime Minister Mackenzie King said today he believed negotiations in Washington on a trade treaty between the United States and Britain would be completed in September.

He added that he saw a possibility he would be called on to visit Washington in connection with a revised Canada-United States trade agreement.

A new reciprocal agreement is sought by the United Kingdom while Canada seeks revision of the Canada-United States treaty which expires at the end of this year.

Replying to reports that Canada would surrender her wheat, fruit and some other preferences in the United Kingdom market as a result of the negotiations, the Prime Minister said, "we have given up nothing, and nothing has been settled."

Friend Will Fly Ashes of Hawks To Connecticut

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 24 (AP).—A friend of Lieut. Comdr. Frank M. Hawks made ready tonight for a flight back to Connecticut with the ashes of America's famous speed ace, who was killed in a plane crash late yesterday.

Mack R. Carlin, Hawks' roommate and flying companion, will take off tomorrow for Hawks' home town of Redding, Conn., where the 41-year-old flier's widow lives and where his funeral will be held Friday. Hawks' body was cremated today in accordance with his own request.

Arrangements also went forward for the funeral of J. Hazard Campbell, 43, wealthy Buffalo sportsman, who with Hawks was trapped in the flaming wreckage of an "aircar" which crashed in a suburban polo field after hitting telephone wires last night.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Believing they had found a refuge from a torrent of Japanese bombs, women and children gathered around and in this French Catholic cathedral at Canton August 8. Many were blown to bits when three bombs exploded within 20 yards of the cathedral, smashing stained glass windows and wrecking side chapels. Rescue workers are shown removing wounded.

Car Too Colorful, Bettina Belmont Says, Pays Fine

Charged with speeding 50 miles an hour in Georgetown Tuesday, Bettina Belmont, society equestrienne, was fined $15 in Traffic Court yesterday by Judge Walter J. Casey. It was her second offense on a speeding charge.

The attractive 19-year-old horsewoman told reporters she believed her bright colored car was too conspicuous and that, "policemen just can't help noticing it. Sometimes they stop me when I'm not doing a thing," she sighed.

Her next car will be "dark and inconspicuous."

Nor Gloom Of Night.

Neither rain nor snow nor—luckily—excessive heat has stayed the Postoffice Department's country couriers from the completion of their appointed rounds in Washington. And this is fortunate, because of all the many groups that visit Washington, none deserve a pleasanter time than the members of the National Rural Letter Carriers Association now in convention here.

They are the sort of people who should be seen more often in Washington. They are as bread and butter to cocktails and canapes; they bring a Sandburg realism to the De Tocqueville abstractions of the city. Bills, laws, favors, rulings? Not for them. One of their greatest interests here has been a display of a new roadside letter box that won't stick. For them and for the millions they serve, an improved letter box is of greater importance than any Corcoran-connived purge. America does not live by political economy alone—the WPA to the contrary notwithstanding.

But, it may be asked, why single out the rural letter carriers for such special welcome? Poultrymen, shirt makers, lumber dealers and a host of others regularly assemble in Washington, too. Fair enough and all honest folk, but the oldest Federal alphabeticians have still an extra recommendation. The men and women who operate the RFD are a special sort. Meet them atop the Washington Monument, craning in at the bedrooms of Mount Vernon, thumbing delightedly through their home town papers at the Library of Congress: they may seem ordinary enough.

But meet them ploughing through March mud on a back road, breaking a way for the Doc with their snowmobiles, posting a detour sign around a washed-out bridge: then they appear in proper and compelling perspective. They are the nerves, if not indeed the sinews tying together the backbone of the Nation. Washington bids them a hearty welcome.

The Holmesburg Horror.

In all the ingenious tortures of the Orient, in all the records of medieval penology, in all that has been reported and written about French Guiana, it is impossible to find anything that surpasses in sheer cruelty the punishment applied a few days ago to 25 convicts at the Holmesburg Penitentiary in Philadelphia. Of these men, according to the coroner's report, four were literally roasted to death, four were driven insane and the remaining 17 were dragged vomiting out of the improvised oven in which they had been locked for the night.

The four deaths may have been accidental but the torture to which all 25 of the convicts were subjected was not. The windows in the isolation block were closed and the keys were removed from the single water taps with which each of the cells was provided. Then live steam was admitted into the pipes and radiators of the building on that mid-August night.

Scarcely less frightening than the accounts of this mass torture and murder is the suspicion that it was only through the quick and vigorous action of Coroner Hersch that part of the truth has become known at all. This is indicated by the haste of two detectives of the Philadelphia police force in making an "investigation" and then reporting that the prisoners had died of exhaustion after fighting among themselves.

Now comes a report that at the direction of Mayor S. Davis Wilson, and over the protests of Coroner Hersch and the United States district attorney, two guards who were on duty at the prison Sunday night have been arrested. This step was taken after Coroner Hersch had promised that if he were allowed a free hand everybody concerned would be punished, both those who turned on the steam and those who gave the order to turn it on. It is worth noting that Holmesburg prison is under the jurisdiction of Philadelphia County, which while geographically identical is politically quite separate from the city of which Mayor Davis is the head.

The whole Nation has been shocked by what happened at Holmesburg, and the Nation has the right to demand that Coroner Hersch be permitted to continue his investigation to the fullest possible extent so that no one responsible for the outrage will be "covered up." If necessary the Department of Justice should be called in to get all the facts relating to the Holmesburg horror and all those who were guilty of it.

Affront To Civilization.

There are actions so contemptible, so loathsome, as to arouse a feeling of almost personal humiliation in reading of them. If human beings can really do such things, one must reflect, then there is something discreditable in being human.

Of this universally debasing character are the latest Nazi decrees designed further to degrade and stigmatize the Jews of that country for their effrontery in being Jews within an "Aryan" community. One such decree, as reported in the New York Times yesterday, publishes an arbitrary list of given names—185 for boys and 91 for girls—from which Jewish parents must hereafter make selection in naming their children. Such samples as Awigdor, Chaggai and Zewi for males, as Faugel and Sprinze for females, show clearly that the idea is to stamp the unfortunate babies as pariahs.

For those already adult another decree prescribes additions of the name Israel for men, and Sarah for women, in cases where Jewish blood is not already indicated. Use of this additional name to identify Semitic origin is mandatory in all business transactions.

Still another decree, of the same general character, prescribes a special class of automobile licenses for Jews who are still able to maintain the luxury of that form of transportation. The idea, taken in conjunction with the general anti-Semitic campaign, is to pillory the Jewish driver and subtly force him to pedestrianism in the Ghetto.

Underlying these sadistic persecutions, obviously, is a clear admission of the difficulty of isolating the German Jew as such. He has become so integral a part of the Germanic stock that identification can only be successfully accomplished by arbitrary means. Indeed, as has this week been emphasized before the British Association for the Advancement of Science, more German Jews are ethnologically "Aryans" than is the case with Germans of non-Jewish stock.

It is the total absence of any rational or even pseudo-scientific basis for the Nazi persecutions which makes their cruelty, their inhumanity, their essentially barbaric character the more appalling. In this respect the Nazis have stripped off the culture and the advancement of a thousand years of progress. Because this can so easily happen, in a supposedly civilized world, explains why all mankind, much more than the terrorized German Jews, must feel besmirched and tarnished by the Nazi program.

Roswell Magill Resigns.

Dr. Roswell Magill, Undersecretary of the Treasury and the Government's chief tax expert during the past year and a half, has resigned his post to resume his duties as professor of law at Columbia University.

By his defense of the punitive taxes imposed upon undistributed profits and capital gains, Dr. Magill made himself a target for critics of the Administration who believe these taxes helped to bring about the business recession. Yet though one may disagree with him it cannot be denied that Dr. Magill's opinions are those of a qualified expert whose theoretical bias is obviously not due to mere political ambition.

Prior to acceptance of the post of Undersecretary, Dr. Magill had twice served under Secretary Morgenthau as a consultant on tax legislation. He helped to formulate the revenue laws of 1934 and 1935 and he also directed the investigation into methods of tax evasion and avoidance which preceded passage of the revenue act of 1938.

That inquiry threw much needed light upon many practices that called for exposure and suppression. And Dr. Magill's first-hand acquaintance with the administrative and legal problems of our complicated tax system greatly assisted the uncovering of abuses. His tendency to minimize the economic evils resulting from excessively high taxation of income in the upper brackets and of penalty taxes on capital accumulation has, however, had less constructive results.

In tendering his resignation, Dr. Magill took pains to emphasize, as on previous occasions, the importance of better co-ordination between State and Federal tax systems. He also advocated again the taxation of interest from all future issues of Federal and State securities. Since tax exempt issues provide a broad avenue of escape from the high surtax levies on income favored by Dr. Magill, his interest in this reform is easily understood.

Cost Of Divided Authority.

Following the request of the Police Department for an increase of 12 per cent in its appropriation for the coming year, the District Commissioners have been asked by the National Capital Parks Commission to provide funds for the employment of 15 additional park policemen as well as other park and playground employes. These separate demands, calling for two appropriations, again direct attention to the difficulties created by the lack of unified direction and control of the metropolitan and park police.

Besides eliminating jurisdictional conflicts and bringing other obvious advantages, centralized control of the District's police forces would simplify the financial problem of the authorities. When two requests for appropriations for police protection come from two separate agencies, it is extremely difficult to weigh accurately the relative urgency of the need in each case. As a result it is quite likely that one police force will be voted funds that could have been used to better advantage by the other.

Under a unified management a single appropriation would be available to be used wherever it would provide maximum protection to Washington residents, whether in park areas or city streets. The co-ordination of local police forces need not result in an actual merger of the park and metropolitan groups. Indeed, that would be undesirable since they have different functions requiring different kinds of training. It is quite feasible, however, to secure all the advantages of specialization without maintaining separate police organizations that give rise to jurisdictional conflicts and make it virtually impossible to develop and execute a budgetary plan without needless waste.

A Test For The Popular Front.

Premier Daladier's plea in favor of the abandonment of the present 40-hour work week, in favor of one of 48 hours in all industries connected with national defense, constitutes the most serious challenge the Popular Front has had to face since it came into being some years ago.

The 40-hour week was one of the basic planks in the platform upon which the Popular Front was swept into power in 1936. For some time, however, the Radical Socialists have taken an increasingly critical attitude toward the measure, believing, and with much to justify their contention, that it has done more harm than good. But the law remains a cardinal article of faith with the Socialists and the Communists, the other two of the three major parties in the Popular Front.

It is certain that any attempt to wipe the law off the statute books would give the Popular Front a blow from which it could not recover and would make the position of the Daladier government extremely precarious. However, M. Daladier has so far carefully avoided any such far-reaching proposal; instead he has merely asked for the modification of the law to meet the needs arising out of the present international emergency.

On this basis a compromise is not out of the question. This is evident from the statements made by Leon Blum and Leon Jouhaux. Writing in the Socialist organ, Le Populaire, the former premier contents himself with warning M. Daladier against tampering with the social reforms put through by the Popular Front while, at the same time, admitting the gravity of the situation which led the premier to propose the upward modification of the 40-hour law in certain industries.

For his part, M. Jouhaux, leader of the French Confederation of Labor and its 5,000,000 members, told reporters in New York that his organization was ready to consider special cases where a prolongation of working hours might be necessary. "But we don't want the principle of the 40-hour week touched," he added.

This attitude of moderation by the leader of the Socialist Party and the head of France's most important working class organization is praiseworthy. It is now up to the French industrialists to show an equal willingness to avoid extremes and to pursue the path of compromise. If they are wise enough to do so, a crisis of real magnitude, and one which the enemies of France might be quick to capitalize, will be averted.

Three Fishers.

Three fishers went sailing out into the east,
Out into the east as the sun came up.

They were Ben Crowninshield, Boston sportsman, who went fishing in Ipswich Bay; Richard Silvers, of Williamsport, Md., who went fishing in the Potomac, and Johnny McWhortle, of Jarboesville, who went fishing in Town Creek, off the Patuxent.

Each thought of a fish that would furnish a feast
For breakfast, with coffee, and more than a cup.

And Richard caught a 32-pound carp, which pulled the boat around for an hour before calling it a day. This was not only the largest carp ever caught in these waters but the most energetic. The carp is usually content to let a fisherman row his own boat. Carp love to loaf in shallow creeks, and a favorite way of catching them is to put on hip boots and hit 'em on the head with a club.

But Johnny caught a 6-ounce spot, which might have got away with half the worm but insisted upon eating it all. Johnny played the fish with consummate skill for a long, long time. As a matter of fact, it was full 15 minutes, Johnny says, before the damned spot was out.

It is hard to say which of the three fishermen had the most fun; but Johnny was the only one who had his catch for breakfast.

Pretty soon humorists may have to go to work for a living. Nearly everything that happens these days is several times funnier than any remark which might be made about it.

A Minnesota minister says he considers "damn" and "hell" useful words instead of profanity. Why, of course! People have to discuss the political situation, don't they?

Description of some one you know: He has every kind of wheel in his head except a balance-wheel.

How is Ethiopia getting along these days? We have heard scarcely anything from it since it was run over by civilization.

Voila l'Ennemi!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
It is a source of great sorrow to those who sincerely love peace to observe the people of the world hurtling along a road that will inevitably lead to war. War draws closer to us every day and we seem helpless to avert the impending catastrophe. There is small evidence in the daily press of the reign of Christian principles. We read such streamers as: "France Repudiates Peace Proposals," "Border Disputes," "Boycott Japan," "Lift the Embargo," "Jews Persecuted," "Civil War in Palestine," "Protocols of Zion," "His Holiness Warns Against Chauvinism," "Germany Becomes a Slave State," "The Spanish War Enters Its Third Year," "Daladier Faces Cabinet Crisis," "The Soviet Dreams of World Power."

Apropos of the same, the coming of the Popular Front plunged Spain into a fratricidal, if not a world war in miniature. France has had a troubled existence since the advent of its Popular Front government. The totalitarian regimes of Italy, Germany and Japan, hateful as they are to many, are but reactionary to bolshevism. Poland, Czechoslovakia and the Little Entente shall be crushed between the opposing ideologies. Great Britain and the United States cannot but be seriously affected by the issue of this world-wide conflict between communism and the remnants of Christian civilization.

In a recent issue of Life magazine there is a picture of Kremlin Square. On the right, there is very clearly written the old slogan of the Third Internationale, "Workers of the World, Unite!"—in English, Spanish and Chinese! Then, there are very incriminating evidences produced by the Dies committee. Can it be that we who love freedom—freedom of speech, of the press, of worship—so dearly, are allowing ourselves to be lured to destruction with our eyes wide open? Le communisme, viola of the press, of worship—so dearly, enemy!) JOHN J. MORRISSON.
Washington, Aug. 23.

New Deal Odysseus.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Mr. O'Connor is reported in The Washington Post as attacking dictators and comparing the doings of Mr. Roosevelt to those of Hitler and Mussolini.

In the first place all this is absolutely absurd.

In the second place, it is equally absurd to deplore the deeds of Hitler and Mussolini, and condone the unmitigated despotism of Stalin.

In the third place, the United States of America and its Government since Roosevelt's first election have steered between Scylla and Charybdis and avoided the whirlpools of fascism, and the ragged rocks and suction currents of sovietism.

Finally, the American people, sovereign and commanding in their united strength, will require the carrying out of the will of the whole people. No cliques will mold American opinion. The President wins favor because he does what is best for our whole Nation.

Transgressing Trucks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
After reading the pats on the back your paper is giving to the owners of fleets of trucks for co-operating in the safety campaign (such owners being good advertisers) I was interested to note the following "evidences of co-operation" on my way from my house to the Interior Department this morning—not a long way.

Parked double:
One dairy truck.
One trash hauler.
Parked in prohibited zone in rush hour:
One soft drink truck.
One distributing company truck.
Two towel service trucks.
You will notice the preponderance of "fleet trucks" in violations.
Returning home this evening:

On Minding Our Business.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
The sensible letter signed A. F. J. in The Post a few days ago expresses the idea of all true Canadians and British subjects on this side of the Atlantic. Yes, the Maple Leaf boys know their fighting, and have saved England in many a scrap. Canada has no enemies anyway, unless the United States makes them for her. The United States is making plenty enemies right now, by butting in to other nations' business overseas. I say, let the United States mind its own business and keep on her own territory and Canada will be all right.

On the other hand, the letter signed La Paloma, of Montreal, Canada, in The Post today, must have been written by an American, a United States citizen. There are many in Montreal and other parts of Canada. It does not express loyalty to Canada or to the British Empire. Maybe it was written by a mic-mac Frenchman; some of them are not satisfied with being British subjects. My advice to La Paloma is, if he wants to be a United States citizen, and prefers to live under some President of the United States, he had better get off Canadian soil.

Presidents are "here today and gone tomorrow." Possibly the next United States President would prefer to "mind his own nation's business."

A GENUINE CANADIAN.

Automobile Speed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Thirty thousand men, women and children killed in a year, a million maimed or injured. What a frightful massacre of innocent civilians! And this horrible carnage did not take place in Spain or China. It occured in the year 1937 right here in these United States.

Why? Because as a Nation we have become obsessed with a mania for rapid locomotion and are determined to gratify this mad craving at any cost. Millions of ponderous cars tear along our streets and highways expelling poisonous fumes into the air we breathe, and filling our morgues and hospitals with innocent pedestrians.

The only sane solution of the automobile problem is firstly, to keep automobiles off streets and roads on which pedestrians are permitted to walk, and secondly, to curb speeding by refusing to license cars capable of attaining a speed of more than 50 miles per hour.

This solution will entail a terrific amount of self-control on the part of a pleasure-seeking public longing to be propelled through space at ever increasing velocities, but the sacrifice is worth making.

Taxi Insurance.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
I wonder how many taxicab drivers are going to stay in business after the compulsory liability insurance bill goes into effect, August 28. I also wonder how many of them are going to take it on the chin, when their livelihood is taken away from them. I wonder how many of the Congressmen who put this bill over will turn a hand to help these men to get jobs? Not one of them.

With reference to your picture of a "Harvest Scene" in your paper on August 16, how about an up-to-date picture of a combine, for example, instead of the picture you used of a generation ago?

Dies Irae.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Orchids to Sidney Olson for his coverage of the Congressional Red Hunt. I haven't laughed so much since granpappy fell into a kettle of mush. Really, this Dies committee is rapidly becoming a modern Gilbert and Sullivan. How about moving all this high-priced comedy down to the Sylvan Theater so all the citizens can get their money's worth. After all, if we have to pay for this expensive display of buffoonery, we should, at least, have grandstand seats.

All my life I have felt that Shirley Temple was a pure, unsophisticated child of the cinema . . . woe and alas, she is an agent of Moscow and waves a red flag in public school patrols. Who knows, maybe Groucho Marx wears red underwear. Yes, the committee is right . . . this investigation may go on indefinitely . . . there are thousands of potential subjects for investigation. We might do away with red traffic lights, danger signals, red flags around excavations, red tomatoes, rep corpuscles, red caviar and red filters for cameras. The blush on apples might also stem from Moscow; the bloom on a peach . . . even the Japanese cherry blossoms are probably under the control of the Communists . . . several of them were of a subversive pink this spring, and I also noted a few exceptionally red sunsets. The dwarfs in Snow White are distinctly communistic . . . some of them had picks and hammers . . . material symbols of sovietism, and their co-operative efforts to aid Snow White smacks of socialism in its rankest form.

Mr. Dies should watch his step. Sure, and he has already made everybody communistic except the Knights of Columbus, Gen. Franco, Hitler, Mussolini and himself. Heywood Broun is right . . . this committee is going nowhere fast.

Reds And The C. I. O.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:
Considerable publicity is currently being given to the influence of the Communist Party in the C. I. O., as well as in, what might be fairly described as its organizational counter part among the unemployed, the Workers Alliance of America. To both sympathetic and unsympathetic observers of these groups, this influence is so palpable and effective that only the hopelessly naive could fail to take note of it.

To this correspondent, the most unfortunate aspect of all this publicity is the tendency of an otherwise informative press, to attribute criticism of Communist Party influence in labor unions solely to reactionary capitalists like Tom Girdler, or to antediluvian A. F. of L. bureaucrats like John P. Frey. That is to say, it is not generally stressed that an important number of both professional and manual workers, who do not always see eye to eye with the Stalinist storm troopers who hold key positions in the C. I. O. and W. A. of A., resent the pervasive and onerous hand of this influence.

Unsuspecting humanitarians, who realize only that the as yet incurable collapse of pre-Hooverian prosperity makes imperative the existence of the numerous alphabetical set-ups of the New Deal, are unaware that these set-ups have inadvertently fostered the growth of a new species of unscrupulous careerist. He is the agile opportunist who, quick to scent the ubiquitous power of camouflaged Stalinism in—shall I say?—the Rooseveltian dispensation, promptly climbs aboard the bandwagon. His vociferous lip service to the "Party Line" is soon rewarded with a comfortable sinecure, flatteringly labeled, regional director, supervisor, field organizer, etc. Thus entrenched, he hews to the program of the "Party."

Woe betide the hapless proletarian who ventures an honest difference of opinion with these suddenly elevated and inflated functionaries of the Comintern! He is bludgeoned forthwith as a spy, Fascist, and tool of the enemies of the working class who must be liquidated!

The Post Impressionist

First Shave.

I HADN'T allowed myself to be swayed by my own judgment.

I had carefully cultivated each filament of whisker until a disinterested spectator suggested without prompting that I get rid of them.

All I knew about shaving had been gleaned from watching the corner barber earn his bread. I had haunted his shop for days until he mildly suggested that I get the hell out and not come back.

When I was sure I was alone I gathered my materials together and entered the sanctum where I was to initiate myself into the sacred mystery that must change my life.

I had left nothing to chance. I had gone so far as to prepare an outline of the best Italo-American tonsorial methods.

But to get back to the auspicious moment. I glance in my mirror and see a MAN with a disgraceful growth of hair upon his face. I swell my chest until the abnormal expansion bursts a button, reminding me of the outline. The outline stated in Section 1, paragraph 6, that "the shirt must be removed excepting when the operation takes place in a shop designed for the purpose and if the operation takes place in said shop the tie and collar must be removed and hung at least six (6) feet from the chair.

As per outline I remove the shirt and discard it on the floor, which is allowed by the outline. The usual procedure is to wash the face, but I could not bring myself to do this. Hadn't I promised myself that one the day that I first shaved I would cease to wash my face? Having chucked this principle (expounded in full in Nicoli Nicolani's encyclopedia, Recognized Principles of Shaving, Vol. II, pp. 457-58 et seq.), I refer to my outline for the next step.

Under the head of preparation of lather I have found the authorities divided into two distinct schools of thought: the oleaginous, or brushless, school and the saponaceous, or nonbrushless, school. This controversy, however, is of merely theoretical interest to me, since I have no shaving brush. Of necessity I employ the oleaginous technique.

That is to say, I smear my face with the cream. The next item is to rub the face briskly on the more whiskery portions. I rub my whiskers until I think there won't be any fuzz left to shave off.

Now all the preliminaries are over. The die is cast. I am crossing the Rubicon. I am sounding forth the trumpet that shall never call retreat. I reach for my razor. My hand trembles, my eyes are bright with joy. Ah, most beautiful of moments!

I must explain that the razor was not sharp. Not only did the second volume of Recognized Principles of Shaving state that no apprentice could use a sharp razor, but my better judgment told me that to use a keen blade was to flirt with disaster and ultimate decapitation. After research into the medicine chest I selected a razor blade that wouldn't have cut butter.

Like the great shavers of history, I fill the sink with hot water and I begin.

The usual line of attack is to start with the side whiskers and work up to climax on the upper lip. In an impartial examination I found that my whiskers were all on the climax portion of my face, but this didn't deter me. I just started in the place where the side whiskers should, by the best standards, have been. To all the male readers it is not necessary to describe the sensation that followed, but the female and the junior adolescent male members of the audience must not be slighted.

The fuzz (I can afford to be cynical of my foliage now) that wasn't plastered to my face by the cream felt as if each separate and individual hair was being chopped down and the stump dynamited.

As I approached the climax of this painful operation I reflected on how wonderful I would have looked with a beard. I thought of Plato, Walt Whitman and Gen. Longstreet. I thought of the comfort such a growth would have afforded on a winter's day. Too late! Too late! Of all sad words of tongue or pen. . . .

After every unhidden whisker had been laid to rest I referred to the outline. It told me that the hot towel was the next item on the list of torture implements.

True to the code, I wet the end of a towel that had been hung in the bathroom for the use of guests that weren't expected to come. Like the best barbers, when the towel had soaked, I spun it in a wide arc around my head. Splattering the walls and any other fixture that had a tendency to impede the progress of the water which I had forgotten to wring from the towel.

After I had finished writhing from the scalding I had given myself with the towel I hurried into the last stage, namely, the application of post-shave lotion. I found, in my research, that the after-shave stuff used by professional hay-mowers was nothing but hair grower in a different bottle.

The reference volume, by this time well soaked, said to slap the face smartly when applying the soothing potion. In my opinion, it would not have been smart to slap my face at that time, and I do not think I would have given much for the life of the person that tried to do it. RICHARD STARNES.

Fair Enough

Medical Dead-Beats.

IT IS COMING on toward the deadline, so there is not enough time today to settle here, for good and all, the issue of socialized medicine. However, there are some letters at hand which will do for fuel for argument, one contending that a doctor is overpaid at $200 for doing an appendectomy and saving a solvent patient's life.

"We could not do without water for a month," says this one, and adds that we would starve for lack of food, proceeding then to challenge, "Is a month's supply of water necessarily worth $200? And one who charged a starving man $200 for a single meal—wouldn't he be regarded as devoid of humanity?"

Well, a drink of water has been known to sell high in certain frontier places where water was packed in casks on burros, and in such places if a man lacked a dollar or whatever the price to pay for a drink the price might as well have been $200 as far as he was concerned.

The same argument goes for the single meal to save a life. Many a bum with a thin dime in his pocket has been turned back into the snow because the price of a flop in some fleabag on South Clark or West Madison street, Chicago, or on the Bowery, New York, was 15 cents, and there is just no reckoning the number of hungry men who have gazed in at the windows of restaurants, even the dirty-spoon joints, too weak and famished to drool, and continued to starve because they couldn't buy a cup of coffee and a roll, much less a meal. In such cases what difference does it make whether the price of a flop or a meal is 15 cents or $200.

JUST AFTER prohibition began, the Salvation Army placed in charge of one of its down-and-out clubs one of those great big, clear-eyed, right-thinking, clean-living, muscular Christians of the Y. M. C. A. type, who hated anyone who took a drink and would strut his muscularity and his particular interpretation of Christianity by heaving out all the sick and snaggle-toothed and busted bums who made the mistake of looking for kindness there. He wanted only God-fearing respectables, and he used to boast of the number of his permanent lodgers who had steady jobs, forgetting that his place was nominally a charitable institution and that these dead-beats were able to pay reasonable rates for private quarters, as independent men should be compelled to.

The same dead-beat temperament takes advantage of free or nominal fee medical and surgical service intended for the truly poor and this abuse has become so raw that in Washington all members of the Cabinet, by a cheap and greedy distortion of an act of Congress, are now entitled to such service in the Naval Hospital practically free.

I DOUBT that even in frontier desert places any man ever perished for lack of the price of a glass of water, but there are thousands of doctors who give away free the same service that would be unavailable to desperately sick people if they insisted on their full fees. But a little lower specimen of insect life than the doctor who won't treat the sick poor free is that type of man or woman who can pay a reasonable amount for relief from suffering but imposes on the doctor's circumstances and his charity.

A widow of a doctor residing in Washington writes of a Government clerk whose little boy had been carried through a desperate illness and who then said to the doctor, "I know I owe you a bill and I am sorry I can't pay it, but I am buying my house and that keeps me strapped."

A doctor writes, "I spend half my time in charity wards and clinics," and tells of a midnight call to a suicide case which kept him up all night and required daily service for ten days. When the patient got well he sent a bill, and finally sued. But on the very day the court gave judgment for his fee the patient jumped to another State.

ANOTHER DOCTOR says Bismarck gave Germany state medicine 50 years ago and that nothing new in medicine has come out of Germany, formerly a leader in scientific medical investigation, in 25 years, while the profession in this country has eradicated malaria, yellow fever, typhoid, diphtheria and scarlet fever. He says, too, that his British friends say the British panel doctor is less careful, considerate and conscientious than others and that "the recipient of this service would prefer to call other than a panel doctor."

And here is a man charged $2,000 for an abdominal operation who thinks the doctor robbed him to equalize his service to the poor.

"Why can't I nominate the beneficiaries of my bounty?" he asks. "Or why shouldn't the free patients be told that I, not the doctor, donated the operation?"

A fair suggestion, but listen to him. He gets $10,000 a year, he says, after his income taxes are paid, and he thinks $2,000 is too much to pay for the saving of his life.

17,000 Papers to Grade After Civil Exam Here

Three civil service examinations for the job of printer's assistant at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing—participated in here by 17,000 applicants — ended yesterday and the commission's experts were preparing to grade the mass of papers. The examinations were begun Monday at Roosevelt, Macfarland, McKinley and Langley schools. The job pays beginners 66 cents an hour.

"Defeat Japan!"

By Nathaniel Peffer.

(At the outbreak of the Sino-Japanese War, Mr. Peffer, a widely recognized authority on the Far East, pointed out that America had only the choice of entering or not entering the war. That reasoning, he insists, was wholly valid at the time, but in the following article, reprinted from the magazine Amerasia, he declares that the present status of the conflict calls for a radical alteration in American Far Eastern policy.)

IT would be doctrinaire blindness or fatuous devotion to consistency to maintain that a year of war has made no difference and that America's position is and should be now exactly what it was a year ago. For three things have happened in that year to change the nature of the problem that the Far East presents to the United States.

One. In that year American rights and interests in the Far East have been treated with scorn and overtly violated. I do not mean the sinking of the Panay only. I mean the continuous pin-pricking in cities like Shanghai, the mistreatment of foreigners, the arbitrary closing off of districts to foreigners contrary to all law, the direct or indirect infringements on the economic rights of foreigners and the manifest intention to shut off to foreigners any future economic opportunity in China.

Two. The manner in which Japan has conducted the war has outraged every American sense of decency. Of Japan's conduct of the war the word barbarity is too generous a description. The word bestiality is more accurate, even etymologically more appropriate. I do not mean only the bombing of undefended towns and villages. I mean the indiscriminate killing, looting, burning and raping that has followed every Japanese victory. Hardened as this generation has become to cruelty and human suffering, hardened as a cancer specialist must become, the abominations of the Japanese invasion have proved revolting. And to the American of any sensitiveness it cannot be without humiliation that America has legally but also effectively contributed to these abominations by selling to Japan the instruments of abomination.

Legally America's position may be unimpeachable; but the effect has been to abet the Japanese soldiery in plundering, looting, killing and raping. The fact is that America has sold more materials to Japan than any other nation, and the fact must make any American squirm, however correct the position of his country may be in international law.

Three. In a year of war Japan has been markedly weakened. It has not succeeded in subduing China. It is now mired, perhaps inextricably mired, in China. It has destroyed or enervated its sinews of war. It is now measurably less formidable than it was a year ago. For the first time since the World War there is a prospect of safeguarding the world from the threat to its peace and welfare that Japan has undeniably constituted since then.

Before proceeding to the deductions to be drawn from these three developments it is better to get ourselves cleared as to the first premise. It is idle to pretend that America has at any time desired anything except the defeat of Japan in this war. In that respect its interests and its reasoned and instinctive preferences coincide. Its national existence has not yet been sufficiently jeopardized to warrant the supreme sacrifice of war, but that a Japanese defeat would contribute to its material security and its sense of human values is almost a unanimous belief. In this war this country is anti-Japanese. It wants to see Japan defeated. Short of war until there is no other recourse, it would and should help encompass that defeat. And everything that has happened in the last year has strengthened that desire, added to the provocation and made opportunity.

Where Our Far Eastern Policy Needs Revision.

THE TIME has come for these to be given effectuation, for revaluation of American policy in the Far East and translation in the form of concrete measures. What measures?

First. The most obvious is succor to Chinese civilians in the form of relief. What is generally acknowledged but not openly avowed is the scandalous failure of America to respond to the need in China, the indifference to the humanitarian appeal of the ghastly suffering in that country. This is the one niggardly episode in recent American history one in which the country can take shame and which must be redressed.

Second. A renewed campaign must be launched for individual boycotting of Japanese goods. It must be borne in on every American citizen that every cent he spends on any commodity imported from Japan is his addition to the cost of a bomb that wipes out some peasant's hut and kills his wife and children. The arguments that might be made against individual boycotts a year ago no longer hold, now that we have seen how Japan makes war. The state of international law and the complexity of international relations may constrain countries sometimes to be unwilling accessories to a war; but they should not be permitted to do so when the war is of the kind waged by the Japanese.

Third—and more important. The time has come for a fresh address to the question of selling war materials to Japan—either munitions or materials essential to munitions. For one thing, no legal rationalizing, no philosophical detachment can blur the realization that the United States is and has been for a year accessory after the fact of a war of invasion, a war carried on with a maximum of cruelty, in violation of every article of even the elastic moral code of war. Nor does acquittal at law absolve America from responsibility for the result.

Moreover, in supplying Japan with the means of attempting to conquer China America has been conniving at its own detriment. What has happened to foreign interests at Peiping, Tientsin, Shanghai foreshadows the fate of American interests in the event of Japanese victory. Furthermore, with the rapid exhaustion of Japanese reserves Japan becomes increasingly dependent on American sources of supply and by so much vulnerable to American decision on continued purveyance. Increasingly, then, America becomes Japan's armory for the forging of weapons in the long run directed against itself. It should renounce the role.

The mechanism of the law is an obstacle. Official embargo may still not be practicable. But it is necessary to begin to canvass possibilities for bringing about a cessation of the flow of materials to Japan without contravening the law or definitive new legislation. Provisions for licensing arms shipments offer one means. The kind of pressure that can be levied by the Government to prevent loans to foreign governments is another, if levied in the matter of sales of munitions or materials for munitions. There is still a third. The same end can be achieved as a matter of reprisals.

Some Reprisals That The U. S. Might Use.

THERE HAS been ample ground for reprisals in the past. There will be others in the future. Japan already stands as violator of contractual obligations to the United States, and the Kellogg pact. Japan has committed open offenses such as the sinking of the Panay. It is within the right and the power of the American Government on the occasion of every derogation of American rights or offense against American persons or property to declare by executive order or Congressional resolution that in reprisal therefor the export of some commodity will ge forbidden. If Japan refuses to permit Americans to return to Nanking, as it actually has, in complete violation of all treaty rights, America retaliates by shutting off the supply of copper.

If Japan refuses to evacuate American property such as hospitals, colleges and missions—as it does—America shuts off the supply of iron. If Japanese officials announce that extraterritorial rights are not valid for Americans in zones under Japanese occupation, thus unilaterally abrogating treaties between China and the United States, America shuts off the supply of automobiles. If Japanese military refuse to permit Americans to return to their places of business in the Hongkew and Yangtzepoo districts of Shanghai, as they do, the supply of something else is shut off.

There will be ample opportunities. The offenses of Japan, offenses under international law, are infinite. It is necessary only to read half a dozen issues of the North China Daily News. The dossier of the Department of State must be of prodigious thickness. The means are less important than the end, which is that America must cease being the provisioner of the Japanese army in an aggression abominable in itself and working toward America's injury. The means can be found and they must be found. And organized efforts must be made to find them and to have them put into effect.

Fourth. The possibilities must be canvassed for giving China unofficial but substantial aid in the form of credits. One such possibility is the organization of a syndicate with a mutual or pooled guaranty of credits for purchase of supplies. We have resorted to much more "uneconomic" devices for disposing of surplus products or commodities before, devices of at least as poor a risk. There are industrial enterprises in the United States which would be willing to join, either because of a sympathy with China or a desire to cultivate China's good will and get in on the ground floor of future development.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Paris, Aug. 24.

WHAT WITH the German-Czech problem in front of them and the Italo-German-Spanish problem in their rear, the French can ill afford a serious domestic quarrel about the bonus which should be paid for working more than 40 hours a week. We may be certain that the prime minister, M. Daladier, would not at this critical moment have taken the risks of dividing French opinion and of unsettling his government, had he not been convinced that he was choosing the lesser of two evils.

The risk he chose to run was that of losing the support of the Socialists and thus of precipitating another cabinet crisis now or in November, when the Chamber of Deputies meets again. This is a serious risk, for experience shows that a Fernch cabinet crisis disorganizes the co-operation between London and Paris, and provides Hitler with precisely the kind of opportunity he knows so well how to exploit. No one has forgotten that he seized Austria during the last French cabinet crisis.

ON THE other hand, M. Daladier must have felt that if he did not act now, he would in a short time be confronted not only with a cabinet crisis, but with a financial, monetary and social crisis as well. For there can be no real doubt that the rigid application of the law which makes the hourly rate of wages depend on a theoretical 40-hour week has raised French costs of production to an uneconomical level. The effect on the revenue from taxes, on the costs of rearmament, on private profits is such that, unless it is corrected, another devaluation of the franc would be unavoidable.

Another devaluation, particularly if it came after a demonstration that the government was unable to take measures to avoid it, would be very dangerous politically. It would cause great bitterness within France, and it might very well destroy the tripartite monetary arrangement with Britain and the United States. That would leave France isolated not merely financially, but diplomatically. For the British alliance is strong only when France is strong. A weak and divided France would lose her allies.

AND SO, as between the risks of a dispute with the Socialists and the trades unions on the one hand and the risks of a monetary crisis and a diplomatic disaster on the other, M. Daladier has chosen the lesser of two evils. He has chosen to have an argument with the politicians of the Left on the assumption, no doubt, that, though they must protest publicly, they will not now paralyze the government by any kind of die-hard opposition.

So far as an outside observer has any right to judge a matter of this sort, it seems to me that M. Daladier is justified in thinking that the French working class is far more deeply concerned with the external danger than with the rigid application of the 40-hour law.

His task, I should guess, is to convince the leaders of labor that this is in truth a measure of social reaction disguised as patriotism. It ought not to be too difficult to convince French labor of that. For the Left in France is tremendously preoccupied with the danger of fascism and passionately interested in the European struggle for liberty. One may feel reasonably certain that there will be no political disorder in France now if M. Daladier makes it clear to the working class leaders that he will not waver in his foreign policy.

THE GREATEST risk of all is that the Nazis, failing to understand how democracies work, will think the French are more deeply divided than they really are. Accustomed as they are to crushing and throttling popular opposition, their tendency is to think that the open disagreements of free men are symptoms of degeneracy and of political impotence. They know that an open conflict within a totalitarian state would mean a revolution, and when they see an open conflict in a democracy like France they find it hard to remember that it does not mean what it would mean in Germany. They are continually tempted to delude themselves with the notion that the democracies are disintegrating.

The democracies are not disintegrating. On the contrary, the net effect of the pressure and anxiety to which they are being subjected has been to imbue the common people with a quality of patriotism which they did not feel in 1914. Twenty-five years ago the working class in western Europe was antinationalist and disposed to look upon patriotic nationalism as something that the generals and the big capitalists exploited for their own special interest. The Fascist aggressions have completely altered this attitude, and it is certain that if war came the working class would be perhaps the most angry and determined part of the whole population.

AS A MATTER of fact, the army is the most popular institution in France, and what nonresistant pacifism there is, and there is not much, is to be found today among the conservatives. They hesitate more, they are willing to make more concessions, they are more ready to retreat—some because they are prudent, some because they realize the consequences of a war, some because they have so much personally at stake, and some, not very many, because they rather sympathize with the dictatorships. But so far as the mass of the people are concerned, they are far more ready to endure the worst than they were in 1914.

This is one of the imponderable, but none the less impressive factors that statesmen have to take into account.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Clambake.

A clambake is a shore dinner seen through a magnifying glass and consumed through sheer will power. It is disappearing as an institution in American life. Most of the festivities known as clambakes today would be dismissed by an old-time clambake authority as mere quick lunches, but here and there you find an old-fashioned, four-ply, square-rigged, 100 per cent bake where the slogan is "Don't give up while you still have lifting power!" Commodore Dick's bake at the Milford Yacht Club is one of these.

It has eight courses, takes most of a day to produce, and you can go far into the night stowing it away. Commodore Dick bakes it in one of those old-fashioned iron kettles built in 1854 and dug up by Babe Beach on the shores of the Housatonic. You could cook an elephant in it.

* * * *

The Milford Y. C. bake is no hasty affair; it is a rite, a ceremonial. Commodore Nettleton shows up around sunrise and dedicates the kettle with mystic signs and gestures. The rockweed, without which no New England clambake is complete, is borne from Charles Island up the channel in a decorated boat by six rockweed specialists. Presently the food is rolled up in crates and barrels, and with a fanfare of trumpets sounded by the Wepewaug Fife and Drum Corps, Commodore Dick appears in flowing white apron, cigar in mouth, and begins packing the kettle.

* * * *

Rolls of cheesecloth are carried in by native cheesecloth bearers, two abreast. Various oils, vinegars and condiments appear, as wood is stacked in the firebox. Mr. Dick first packs the round clams (cherry stones, not quahaugs) into the oven as layer No. 1.

* * * *

Over these are packed the potatoes, both sweet and white. The commodore now wraps each bluefish in cheesecloth, with strips of salt pork, and packs them as layer No. 3. Next he takes young roasting chickens, splits 'em, wraps 'em in cheesecloth and you have layer 4. Now comes the corn on cob as layer 5, on top of which is packed the rockweed, which keeps the steam concentrated and flavors the whole business.

* * * *

Then there are the big boiled lobsters! (Let out two more notches in that belt, mister. You can take it.) These are cooked the night before and kept on ice.

* * * *

The clams, by the way, are dipped in a sauce made of butter, mustard, Worcestershire, vinegar, lemon juice and Balm of Indian River.

* * * *

Serve generously and never mind the bicarb. And recuperate Sunday.

P. S.—We forgot the barrel of beer, brown bread, coffee and watermelon.

Off the Record

By Ed Reed

'Youthful Shell'

It was a more or less superior group of American youth which, between 1912 and 1926, produced a large body of important American literature, lifted American poetry to the level of an adult intelligence, developed a national audience for great music, and, above all, created a significant theater. It was, as it has been called, "flaming youth." It drank much too much liquor. Its females wore their skirts above their knees and cursed in public to prove that they were emancipated. Its males and females alike quite generally defied the conventions. But they produced about everything that now makes Americans refer to the decade as "the literary twenties."

If you would ask me what American youth is today, I would reply that it is a shell. If you were to pick it up and shake it, something inside would rattle.

The Racial Issue

By Mark Sullivan

Suffrage In The South.

REPORTS from Georgia and South Carolina say that President Roosevelt's intervention in the primaries of those States has revived the "race issue." That was likely. Mr. Roosevelt ought to have foreseen it. The issue, which is called, according to the point of view, "Negro suffrage" or "white supremacy," was already stirring throughout the South. The issue is deep and goes much farther than these phrases suggest.

The South has a social and political structure which rests upon smallness of the voting population. For example, in South Carolina, only 6 persons vote out of every 100 of the population. In Northern States, on the average, 30 out of every 100 vote.

The South accomplishes this limitation of the electorate in part by requiring payment of a poll tax as a prerequisite to voting. The amount is high enough to deter voting in States where the income of many of the people is very small. For the same purpose, the laws require that the poll tax be paid many months before the primary or election, so that many voters, even if they have the money for the poll tax, will neglect it at a time long in advance of any political contest.

The more or less candid purpose of all this is to deter Negroes from voting. It deters also many whites of low economic status. The result is that most Southern States are controlled and managed by a relatively small electorate which does not include most of the lower economic strata. This condition and all the political, social and industrial conditions that flow from it are now threatened.

THE NEW DEAL has, as part of its spirit and purpose, to bring about greater political power for those whom the New Deal terminology describes as "underprivileged." This includes Southern sharecroppers and laborers, both white and Negro. The purpose is being carried out along several lines. One is a movement to abolish the poll tax in the eight Southern States in which it still exists. The movement has come to success in Florida. In Arkansas it will be passed on in the November election.

In addition to New Deal idealism, there is a practical political reason for assuring suffrage to Negroes in the South. In the 1932 and 1936 Presidential elections, Negroes in Northern cities for the first time voted as a mass for the Democratic ticket. Among the reasons for this was an expectation on the part of Negroes that the Northern Democratic leaders now in control of the party would raise the status of Negroes everywhere, including the South. In one Northern State, Pennsylvania, the Democratic leaders laid down a policy of giving offices to Negroes in proportion to their ratio of the population.

When the South reflects on this new attitude of the Northern Democratic leaders who now control the party, the South sees ahead the end of the limitation of Negro voting which the South has had ever since the Civil War. When the head of the Federal Government, the President, intervenes in a primary in Georgia, the South apprehends as a future possibility, the Federal Government formally intervening in, even controlling, elections and primaries in Southern States. This would mean the end of that white domination which, on the ballots of some Southern States, expresses itself in the official declaration "white supremacy."

FREQUENTLY, 40 or more years ago, Federal control of elections in the South was proposed by the Republicans. At that time the Republicans had the Negro vote in the North, and they made the same attempt to pay their debt which the South now fears the Democratic Party may attempt. In the past it was supposed that even if such a measure were passed by Congress it would be held unconstitutional by the Supreme Court. But everybody knows the court has changed, in the direction of upholding measures which greatly extend the power of the Federal Government within the States.

General participation of Negroes in Southern primaries and elections would be as revolutionary as anything the New Deal has proposed. In two Southern States, South Carolina and Mississippi, and in many counties of other States, the Negroes are a majority of the population. And in many places where they are not a majority their number is large.

We live in strange times. In every area of life during the past few years, points of view have been reversed. For 70 years the principal political tenets of the South, dominating all others, was to oppose the Republican Party. The reason largely was because it feared the Republican Party might bring Negro suffrage. If the South fears the Democratic Party may bring Negro suffrage, that change in point of view would be revolutionary.

Hungary's Dilemma

By Barnet Nover

The Fly In The Magyar Ointment.

HUNGARY'S international situation appears, at first glance, to be a wholly enviable one.

The kingdom of the Magyars is today the most courted of nations. Her friendship is eagerly sought by all her neighbors. She continues to enjoy the eager patronage of Italy. She is being ogled by Hitler, who has lavished on Admiral Horthy, the Hungarian regent, now visiting the Third Reich, attentions hitherto shown only to Mussolini. And even Hungary's erstwhile enemies, the Little Entente powers—Czechoslovakia, Yugoslovia, Rumania—have recently gone out of their way to show their good will toward her.

At Bled this week, the Little Entente agreed to remove the legal restrictions on Hungary's right to rearm and they have also promised better treatment for the Magyar minorities within their respective borders. And for the first time since that bitter day 18 years ago when the Treaty of Trianon was signed and Hungary was forced to relinquish two-thirds of her prewar territory, the prospects of regaining some of these lost lands is more than academic.

BUT THERE is a large fly in Hungary's ointment. If the strategic position which she occupies in the Europe of today is a blessing, it is also a curse. Her statesmen have reason to believe that the gifts being showered upon her by her neighbors are Greek gifts. They more than half suspect that the fruit for which over a period of 18 years their mouths have watered and which now appears to be so near their grasp is Dead Sea fruit.

When Austria disappeared some months ago, it was not Czechoslovakia alone, but also Hungary as well, that found itself in the path of the Nazi juggernaut. Of the two, Czechoslovakia appeared to be in greater peril. Surrounded on three sides by an aggressive and enlarged Third Reich, Czechoslovakia's independence appeared to hang in the balance. It still does.

THE PLIGHT of Czechoslovakia aroused little sympathy in Hungary. On the contrary, there was rejoicing in certain Magyar circles over the prospect that one of the principal beneficiaries of the post-war partition of Hungary would herself be partitioned. In that event, Hungary might regain Slovakia, which she had lost to the Czechs and some 800,000 Magyars and possbly some millions of Slovaks as well would again be under Hungarian rule. Indeed, the Magyar press campaign against Czechoslovakia has been as virulent as that of the Nazis.

The break-up of Czechoslovakia, however, has proved no easy accomplishment. When an invasion theatened last May the Prague government mobilized its man power, won the support of France and Great Britain, not to mention Russia, and forced Hitler to abandon whatever plans he might have had to intimidate or conquer Czechoslovakia. When that happened, Hungary found herself in a far from happy position. For if Hitler is permanently unable to surmount the "bastion of Bohemia," he may, in pursuance of his plans to expand to the east, use the Hungarian corridor as an alternative.

THERE IS no important German minority, oppressed or otherwise, in Hungary. The Third Reich cannot use that convenient excuse to put pressure on the Budapest government to win it over to a German orientation in its foreign policy. But the existence in Hungary of a virulent Nazi movement reflecting the ideology and probably receiving the support of the Third Reich shows that Hungary is not outside the purview of Hitler's ambitions.

As it happens the Nazi movement in Hungary constitutes a double peril for the present rulers of that kingdom. In the first place the success of such a movement would make Hungary wholly a satellite of Germany, fiercely proud of their independence as they are, the Magyars certainly do not want that to happen. But of equal importance is the fact that the Magyar Nazis have cleverly capitalized the grievances arising out of the fact that almost alone among the states that were carved out of the old Hapsburg monarchy, Hungary kept its prewar land system unchanged. Out of a population of 9,000,000, 3,000,000 are landless peasants. On the other hand some families have estates running into the hundreds of thousands of acres.

IF LAND reform, with the great landlords as the object of their wrath, has been one aspect of the Nazi program in Hungary, anti-Semitism has been another. This latter represents an attempt to capitalize prejudices, by no means confined to Hungary, of rural against urban elements, of farmers against industrialists. And to a large extent industry and commerce have been dominated by Jews and when not by Jews by Germans.

The reason for this lies largely in the fact that the Magyar magnates despised industry and commerce and would have nothing to do with it. But insofar as Jews are eliminated from Hungary's business and professional life the likelihood is that their places will be taken by German elements, thus increasing the grip which Germany already has on Hungary's economy which depends, to no small extent, on the German market for the disposal of surplus products and finds in Germany the principle source of supply.

To meet the Nazi agitation, however, the Budapest government recently put through some half-way measures whose moderation lies only in the fact that they are not as extreme as those put through by the Third Reich.

* * * *

IN ANY EVENT Hungary's position on the flank of an enlarged and ambitious Germany is hardly a happy one. She cannot afford to pursue a policy hostile to the Third Reich. But too close collaboration with Germany also involves very grave dangers. It might prove tantamount to a collaboration between a lion and a lamb with Hungary in the role of a lamb. On the other hand the desire for territorial revision is so deeply ingrained that any peace offering by the Little Entente short of a promise of restoration of territory is likely to prove unsatisfactory to the Budapest government. Yet improved relations, economic and political, with the Little Entente states would serve not merely as an offset to German pressure but might, with the assistance which Great Britain and France may provide, bring about an improvement in Hungary's economic situation and reduce her dependence on the Third Reich which now takes more than 40 per cent of her exports.

Hungary has far more to gain than to lose by a policy of friendly neutrality as between Germany and the Little Entente. But whether Hitler will permit her to play such a game is far from certain.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

There comes to hand a journal (tabloid) called "Headlines and What's Behind Them." According to a "box" at the top of Page 1, the paper contains "All the Facts That Should Be Printed," and is addressed to "speakers, writers and students." The real mission, after one has read it, seems toward unloading on WPA's Aubrey Williams.

The paper would have one believe that the WPA deputy administrator is a Red of the first color, that he wears whiskers and connives on the convenient dark of every moon with all the Russian emissaries in this land. The paper, the masthead indicates, is published by the Constitutional Educational League, Inc.; one Joseph Kamp is the editor and the editorial offices are in New York City.

The news columns bear down on Commonwealth College at Mena, Ark., jumps on Jacob Baker, of the U. F. W. A., and urges all not to lend their copies of "Headlines and What's Behind Them." But if anyone wants to borrow the one we have, it is available at our desk.

Also, there comes to hand a subtle letter in reply to our recent statement that many Federal workers here are heavily-laden with homesickness. There was no intention on our part to be funny over the issue of homesickness. We recognize the pains of the malady, and know that its sting troubleth both by day and night.

We sought to make only one point: That the most homesick of all seems to be those from the American West. If they are not in the majority, then at least they talk more of it than those who long for their old Kentucky home, or for their homes in Maine or Georgia or Pennsylvania or Michigan. We must repeat, in interest of fact, that the Far Westerners make more of their nostalgia than the others. So we wrote of the Westerners' pangs, and there comes this answering letter:

"Don't you think that this feeling of homesickness is not confined to Federal employes only? Don't you agree that it's been experienced by every thinking, sensitive person who ever found himself on foreign soil?

"Witness the popular song classic, 'The Hills of Home,' the poem, Oh, to Be in England, Now That April's There,' and Millay's 'Inland.' What about 'My Old Kentucky Home,' 'Carry Me Back to Old Virginia' and the immortal 'There's No Place Like Home?'

"You see, I'm not alone. Whereas we try very hard to be smart and brilliant and cynical, I think deep in his heart every man longs for the place where he was born."

Every man certainly should feel that way about it. And if he doesn't "go mark him well, for him no minstrel raptures swell." And we are not cynical; homesickness is to be approved of in all its forms. It is the great American institution that demonstrates the individual's inborn love for his backyard and the morning smells of good American bacon frying on a good American-made stove. It yet may save the Republic, even if it is painful and keeps one awake at night.

Notes.

Lucille Foster McMillin, Civil Service Commissioner, treats again on her favorite topic, women in the Government, saying:

"I am at once reminded that the postal service in Maryland is of particular interest . . . for three of the earliest women in the Federal service of whom we have any record were Maryland postmasters. Miss Mary K. Goddard, one of the outstanding women of the Revolutionary period, was postmaster at Baltimore from 1775 until late in 1789. . . . The other two pioneer women postmasters were Mrs. Elizabeth Cresswell, who served as postmaster at Charlestown, Md., under the Continental Congress, from 1786 to 1787, and Mrs. Rebecca Morton, at Warwick, from 1798 to 1799." . . . The first rehearsal of the Union Playhouse Chorus (N.F.F.E. auspices) will be held at 8 this evening in the north Interior auditorium; Howard R. Green, composer and choral leader, of Croton and Buffalo, N. Y., will conduct the newly organized chorus. Those who want to joint may appear at the first rehearsal.

Uncle Sam continues to move and shift his people and files about: The new Civil Aeronautics Authority now occupying the space of the bureau of air commerce, Commerce Building, gets an additional 10,000 square feet of space for expansion purposes in the Garfinckel Building; the second floor at 505 K street, containing 9,000 square feet, and the second and third floors at 800 E street, containing 8,600 square feet, have been leased for the employment service, Labor Department; the matter of providing the PWA and USHA with 40,000 square feet of additional space—about one-tenth more than these agencies now occupy in the north Interior Building—necessitated many changes that have shunted employes to office buildings and remodeled garages all over town. Most of the moves have been unpopular with the employes.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married for three years and I have a small son, 18 months old. Before marriage, my husband was most considerate and polite, and, so I thought, everything a man should be. I married him after we had been going together for about two months, accepting him in preference to another young man who had been courting me for three years. After my marriage, I was very happy for about three months, when qualities in my husband which I had never suspected began to crop up.

• • • •

I found he was an habitual drinker and he was being unfaithful to me occasionally. He drank a great deal and during the times he was drunk, verbally abused me. However, he always provided for my son and me and, when sober, apologized profusely for his conduct during the drunken spells. Still, he continued to drink, to abuse me and to apologize afterward. His mother, who lives with us, defends him and his conduct during these spells and places the blame on me.

• • • •

Recently I met on the street the young man with whom I had kept company for three years prior to my marriage. Later, he called on me once at home. He adores my son and actually pays more attention to him than my husband does. Two months after that meeting, I had dinner with him, and since then have gone to the theater with him several times. My husband's drinking meanwhile continued and I began slowly to detest him. I realized that the other man was the one I really loved, and that my mistake had been in taking him too much for granted.

• • • •

He has told me he still loves me and we are seeing each other about twice a week. I finally decided to tell my husband and ask for a divorce on grounds of mental cruelty and unfaithfulness. This I did, in the presence of his mother. I think he knew I had grounds for a divorce, as he took no action but only begged me, "for the sake of the love we once knew," not to leave him. He promised to stop drinking. His mother asked me to stay for my son's sake. She said he would be handicapped by the move I contemplated.

• • • •

I do not love my husband but I do not wish to hurt my son. The young man who would marry me, says that although he loves me very deeply, he would not wish to hurt me or my son. I know he does not wish to break up a supposed home, but instead wishes, and is able to, give my son and me a far better home than the one we now have. What should I do? Trustingly,

ETIENNETTE.

Three Rotten Planks.

DEAR ETIENNETTE: In my opinion, any mother is justified in removing her child from the sphere of influence exerted by a drunken, abusive father. I believe it is far better for a child that he be reared under the paternal influence of an honorable, kindly, dependable, adequately self-governing foster-father, than that he be subjected to continuous association with an actual father who is an unmoral alcoholic addict. I believe your mother-in-law is wrong in arguing that your son would be handicapped "by the move you contemplate."

• • • •

Now, while he is so young that the disappearance of his real father from the domestic picture would leave scarcely a trace on his memory or emotions, is the time to make a drastic change in your marital set-up, if it is ever to be made. If his father's place should be taken by a foster-father who is the right sort of person, a man who has a genuine paternal instinct, the child would give him filial love as naturally as a flower opens to the sun. His own father would become a legend and possibly an acquaintance, but he would be a casual figure outside his life, while his foster-father became an ever more dearly loved and respected philosopher, guide and friend—which, after all, is the father's true and best role in a boy's life.

• • • •

I would have greater faith in your character and judgment, in your ability to appraise this situation accurately and act accordingly, if you had not indulged yourself in an extra-marital courtship with your former sweetheart before coming to the decision that you detest your husband and that he is unfit to live with. It gives rise to the thought that you may be actuated here more by sentimental and rather unfounded hopes, by cannily self-seeking considerations, than by incontrovertible logic and rock-bottom common sense, in plotting a divorce from your husband.

• • • •

Not that chronic alcoholism and infidelity aren't indisputably sound reasons for divorce—for they are. Psychiatrists tell us that few modern marriages survive where either chronic alcoholism, infidelity or financial insecurity exist. Any one o these three factors is apt to prove utterly demoralizing to family life. Such rotten planks in the platform of marriage inexorably estrange mates and play havoc with the character development of children.

• • • •

It isn't that your husband's conduct, of itself, hasn't warranted thoughtful consideration of divorce as the best protective measure for your son and preservative measure for yourself; but that you should have been content to accept the situation until another man entered the picture, which causes one to wonder if you know now just what you are doing, and why, and where you are going from here.

• • • •

However, if you are absolutely certain that your old sweetheart is the right sort of man, an upright, honorable, dependable citizen; that he is unselfishly and protectively devoted to your son; that he does wish to marry you and will marry you if and when you are free to marry again—then it seems to me that Providence itself has supplied the solution of your marital dilemma. The only thing wrong with the picture, to my rather disillusioned eyes, is that it seems too good to be true. But miracles of deliverance such as this do happen now and again, and if it is your good fortune to be invited to play a stellar role in such real-life drama, by all means set machinery in motion for having done with this husband and father who has been tried and found wanting, and marry that man whom you lacked the seasoned judgment to appreciate three years ago.

• • • •

Disregard your mother-in-law's arguments and appeals, as sentimental and prejudicial. She is probably thinking too much in terms of her own and her son's happiness. She probably can't bear to see him made excessively unhappy, no matter what he has done to deserve such punishment, and she probably dreads the prospect of losing intimate, daily contact with her grandchild.

Modern Junior Miss Will Exhibit Her Curves This Season, Says Ellen Kaye, Arbiter and Designer of Sub-deb Styles

By Marshall Adams.

"ACCENT on youth means accent on bust," observed the sage little Ellen Kaye, who is nationally known as the creator of clever junior miss designs. Miss Kaye, who made a personal appearance here yesterday at a local store along with her newest fall frocks, seemed qualified to make such a statement. Her own frock gave its all to emphasize a tiny waist, a boxy shoulder line and a raised bosom.

What the toy-sized girl of 11 to 17 should seek out and what she should avoid in style trends and established modes were discussed by Miss Kaye. "The junior lass," she said; "can wear more amusing hats and accessories than any other type because she can be a trifle frivolous if she dares and never look conspicuous in either size or height. Shoulders should always be accented for a tiny figure, for they create the illusion of balance necessary to the full skirts being worn this year. Puffed sleeves, very short and demure, are becoming to all juniors, save, of course, little girls with pudgy arms."

Square Necklines.

Square necklines accent the bosom more cleverly than any other cut, believes Miss Kaye. "It is such a pleasure to realize this," she said, "because the squared neck treatment, borrowed last year from the peasants, is in high fashion favor in this day of dirndls and nursery rhymes. Shirring is one of the most flattering methods of uplifting the bust line, and as this line must be the point of interest, all sorts of intricate new tricks in tucking, pleating, gathering and boning have been subtly put to work to give the fall junior a sharply defined up-swing. As juniors are usually girls in their teens or just turned 20, they adore this sweet girl enchantment stitched into the tops of their frocks."

"The waist line is, of course, important in every junior's life because it must be as infinitesimal as possible. In other words, a waist must just be a necessary connecting link between bust and hips and must be unnoticed. With corsets and girdles being worn on the outsides of dresses, there is no such thing as a waist for size 11 or 13. Although even very little girls are striving for an ultra feminine figure this fall, hips and legs are underemphasized by means of plain circular skirts or flatly pleated dirndls.

That Dirndl's Here Again.

The dirndl brings me back to certain styles that smaller sized girls should not wear. Surprisingly enough, although the dirndl is very full below the waist, it is not broadening, and almost every junior can wear this style with success. She was made for this reigning mode and its astounding past success will make it high style even for spring. Just as she fits into clever pert clothes, the smaller girl must never attempt over statuesque garments or over dressing. Her sense of humor must be confined to chic touches such as acorn buttons which I have strung up the front of one of my new Shepherds plaid shirtwaist designs, or a mad money purse no bigger than a minute which I tucked on to one of my beige jersey classics, merely to remind the escort that although the wearer may be very inadequate in height or weight, she is cautious and wise."

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

'Design for Living.'

Oh, I'm so glad I ran on to you! Did you know the Leech County crowd was having a picnic next Saturday? . . . Yes, I was just going to call you up to tell you Bert and I would drive you out . . . Oh, but you simply MUST go . . . Oh, but you won't have to go to any trouble—you can just whip up a cake . . . and fix some deviled eggs and some sandwiches and a bowl of potato salad . . . No, now don't make any excuses; Bert and I are coming by and get you, so you might as well be ready.

"Well, what have you been doing with yourself all summer? . . . Busy? . . . Oh you're the busiest woman in the world. You know you really ought to get out more Say, have you played any golf? . . . What! you don't mean to tell me you don't play golf; . . . Oh, you simply must learn! I tell you, Bert can teach you to play golf . . . Oh, he'll love it. We'll all go out together some Sunday—What? . . . Oh, you can, too!; why ANYBODY can learn to play golf.

"Has it been terribly hot out at your place . . . It has! Say you know what you ought to have: One of those little iced ventilators like we've got . . . Oh, no, they're very inexpensive . . . Say, I tell you what! The man's coming today to finish installing ours and I'll just give him your name and address—oh, but you don't have to pay for it NOW . . . Well anyway I'll send him out. No, he's perfectly lovely, and he can explain everything.

"What's your book? . . . No, I haven't! Well, you don't know what you what you simply MUST read—"One Woman" . . . Have you ever read any of Gimlet's stuff? . . . You haven't! Well, you don't know what you've missed. Say, I tell you. I've got a lot of his things. I'll bring them right over for you. Oh, and I tell you what else I've got, "Peter Penguin" . . . Yes, the one everybody's talking about. It's in two volumes . . . Oh, but once you get started you simply can't lay it down . . . No, it won't be a bit of trouble. No, I really WANT to do it.

"You know that's one thing about belonging to the Harmony Club—you hear about all the good books. Say you know you ought to belong to that club . . . Oh, but it really doesn't take hardly any time and they're such a lovely group . . . and they give such lovely teas—what? . . . Oh, now don't talk that way. You've got just as much time as anybody else . . . Oh, but really it's an honor to be asked by the Harmony Club; they're very particular—now, now, don't take that attitude. You really owe it to yourself . . . Well, don't care what you say, I'm going to put your name up this fall . . . Yes, I am, too.

"Well, I've got to run along. I've got to meet Adelaide Tinkle—say, do you know Adelaide? . . . You don't. You'd be crazy about Adelaide. She does such interesting things . . . Yes, I know none of us keep up with our friends the way we should, but just the same it'd mean a lot to you to know Adelaide . . . Well, I'm simply going to see that you two get together. I tell you. I'll have you and Adelaide over some day to play bridge; Oh, yes, and Marie Putter. That's another one you ought to know. She's simply fascinating . . . You'll all enjoy each other SO much.

"Well, I simply must go—but say—I'll let you know what time we'll be by Saturday for the picnic . . . What . . . Oh you are, too, going . . . Yes, you've simply GOT to go. Why the Leech County crowd would never forgive you . . . No, no, now I won't listen to any excuses: We'll be by for you. And say: Don't forget what I said about Bert teaching you to play golf."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Aug. 24.

MY SECOND headlong attack on New England brought comfort to this pore old body and peace to this troubled soul, for it took me to Stockbridge, Mass., for the second half of the symphonic festival for 1938. So cool was it in those beautiful and everlasting Berkshire Hills that we slept beneath blankets at night, and the sweet sounds emitted by the Boston Symphony sounded sweeter and grander than ever in the new $80,000 "shed"—oh, these modest Brahmins!—just built on the beautiful estate called Tanglewood, where once Nathaniel Hawthorne lived, labored and looked at one of the most beautiful views in this land.

ALICE HUGHES.

It's mature and gracious land, up there at the western end of Massachusetts, with its green hills, its blue lakes and murmuring streams. Nearly 6,000 people heard the music nightly—mostly swells from the big estates, music-mad pilgrims from everywhere, and just people like me. Dear old ladies, wearing their wardrobes of the '80s, are literally wheeled in to hear the concerts. Never was there a finer setting for Tschaikowsky's "Pathetic," or Beethoven's "Pastoral" symphonies, both of which I heard. To my great regret I missed the deathless Ninth.

One of my brothers-in-law, Pierre Mayer, is a valued fiddler with that almost worshiped band, and so rehearsals and other perquisites were open to us. We sat in the second row at an all-Wagner program, which was like getting thumped over the head with a club, and which produced amusing sidelights. First, my Cornell sophomore niece, Barbara, slept through 1 hour and 5 minutes of the stormy "Siegfried" music, and at the finale of the "Die Walkuere" excerpts Maestro Koussevitzky shot out his left fist and came within two inches of popping tenor soloist Paul Althouse right on the nose. These trivial episodes helped lighten the chi-chi always attendant on deep-dish concerts.

GIRL ABOUT STOCKBRIDGE—This Boston orchestra is unique in our country. No organization is so lauded, or so regarded with an almost superstitious awe. Its conductor, Dr. Koussevitzky, is a formidable personage in his territory, respected even by those who do not precisely love him. Interestingly, a great power behind the band is his lady wife, a small, retiring person whose influence is incalculable.

• • • •

One of the Wagner soloists was blonde Anna Kaskas, pride of Hartford, Conn. (along with Katie Hepburn, of course). Anna is now a Metropolitan songbird, and certainly has one of the loveliest, richest mezzo-sopranos to come along in years.

• • • •

Symphony rehearsals are much more fun than the actual concerts, with the boys wearing what they choose and Koussy behaving less like a conductor than a college cheer-leader, whooping on the lads in several languages, including growls and roars. These are a sort of musical Esperanto.

• • • •

There is much gossip before the rehearsal and during the breathing spells—shop talk, family and professional gibble-gabble. One sunny morning the men were loitering outside the "shed" (which is open to the breezes on all sides) when Koussevitzky's valet turned up, toting the maestro's tweed cape and a load of scores. The violinist with whom I had been chatting noted his approach. "Ah," he said, "Papa comes!" and away he trotted with his fiddle, like a good little boy.

• • • •

The orchestra wives usually turn up at rehearsals. Some listen, and a good many knit. As Papa coaxed and whipped the boys through Beethoven, I felt like tacking a sign on the podium, which would read, simply, "110 Men at Work." For that's what they are doing——making great beauty on order.

The finest looking woman in all the thousands at Stockbridge was, in my opinion, Mrs. George Mager, wife of the first trumpeter. Her gray hair is done in a close shingle, and she is very simple and gracious. And lovely.

In the Berkshires we stayed at the simple home of Mr. and Mrs. U. S. A. Houk. He's a retired traveling salesman who opens his house, like all the rest, to the pilgrims during August. My poor old spouse found great joy in rising at 7 and breakfasting with the family, trading reminiscences of Kansas City and St. Louis and Des Moines and other places both had touched in their various ramblings. He also enjoyed the five Houk cats, ranging from small, jittery tigers to a long, lean, black and white tom with the loudest, best-carrying voice in New England!

Family Pictures Make Problem In Decoration

Should Not Be Hung in Guest Room or Parlor.

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

BOOKS and pictures, that's a combination that, to ladies great and small, means home. It is said that Queen Mary always carries framed photographs of her beloved family with her to make every room she occupies in her busy life seem homelike. That's all very well, we can hear some ladies say, but what about all those enlarged snapshots, those studio portraits of Junior at the age of 6 and Sister in her christening robe and graduation pictures and wedding pictures? You never see any of these on display in those extremely orderly, very correct decorator rooms.

We have seen such intimate family mementoes thrust willy nilly into living rooms cluttering up piano tops and library tables and hanging slap-dash on walls and creating a general feeling of disquiet. And yet we have also seen the question of family pictures solved so attractively that, if you haven't collected an array over the years, you might wish you had.

Panel on Wall.

There was the lady with a lovely old square piano. She placed this in her library and had all those family photos framed in a uniform size in black wood to match the piano. Then she sighted an imaginary panel on the wall behind the piano and hung all the pictures within that panel.

Another homemaker had her photographs mounted in fine paper folders and enclosed them all in a beautiful Moroccan leather envelope which lies on top of the library table. Here she can pour over them herself to her heart's content and show them to interested friends and relatives. Yet they do not cause any cluttery feeling in her lovely living room. And the folder idea is grand for keeping a series of pictures in chronogical order, too.

Whatever you do with your family "album," there are a few dont's to remember. Don't have large frames of intimate subjects on small tables where the not-too-careful menfolk will knock them over. Don't hang them in your guest room! If you hang them on one wall in a room, make a group of them, keeping the frames of harmonious design and balanced size to avoid a higgledy-piggledy appearance. Such a grouping can be charming.

Beauty Began at 40 for Fat Woman

By Ida Jean Kain.

ONCE UPON a time there was a woman of 40 who had let her weight get up to 225 pounds and who was suddenly confronted with the problem of earning her living. She formerly had been a model for the perfect size 38, but at this point her figure was a long way from a perfect anything. The story of how she got her figure in shape and her old job back will be an inspiration to every woman . . . and it's a true story.

Her intention was not just to bring her weight to normal. She had to perfect her measurements and keep her vitality high, and to accomplish all these things her program had to be good. The first step was a visit to her doctor, who assured her that she was in excellent health, but that she was 55 pounds overweight. She got her doctor's permission to lose that excess weight in six months on a diet high in vitamins, minerals and protein, restricted in carbohydrates, and extremely low in fat.

Hips Big Problem.

Her entire figure was out of line, but the greatest measurement problems were the waistline and hips. The following were her figure measurements: Bust, 41 inches; waistline, 36 inches; hips, 46 inches. It took a carefully planned set of exercises to change her to: Bust, 36 inches; waist, 29 inches; hips, 39 inches.

She found that as she reduced her weight she lost gradually through the bust, but to prevent a sagging of the contour she took specific exercises to strengthen the pectoral muscles. There were several of these exercises, but one in particular is so novel and so effective that I want you to try it:

To reduce the hip line get down on all fours and kick backward. Also walking on all fours is a good exercise to limber up the muscles.

Place a crock or fairly heavy vase on the floor in front of you. Then without bending the knees or letting the tummy sag, swing over from the waist, lift the crock in both hands and raise it high overhead. Return the crock to the floor without bending the knees, rest for a second, and repeat five times. Primarily for the pectoral muscles, the exercise proved extremely effective in slimming the waist and flattening the tummy.

Helpful Kicking.

The hipline was most out of proportion, and one of her favorite exercises was the kicking type. You simply get down on the floor on all fours, with knees slightly bent. Alternately kick the legs out backward vigorously, raising the leg as high as possible and straightening it in the backward thrust. You must put force behind your kicking exercises to slim the hips, but the exercise given here is strenuous. Stop when you begin to feel tired.

To smooth out the bunches of fat on the sides of the hips she used a massage trick, cupping the hands and working them up and down the hipline in a smart, spanking movement. She also used massage to help firm the calf muscles and reduce the lower leg. You can sit or lie back on the floor to do this: Raise alternate legs and, grasping the ankle firmly in both hands, move the hands up the leg as the leg is slowly lowered.

No Figure Hopeless.

She wanted me to tell you that no figure problem is hopeless . . . that any women can remake her figure if she will follow a balanced diet and exercise for 45 minutes a day. She knows because she did it, and she got her job back.

HIGH VITAMIN DIET FOR REDUCING.

BREAKFAST.

Heat Fails to Conquer Army and Navy Gayety

Others May Flee to Shore or Mountains, but Service Society Stands Fast in Round of Parties and Entertainments in Capital.

It takes more than the summer vagaries of a thermometer to destroy the reputation which the Army and Navy have for gayety. While the wives of most men in Capital society have long since fled the city for the seashore or mountains, service wives continue at their husband's side, hot weather or no, and are frequently hosts at informal dinners, teas and cocktail parties.

Supposedly there's "nobody in town," yet the Army and Navy Country Club is thronged every day. The golf course is crowded, the swimming pools likewise, and the lawns are dotted with the offspring of service families taking their ease in the sun. Nigh onto a thousand members jammed a dance held recently on the club's roof, setting a record for the summer, although every Saturday evening finds a good many there.

Gen., Mrs. Adams To Entertain

Yesterday a number of the Army's younger married set drove out to the residence of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Emory S. Adams, on Woodland drive, for the cocktail party they gave for their son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. James Y. Adams. The junior Adamses, who arrived earlier in the week from Fort Benning, Ga., for a visit wtih the lieutenant's parents, will be honored again on Saturday evening with a dinner to be given by Gen. and Mrs. Adams. They will return next week to the Georgia Army post.

West Point seems to be a tradition with members of this family. Gen. and Mrs. Adams' younger son, Emory S. Adams, will be a second-class man there this year. He is now at home enjoying his "yearling furlough," the two-month leave, which is the only one of any length the budding officers are allowed during their West Point career. Young men on furlough, incidentally, are extended guest privileges at the Army and Navy Country Club, which explains why there have been so many cadets at dances there recently.

Cadet Adams is chairman of the general committee for the annual dinner dance and "furlough hop" of the Class of '38 at the Academy, which will be held on Sunday evening in the roof garden of the Hotel Astor in New York. Hal Kemp and his orchestra will furnish the music.

Farewell Parties For McDonalds

Much Army entertaining this month has centered around farewell parties for departing officers and their wives. Among the most feted were Col. and Mrs. Donald C. McDonald, who have been ordered to Hawaii. They left yesterday by motor for Long Island, where they will visit Mrs. McDonald's sister, Mrs. C. A. Weymouth, until September 1, when they will sail on an Army transport for the island territory. One of their daughters, Miss Mary McDonald, accompanied them, but their other daughter, Miss Nancy, will remain in Washington until just before sailing time.

Col. and Mrs. McDonald were honored on Monday evening at a dinner given by Col. and Mrs. L. C. Sparks at the Army-Navy Club. Others who entertained for them recently were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waring, and Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, chief of Field Artillery, and Mrs. Danford. Col. McDonald, who has been with the Bureau of Insular Affairs here, was one of a commission sent to the Philippines to investigate conditions there before the islands were granted independence.

To return to Maj. Gen. Danford —he will leave September 17 to join Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum at Fort Knox, Ky., to take part in conferences there.

George Morrises Back From Northern Tour

Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris have returned from a motor trip of several weeks in the North, and are at their residence on Kalorama circle.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris stopped for a brief stay in New York on their way back to Washington, and were at the Biltmore.

Miss Hartge Weds.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis A. Hartge, of Eastport, announce the marriage of their daughter, Agnes Marion, to James K. Moreland, of Annapolis, on August 20 at Baldwin Memorial Church at Severn Crossroads, Md.

Carolan Getty Nuptials Held

Becomes Albert Armstrong's Bride at Ceremony at Woodside.

In a quiet ceremony last evening at the Grace Episcopal Church at Woodside, Md., Miss Carolan Bryant Getty, daughter of George Graham Getty and the late Mrs. Getty, became the bride of Albert Henry Armstrong, son of Mrs. Edith Armstrong and the late James Armstrong. The Rev. Richard Aselford officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony.

Standing before an altar banked with palms and white hydrangea, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her wedding gown was of white net with a sequin bodice and sequins in a sprinkled effect on the wide-flowing net skirt. The sleeves of the gown were formed by a small net cape that fell from the shoulders, and her shoulder length veil was held by a net turban fashioned like a coronet. She carried a white satin prayer book from which fell a shower of lilies of the valley. There were no attendants.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. George R. Cook and John Hutchinson Cook, of Trenton, N. J.; Miss Cecilia Hutchinson, of Bordentown, N. J.; Mrs. John T. Hutchinson, of Columbus, N. J., and Miss Gertrude Newbold, of Bordentown.

The bride attended George Washington University and was a member of the Kappa Delta Sorority while there. She is a graduate of Columbia University and is on the faculty of the Macfarland Junior High School in Washington.

Lillian Emerson Is Hit in London

God-Daughter of Mrs. Townsend Scores in 'Golden Boy.'

It may be Hollywood next for Lillian Emerson, who has so impressed people with her role in the London production of "Golden Boy" that several movie companies are clamoring for her services, according to word recently received from the British capital.

Widely known in Capital society, Miss Emerson has frequently visited here as the guest of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Capital music patron, and her god-mother. She is the daughter of Mrs. Townsend's old friend, Mrs. Franklin S. Terry of New York, and appeared here last winter in an important role in "Spring Thaw." Mrs. Townsend gave a theater party to celebrate the occasion.

After a debut in New York and a presentation at the Court of St. James's, Miss Emerson married William Harts, son of Gen. William Wright Harts, former Military Attache at the United States Embassy in Paris, and Mrs. Harts, who have a home in Washington and another in Madison, Conn. Their marriage ended in divorce a few years later.

Miss Emerson plays in London the leading role made famous by Frances Farmer in "Golden Boy." The play will come to this country in the autumn to go on tour and it is probable that Washington will be included in the itinerary.

Mrs. H. G. Courtney Slated to Head Letter Carriers' Auxiliary Again

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. H. G. Courtney, of Norwalk, Iowa, who now heads the Ladies' Auxiliary to the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association, is expected to be nominated this morning for re-election for the second term.

The first day of the annual convention of the organization which opened yesterday at the Mayflower was devoted to preliminaries and not until this morning will the credentials committee complete its report and delegates be seated. Pre-election forecasts indicate that not only Mrs. Courtney but all of the officers serving with her will be proposed for re-election, practically without opposition.

There is no slate prepared and all nominations will be made from the floor this morning, with voting set for tomorrow. The only office which must be filled by a new candidate this year is that of chairman of the executive committee from which Mrs. Welch Newman, of Riviera, Calif., is retiring after her third term.

Other officers serving with Mrs. Courtney are Mrs. Ralph Fifield, of Thetford Center, Vt., who is completing her first year as vice president; Mrs. Marten Merryfield, Middlefield, Ohio, her second year as secretary, and Mrs. F. M. Phinney, of Bentonville, Ark., her third year as treasurer.

Representative Jenckes Addresses Meeting

An address at the opening session by Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, was a feature of the first day's program. She returned to Washington especially to address the convention, responding to an invitation extended to her for the third year. She also attended the banquet and spoke briefly there last night and leaves this morning for French Lick Springs, Ind., to speak before the Indiana Democratic Editorial Association.

She commended the women for their part in keeping up the standard of rural mail delivery by maintaining comfortable and happy homes for their husbands, who are the carriers.

Her advocacy of mail service to every farm door was received with enthusiastic applause. Cutting down the number of rural carriers and consolidation of their routes may be an economy measure for the postoffice but means more hours of toil and energy for the farmer who has far to go for his mail, she pointed out.

She urged the women to accept the responsibility of citizenship and to cast their ballot in every election.

Her address was shifted from the afternoon to the morning program. It included also an invocation by Mrs. Clark Hart, of Iowa; the address of welcome by Mrs. Martha McDevitt, of Washington and responses given by Mrs. Clara Russell, of Michigan; Mrs. William P. McCarty, Alabama; Mrs. Kenneth Taylor, North Carolina; Mrs. Aubrey Smith, Arizona, and Mrs. B. M. Weigner, of Kansas.

The Nightingale Sisters of Oklahoma, provided the music for the program. They are Sylvia, who plays the marimba; Vada, the piano accordion, and Lorene, the piano. They wore red dresses, red pill-box hats with straps under their chins and red shoes. Appearing with them were two other Oklahoma girls, the Ford Sisters—Phyllis Jeanne, who played the flute and Maravon, who made a chalk drawing during the musical numbers. The girls also entertained on the men's program.

The Ladies' Auxiliary and Junior Auxiliary joined last night with the association in a banquet which was one of the largest social affairs of the convention.

'All-Star' Program For Junior Auxiliary

The Junior Auxiliary held its first formal program yesterday afternoon, with Walter Johnson and L. V. Nichols, of the Department of Justice as speakers.

The latter described the work of Federal agents in curbing and detecting crime, assuring the young people there was no mystery about the methods of crime detection. Its success is due largely to the adaptability and resourcefulness of the men in the service, he told them.

Quoting figures on the cost of crime to each individual in the country, Mr. Nichols asserted, "It is your job and mine to bring about a better attitude which combats those forces which permit crime to happen."

Both Mr. Nichols and Mr. Johnson were greeted with spontaneous applause and when the small boys caught sight of the boxes of balls under the arm of the baseball star, cheers were added to hand clapping. Mr. Johnson talked briefly and then gave the audience a chance to ask questions.

There was a prompt response to this offer. Autographed baseballs were of paramount interest, however, and before he was through answering one of the questions, a little figure in a canary yellow suit had climbed to the stage with a ball in his outstretched hand. Mr. Johnson smiled, reached for the ball and his pen and the program was over. He was promptly surrounded by boys and girls of all ages and signed his name for practically all of them.

The juniors will have a dance tonight in the ballroom of the Mayflower and tomorrow will elect their officers.

MRS. IDA B. SMITH, California, extended the invitation on behalf of San Francisco for the Supreme Council of Job's Daughters to meet there next year. She is shown after her invitation had been accepted, discussing plans for the conclave with Mattrup Jensen and Clyde Bowen (standing), members of the committee on location.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

IF there is a busier person than the convention officers themselves at the meeting of the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association, it is Miss Nell Lambert, who has charge of the nursery opened yesterday for small children here with their parents.

From 15 to 20 young charges of varying ages and dispositions were there yesterday. The population shifted somewhat but the number remained about the same. Miss Lambert's equipment included cribs, beds, a game table, balloons, teddy bears, mechanical toys and drinking water for which the demand was great.

There was a nap period in the middle of the afternoon, but it consisted chiefly of taking off shoes, climbing on the bed and then looking about with interest to see whether anybody else had gone to sleep.

The activity in the lobby of the hotel was no livelier, despite the brass bands, than that in Room-A on the mezzanine, where the nursery was located.

• • • •

DELAWARE did not send a band to the Letter Carriers' convention, so Jean Jones (aged 11) who has been drum majoring for the past year at her home in Middletown, was borrowed by the Missouri band when it marched yesterday. She is the daughter of John L. Jones, a member of the association and is the youngest drum major claimed by any of the six bands here for the convention.

THE WASHINGTON GIRLS taking part in the Job's Daughters convention have an idea all their own which they plan to bring up at the business session today. Two months ago, the past queens of all the Bethels in the District started a club and now they expect to propose such a club be organized nationally. Hazel Miller is the local president; Dorothy Vernon, vice president; Mrs. Mary Taylor, corresponding secretary; Fay Dietz, recording secretary, and Doris Brattain, treasurer.

Returns Home From Abroad

MISS EARLENE WHITE, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, was at home for just a day before leaving this morning for New York to confer at headquarters on federation business. She landed in New York Monday, after attending the meeting of the international federation in Budapest, and went directly to Charleston, S. C., to attend the Southeast regional conference. On her return to the Capital she expects to remain for a rest before fall.

Broadcast to Mark 10th Anniversary Of Kellogg Treaty

A program in observance of the tenth anniversary of the signing of the Kellogg-Briand Pact will be broadcast Saturday under auspices of the Peoples Mandate to End War.

The program will be broadcast in this country from 4:15 to 4:30, Eastern standard time, over the blue network of the National Broadcasting Co. and will be sent through South America by short wave.

The recent signing of the Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Boundaries by Bolivia and Paraguay, by which peaceful settlement of the Chaco dispute was made, will be featured in addresses by Senor Dr. Don Luis Fernando Guachalla, Minister of Bolivia; Pablo M. Insfran; Charge d'Affaires of Paraguay, and Laurence Duggan, chief of the division of the American Republics of the Department of State. Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the People Mandate committee, will introduce the speakers.

The South American diplomats will speak in Spanish, and Dr. Esther Crooks, professor of Spanish at Goucher College and a member of the mandate committee, will give the English translations of their addresses.

Miss Veerhoff Plans Recital

Miss Amy L. Veerhoff, young member of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women, will appear in a recital of dramatic readings at the regular afternoon tea on Monday, at the clubhouse, 1634 I street.

Miss Veerhoff will be remembered for her performance last year in the leading role of "Lysistrata," which was presented by the Civic Theater, of which she is an active member. She is also one of the younger members of the A.A.U.W., heading the committee on the year book.

Mrs. Goodwin P. Graham will be hostess for the tea.

There wil be no tea on Monday, September 5, because of Labor Day, but Monday, September 12, there will be an old fashioned sing, led by Mrs. Edmund D. Campbell and Mrs. Robert J. McFall, at 4 p. m., at the clubhouse.

Miss Marta Brokaw will be hostess at this tea.

The Littlest One.

To judge another by his size
—Old Mother Nature.

Teeny Weeny is known among his neighbors as The Littlest One. And in truth he is the littlest one of all those who wear fur. He is so small, so quick in his movements and so clever in keeping under cover, that some of those who live in his immediate neighborhood do not even know that he is a neighbor. He is a secretive sort of person, is Teeny Weeny. Some people manage to remain unseen by hiding and keeping quiet. It isn't so with Teeny Weeny. I should say not. I know of no one more active than The Littlest One. Yet with all his running about he manages to keep out of sight of most of his neighbors and when one does see him it is to get only the merest glimpse.

If you were to ask Peter Rabbit about Teeny Weeny there would be little that Peter could tell you despite his curiosity in other people's affairs. "Yes, I've seen him," Peter probably would say, and that would be about all. Yet Teeny Weeny has at times lived right in the dear Old Briar-patch where Peter lives when he is at home.

A quick temper has Teeny Weeny, a very quick temper, and that quick temper is backed up by a fearlessness that is nothing less than amazing in one so tiny. Not only is he not afraid of anyone his own size but he does not hesitate to attack a member of the Mouse family very much bigger than himself, and usually he is the victor. There is nothing of the coward about The Littlest One. No sir, there isn't a cowardly hair in his tiny brown coat.

Of course he has enemies. And, of course, he is constantly in danger from these. In the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows there is no very small person but is in constant danger no matter how brave he may be. As a rule the smaller he is the more enemies he must look out for. So Teeny Weeny is in constant danger from one or another of the Cat family, the Hawk family, the Owl family, the Fox family, the Weasel family and some others. Some of these, if they could catch him, would refuse to eat him, for it appears that he has a most unpleasant odor not at all to the liking of most of those who strike first and investigate afterward.

So it is that the price of life for Teeny Weeny is his ability to keep out of sight of some of the sharpest eyes in all the Great World. Now wouldn't you think that to escape sharp eyes it would be necessary to have sharp eyes? That it would be necessary for him to see his enemies before they see him? It isn't. The surprising truth is that there are few poorer eyes anywhere than the eyes of this mite of a mammal. If you and I could see no better than can he we would call ourselves blind. You see his eyes are hardly worthy of being called eyes for they can do little more than distinguish light from darkness. They can do this, however, and it is important for Teeny Weeny knows that he is safer in darkness than in light. So when he runs out into light he is aware of the fact and dodges back under cover.

So you see his eyes are not so very much better than those of Miner the Mole. But Miner spends most of his time under ground where he is comparatively safe from enemies. In his tunnels he can come and go certain that even the sharpest and most watchful eyes cannot see him. It is very different with Tweeny Weeny. The Littlest One does not live under or in the ground but on it. Yes sir, he lives on the surface. Thus keeping out of sight is a very different matter for him. He must keep under cover of some kind, brush, dead leaves, pieces of bark. He scampers across open places in a hurry. Being so small he can hide under a single leaf of very moderate size.

It was Teeny Weeny of whom Sue caught just a glimpse as he darted under a leaf over near the home of the Old Naturalist. She told the latter that a baby mouse was hiding under that leaf, but when the Old Naturalist picked up the leaf there was no one there. Then he saw a dead leaf a little way off lift although not a single Merry Little Breeze was stirring. "That wasn't a baby Mouse, my dear," said he. "It was Teeny Weeny, otherwise known as The Littlest One."

Job's Daughters' Council Studies Upham Tribute

May Order Memorial on Basis of Report He Is Author of American Flag Pledge; Mrs. Thompson, of Hyattsville, New Head.

A memorial to James B. Upham, as author of the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, will be sponsored by Job's Daughters, if a resolution introduced yesterday before the Supreme Guardian Council, in annual session here at the Wardman Park Hotel, is passed. A committee was named by Mrs. Elizabeth Warden, supreme guardian, to investigate the documentary evidence of his authorship of the pledge and to report at today's session.

The pledge, commonly attributed to Frank E. Bellamy, who was associated with Mr. Upham on The Youth's Companion at the time it was first published in that magazine, was actually written by the latter, according to William J. H. Butler, of Portsmouth, Va., who introduced the resolution. This fact was established, he said, following a report on the pledge at the convention of the supreme council two years ago, when credit for its authorship was given to Mr. Bellamy, said to be buried in an unknown gave. In an effort to locate Mr. Bellamy's burial place with a view to building a monument to him, investigators found evidence that he was not the author of the pledge. The committee, which is to report at today's session, includes Clyde T. Bowes, of San Francisco; Mrs. Edna Pauley, of Indianapolis, and Mrs. Clara Fletcher, of St. Louis.

Mrs. Thompson Heads Supreme Council

Mrs. M. Virginia Thompson, of Hyattsville, Md., was elected supreme guardian of the order, as had been forecast, moving up from the office of vice supreme guardian, and Edward H. Way, of Boise, Idaho, was advanced from the office of vice associate supreme guardian to that of associate. Nan Martin, of Omaha, Nebr., who has served for some years as supreme secretary and is one of the most popular officers of the council, was re-elected to that post. Mrs. Stella L. Jensen, of Colma, Calif., moves up from the office of supreme guide to that of vice supreme guardian; Louis C. Carl, of Arlington, Va., from that of supreme outer guard to that of vice associate supreme guardian; Mrs. H. B. Schlorff, guardian of the Omaha Bethel 13, largest in the organization, becomes supreme guide; Mrs. Hazel Bridges, of Newton, Kans., supreme marshal, and Mrs. Rosa Sneeberger, of Chicago, supreme treasurer.

The invitation of San Francisco for next year's convention was accepted. It was presented by Mrs. Ida B. Smith.

Picnic Luncheon Held at Zoo

In the morning, a large party of them hiked to the National Zoological Gardens where they had a picnic luncheon and were joined by the supreme officers at the close of the morning session. The picnic, which 100 of the girls attended, was served near Pierce Mill. Henry Yaeger was general chairman of arrangements and the luncheon was served by the mothers' club of Bethel 1, of which Mrs. Thomas Wrathall is president and that of Bethel 2, headed by Mrs. Florence Fleming.

The climax of entertainment for the day came with the bathing beauty contest in Wardman Park pool at 2:30 p. m., in which Agnes Bingham, of Bethesda, placed first, Eula Mae Gibson, of Emporia, Kans., second, and Dorothy Williams, of the District, third.

The majority degree was conferred last night on girls of the different bethels who have reached their twentieth birthdays. Marjorie Stein, queen of Bethel 1., acted as queen; Virginia Haight, queen of Bethel 2, as senior princess and Lucille McDowell, queen of Bethel 3, as junior princess in conferring the degree. Other offices were taken in exemplifying the work by Virginia Riley, Gertrude Thomas, Marirose Manning, Mildred Stanton, Dorothy Johnson, Betty White, Marjorie Plitt, Kathrun Blakenship, Audrey Newman, Edith Lewis, Jeanne Dunham, Mary Ellen Dowden, Evelyn Joyce, Evelyn Hayes, Florence Fleming and Evelyn Reynolds.

Those from Bethel 2 included Ethel L. Wolfe, Ruth Wallace, Lorraine Taylor, Betty Jane Stevens, Norma M. Smith, Dorothy May Smith, Anna Frances Smith, Elizabeth A. Prokas, Grace Parks, Mary Nevius, Ethel Cora Myers, Beatrice E. Mattack, Kathryn Magdeburger, Lulu Lipphard, Helen Gibb Kirks, Sarah K. Inman, Frances E. Hopkins, Alice Reid Hodge, Violette A. Hemming, Gladys E. Gaub, M. Gene Garland, Laura K. Gardner, Elizabeth C. Dungan, Clara L. De Lauder, Verona E. L. Dahl, Mary Virginia Conway, Doris Marie Brattain, Margaret L. Bittinger, Mildred D. Birch, Helen V. Bury and L. Elizabeth Baker.

From Bethel 3 there were Faye Dietz, Katherine Beach, Gertrude Stanton, Lucile McDowell, Alma Dunn; from Bethel 4, Doris Linz and Violet Karshem; from Bethel 5, Katherine Bruce and Margaret Eaton, and, from Bethel 12, of Seat Pleasant, Md., Myrtle Herbert.

Hadassah Plans Opening Social September 11

Miss Hilda Siegel, as chairman, has announced that plans are under way for the opening social of Junior Hadassah, to be held on Sunday, September 11, at 3:30, in the Cafritz Auditorium of the Jewish Community Center.

A varied program is being arranged for the afternoon and an open invitation has been extended to all young Jewish women of the city. Miss Doris Raebach is chairman of the hostess committee. Miss Carolyn Berenter, president of the juniors, will preside at the meeting and the opening prayer will be by Miss Siegel.

Other officers of the Junior Hadassah are first vice president, Gladys Josephson; second vice president, Clara Berenter; third vice president, Miss Raebach; recording secretary, Leonore Gordon; corresponding secretaries, Sara Gross and Ruth Herman; treasurer, Ann Rubinstein, and financial secretary, Shirley Males.

Other plans for the season also have been announced. Thursday, September 15, a "paid up membership dinner" will be given at the Fairfax Hotel, Twentieth and Massachusetts avenue northwest, of which Miss Tillie Norwood is in charge.

Monday, October 3, the first regular meeting and program of the season will take place at 8:15 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center.

Sunday, October 16 a dance will be given in the form of "taxi-dancing" with refreshments, at the Jewish Community Center from 8 to 12 p. m. Miss Clara Berenter is in charge. On Wednesday, November 16, a fashion show and bridge will be given. Sunday, December 18, a sport dance is being planned. Two consecutive Bingo affairs will be given: on Wednesday, January 16 and Wednesday, February 18.

Heat Fails to Conquer Army and Navy Gayety

Others May Flee to Shore or Mountains, but Service Society Stands Fast in Round of Parties and Entertainments in Capital.

It takes more than the summer vagaries of a thermometer to destroy the reputation which the Army and Navy have for gayety. While the wives of most men in Capital society have long since fled the city for the seashore or mountains, service wives continue at their husband's side, hot weather or no, and are frequently hosts at informal dinners, teas and cocktail parties.

Supposedly there's "nobody in town," yet the Army and Navy Country Club is thronged every day. The golf course is crowded, the swimming pools likewise, and the lawns are dotted with the offspring of service families taking their ease in the sun. Nigh onto a thousand members jammed a dance held recently on the club's roof, setting a record for the summer, although every Saturday evening finds a good many there.

Gen., Mrs. Adams To Entertain

Yesterday a number of the Army's younger married set drove out to the residence of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Emory S. Adams, on Woodland drive, for the cocktail party they gave for their son and daughter-in-law, Lieut. and Mrs. James Y. Adams. The junior Adamses, who arrived earlier in the week from Fort Benning, Ga., for a visit with the lieutenant's parents, will be honored again on Saturday evening with a dinner to be given by Gen. and Mrs. Adams. They will return next week to the Georgia Army post.

West Point seems to be a tradition with members of this family. Gen. and Mrs. Adams' younger son, Emory S. Adams, will be a second-class man there this year. He is now at home enjoying his "yearling furlough," the two-month leave, which is the only one of any length the budding officers are allowed during their West Point career. Young men on furlough, incidentally, are extended guest privileges at the Army and Navy Country Club, which explains why there have been so many cadets at dances there recently.

Cadet Adams is chairman of the general committee for the annual dinner dance and "furlough hop" of the Class of '38 at the Academy, which will be held on Sunday evening in the roof garden of the Hotel Astor in New York. Hal Kemp and his orchestra will furnish the music.

Farewell Parties For McDonalds

Much Army entertaining this month has centered around farewell parties for departing officers and their wives. Among the most feted were Col. and Mrs. Donald C. McDonald, who have been ordered to Hawaii. They left yesterday by motor for Long Island, where they will visit Mrs. McDonald's sister, Mrs. C. A. Weymouth, until September 1, when they will sail on an Army transport for the island territory. One of their daughters, Miss Mary McDonald, accompanied them, but their other daughter, Miss Nancy, will remain in Washington until just before sailing time.

Col. and Mrs. McDonald were honored on Monday evening at a dinner given by Col. and Mrs. L. C. Sparks at the Army-Navy Club. Others who entertained for them recently were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Waring, and Maj. Gen. Robert M. Danford, chief of Field Artillery, and Mrs. Danford. Col. McDonald, who has been with the Bureau of Insular Affairs here, was one of a commission sent to the Philippines to investigate conditions there before the islands were granted independence.

To return to Maj. Gen. Danford — he will leave September 17 to join Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum at Fort Knox, Ky., to take part in conferences there.

Carolan Getty Nuptials Held

Becomes Albert Armstrong's Bride at Ceremony at Woodside.

In a quiet ceremony last evening at the Grace Episcopal Church at Woodside, Md., Miss Carolan Bryant Getty, daughter of George Graham Getty and the late Mrs. Getty, became the bride of Albert Henry Armstrong, son of Mrs. Edith Armstrong and the late James Armstrong. The Rev. Richard Aselford officiated at the 8 o'clock ceremony.

Standing before an altar banked with palms and white hydrangea, the bride was given in marriage by her father. Her wedding gown was of white net with a sequin bodice and sequins in a sprinkled effect on the wide-flowing net skirt. The sleeves of the gown were formed by a small net cape that fell from the shoulders, and her shoulder length veil was held by a net turban fashioned like a coronet. She carried a white satin prayer book from which fell a shower of lilies of the valley. There were no attendants.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mrs. George R. Cook and John Hutchinson Cook, of Trenton, N. J.; Miss Cecilia Hutchinson, of Bordentown, N. J.; Mrs. John T. Hutchinson, of Columbus, N. J., and Miss Gertrude Newbold, of Bordentown.

The bride attended George Washington University and was a member of the Kappa Delta Sorority while there. She is a graduate of Columbia University and is on the faculty of the Macfarland Junior High School in Washington.

Linen Shower For Miss James

To honor Miss Helen Muriel James, whose marriage to Carleton Wilson Wahl will take place on September 1, Mrs. Morris Barnes will entertain at a linen shower this evening at her home at 6802 Meadow Lane, Chevy Chase, Md.

Guests will be Mrs. Richard Wahl, Miss Elizabeth Powers, Miss Lillian Brookens, Mrs. Charles Poole, Mrs. Raymond Hust, Mrs. Stewart Beall, Miss Betty Law, Miss Claudine Bageant, Miss Janet Weigemann, Miss Constance Nash, Miss Mary H. Cook, Miss Eleanor Quirk, Miss Maitland MacDonald, Miss Dorothy Hobbs, Miss Dorothy Rice, Miss Frederica Waldman, Miss Frances Rosenbusch, Miss Ruth Reville, Mrs. A. E. James and Mrs. Jean Osgood.

Numerous parties have been and are being given for Miss James and her fiance, among them another shower for Miss James at which Mrs. Charles Poole will be hostess tomorrow evening.

God-Daughter of Mrs. Townsend Scores in 'Golden Boy.'

It may be Hollywood next for Lillian Emerson, who has so impressed people with her role in the London production of "Golden Boy" that several movie companies are clamoring for her services, according to word recently received from the British capital.

Widely known in Capital society, Miss Emerson has frequently visited here as the guest of Mrs. Lawrence Townsend, Capital music patron, and her god-mother. She is the daughter of Mrs. Townsend's old friend, Mrs. Franklin S. Terry of New York, and appeared here last winter in an important role in "Spring Thaw." Mrs. Townsend gave a theater party to celebrate the occasion.

After a debut in New York and a presentation at the Court of St. James's, Miss Emerson married William Harts, son of Gen. William Wright Harts, former Military Attache at the United States Embassy in Paris, and Mrs. Harts, who have a home in Washington and another in Madison, Conn. Their marriage ended in divorce a few years later.

Miss Emerson plays in London the leading role made famous by Frances Farmer in "Golden Boy." The play will come to this country in the autumn to go on tour and it is probable that Washington will be included in the itinerary.

Mrs. H. G. Courtney Slated to Head Letter Carriers' Auxiliary Again

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Mrs. H. G. Courtney, of Norwalk, Iowa, who now heads the Ladies' Auxiliary to the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association, is expected to be nominated this morning for re-election for the second term.

The first day of the annual convention of the organization which opened yesterday at the Mayflower was devoted to preliminaries and not until this morning will the credentials committee complete its report and delegates be seated. Pre-election forecasts indicate that not only Mrs. Courtney but all of the officers serving with her will be proposed for re-election, practically without opposition.

There is no slate prepared and all nominations will be made from the floor this morning, with voting set for tomorrow. The only office which must be filled by a new candidate this year is that of chairman of the executive committee from which Mrs. Welch Newman, of Riviera, Calif., is retiring after her third term.

Other officers serving with Mrs. Courtney are Mrs. Ralph Fifield, of Thetford Center, Vt., who is completing her first year as vice president; Mrs. Marten Merryfield, Middlefield, Ohio, her second year as secretary, and Mrs. F. M. Phinney, of Bentonville, Ark., her third year as treasurer.

Representative Jenckes Addresses Meeting

An address at the opening session by Representative Virginia Jenckes, of Indiana, was a feature of the first day's program. She returned to Washington especially to address the convention, responding to an invitation extended to her for the third year. She also attended the banquet and spoke briefly there last night and leaves this morning for French Lick Springs, Ind., to speak before the Indiana Democratic Editorial Association.

She commended the women for their part in keeping up the standard of rural mail delivery by maintaining comfortable and happy homes for their husbands, who are the carriers.

Her advocacy of mail service to every farm door was received with enthusiastic applause. Cutting down the number of rural carriers and consolidation of their routes may be an economy measure for the postoffice but means more hours of toil and energy for the farmer who has far to go for his mail, she pointed out.

She urged the women to accept the responsibility of citizenship and to cast their ballot in every election.

Her address was shifted from the afternoon to the morning program. It included also an invocation by Mrs. Clark Hart, of Iowa; the address of welcome by Mrs. Martha McDevitt, of Washington and responses given by Mrs. Clara Russell, of Michigan; Mrs. William P. McCarty, Alabama; Mrs. Kenneth Taylor, North Carolina; Mrs. Aubrey Smith, Arizona, and Mrs. B. M. Weigner, of Kansas.

The Nightingale Sisters of Oklahoma, provided the music for the program. They are Sylvia, who plays the marimba; Vada, the piano accordion, and Lorene, the piano. They wore red dresses, red pill-box hats with straps under their chins and red shoes. Appearing with them were two other Oklahoma girls, the Ford Sisters—Phyllis Jeanne, who played the flute and Maravon, who made a chalk drawing during the musical numbers. The girls also entertained on the men's program.

The Ladies' Auxiliary and Junior Auxiliary joined last night with the association in a banquet which was one of the largest social affairs of the convention.

'All-Star' Program For Junior Auxiliary

The Junior Auxiliary held its first formal program yesterday afternoon, with Walter Johnson and L. V. Nichols, of the Department of Justice as speakers.

The latter described the work of Federal agents in curbing and detecting crime, assuring the young people there was no mystery about the methods of crime detection. Its success is due largely to the adantabillty and resourcefulness of the men in the service, he told them.

Quoting figures on the cost of crime to each individual in the country, Mr. Nichols asserted, "It is your job and mine to bring about a better attitude which combats those forces which permit crime to happen."

Both Mr. Nichols and Mr. Johnson were greeted with spontaneous applause and when the small boys caught sight of the boxes of balls under the arm of the baseball star, cheers were added to hand clapping. Mr. Johnson talked briefly and then gave the audience a chance to ask questions.

There was a prompt response to this offer. Autographed baseballs were of paramount interest, however, and before he was through answering one of the questions, a little figure in a canary yellow suit had climbed to the stage with a ball in his outstretched hand. Mr. Johnson smiled, reached for the ball and his pen and the program was over. He was promptly surrounded by boys and girls of all ages and signed his name for practically all of them.

The juniors will have a dance tonight in the ballroom of the Mayflower and tomorrow will elect their officers.

MRS. IDA B. SMITH, California, extended the invitation on behalf of San Francisco for the Supreme Council of Job's Daughters to meet there next year. She is shown after her invitation had been accepted, discussing plans for the conclave with Mattrup Jensen and Clyde Bowen (standing), members of the committee on location.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

IF there is a busier person than the convention officers themselves at the meeting of the National Rural Letter Carriers' Association, it is Miss Nell Lambert, who has charge of the nursery opened yesterday for small children here with their parents.

From 15 to 20 young charges of varying ages and dispositions were there yesterday. The population shifted somewhat but the number remained about the same. Miss Lambert's equipment included cribs, beds, a game table, balloons, teddy bears, mechanical toys and drinking water for which the demand was great.

There was a nap period in the middle of the afternoon, but it consisted chiefly of taking off shoes, climbing on the bed and then looking about with interest to see whether anybody else had gone to sleep.

The activity in the lobby of the hotel was no livelier, despite the brass bands, than that in Room-A on the mezzanine, where the nursery was located.

• • • •

DELAWARE did not send a band to the Letter Carriers' convention, so Jean Jones (aged 11) who has been drum majoring for the past year at her home in Middletown, was borrowed by the Missouri band when it marched yesterday. She is the daughter of John L. Jones, a member of the association and is the youngest drum major claimed by any of the six bands here for the convention.

THE WASHINGTON GIRLS taking part in the Job's Daughters convention have an idea all their own which they plan to bring up at the business session today. Two months ago, the past queens of all the Bethels in the District started a club and now they expect to propose such a club be organized nationally. Hazel Miller is the local president; Dorothy Vernon, vice president; Mrs. Mary Taylor, corresponding secretary; Fay Dietz, recording secretary, and Doris Brattain, treasurer.

Returns Home From Abroad

MISS EARLENE WHITE, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, was at home for just a day before leaving this morning for New York to confer at headquarters on federation business. She landed in New York Monday, after attending the meeting of the international federation in Budapest, and went directly to Charleston, S. C., to attend the Southeast regional conference. On her return to the Capital she expects to remain for a rest before fall.

Broadcast to Mark 10th Anniversary Of Kellogg Treaty

A program in observance of the tenth anniversary of the signing of the Kellogg-Briand Pact will be broadcast Saturday under auspices of the Peoples Mandate to End War.

The program will be broadcast in this country from 4:15 to 4:30, Eastern standard time, over the blue network of the National Broadcasting Co. and will be sent through South America by short wave.

The recent signing of the Treaty of Peace, Friendship and Boundaries by Bolivia and Paraguay, by which peaceful settlement of the Chaco dispute was made, will be featured in addresses by Senor Dr. Don Luis Fernando Guachalla, Minister of Bolivia; Pablo M. Insfran; Charge d'Affaires of Paraguay, and Laurence Duggan, chief of the division of the American Republics of the Department of State. Miss Mabel Vernon, director of the People Mandate committee, will introduce the speakers.

The South American diplomats will speak in Spanish, and Dr. Esther Crooks, professor of Spanish at Goucher College and a member of the mandate committee, will give the English translations of their addresses.

Miss Veerhoff Plans Recital

Miss Amy L. Veerhoff, young member of the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women, will appear in a recital of dramatic readings at the regular afternoon tea on Monday, at the clubhouse, 1634 I street.

Miss Veerhoff will be remembered for her performance last year in the leading role of "Lysistrata," which was presented by the Civic Theater, of which she is an active member. She is also one of the younger members of the A.A.U.W., heading the committee on the year book.

There will be no tea on Monday, September 5, because of Labor Day, but Monday, September 12, there will be an old fashioned sing, led by Mrs. Edmund D. Campbell and Mrs. Robert J. McFall, at 4 p. m., at the clubhouse.

Miss Marta Brokaw will be hostess at this tea.

The Littlest One.

To judge another by his size
—Old Mother Nature.

Teeny Weeny is known among his neighbors as The Littlest One. And in truth he is the littlest one of all those who wear fur. He is so small, so quick in his movements and so clever in keeping under cover, that some of those who live in his immediate neighborhood do not even know that he is a neighbor. He is a secretive sort of person, is Teeny Weeny. Some people manage to remain unseen by hiding and keeping quiet. It isn't so with Teeny Weeny. I should say not. I know of no one more active than The Littlest One. Yet with all his running about he manages to keep out of sight of most of his neighbors and when one does see him it is to get only the merest glimpse.

If you were to ask Peter Rabbit about Teeny Weeny there would be little that Peter could tell you despite his curiosity in other people's affairs. "Yes, I've seen him," Peter probably would say, and that would be about all. Yet Teeny Weeny has at times lived right in the dear Old Briar-patch where Peter lives when he is at home.

A quick temper has Teeny Weeny, a very quick temper, and that quick temper is backed up by a fearlessness that is nothing less than amazing in one so tiny. Not only is he not afraid of anyone his own size but he does not hesitate to attack a member of the Mouse family very much bigger than himself, and usually he is the victor. There is nothing of the coward about The Littlest One. No sir, there isn't a cowardly hair in his tiny brown coat.

Of course he has enemies. And, of course, he is constantly in danger from these. In the Green Forest and on the Green Meadows there is no very small person but is in constant danger no matter how brave he may be. As a rule the smaller he is the more enemies he must look out for. So Teeny Weeny is in constant danger from one or another of the Cat family, the Hawk family, the Owl family, the Fox family, the Weasel family and some others. Some of these, if they could catch him, would refuse to eat him, for it appears that he has a most unpleasant odor not at all to the liking of most of those who strike first and investigate afterward.

So it is that the price of life for Teeny Weeny is his ability to keep out of sight of some of the sharpest eyes in all the Great World. Now wouldn't you think that to escape sharp eyes it would be necessary to have sharp eyes? That it would be necessary for him to see his enemies before they see him? It isn't. The surprising truth is that there are few poorer eyes anywhere than the eyes of this mite of a mammal. If you and I could see no better than can he we would call ourselves blind. You see his eyes are hardly worthy of being called eyes for they can do little more than distinguish light from darkness. They can do this, however, and it is important for Teeny Weeny knows that he is safer in darkness than in light. So when he runs out into light he is aware of the fact and dodges back under cover.

So you see his eyes are not so very much better than those of Miner the Mole. But Miner spends most of his time under ground where he is comparatively safe from enemies. In his tunnels he can come and go certain that even the sharpest and most watchful eyes cannot see him. It is very different with Tweeny Weeny. The Littlest One does not live under or in the ground but on it. Yes sir, he lives on the surface. Thus keeping out of sight is a very different matter for him. He must keep under cover of some kind, brush, dead leaves, pieces of bark. He scampers across open places in a hurry. Being so small he can hide under a single leaf of very moderate size.

It was Teeny Weeny of whom Sue caught just a glimpse as he darted under a leaf over near the home of the Old Naturalist. She told the latter that a baby mouse was hiding under that leaf, but when the Old Naturalist picked up the leaf there was no one there. Then he saw a dead leaf a little way off lift although not a single Merry Little Breeze was stirring. "That wasn't a baby Mouse, my dear," said he. "It was Teeny Weeny, otherwise known as The Littlest One."

Job's Daughters' Council Studies Upham Tribute

May Order Memorial on Basis of Report He Is Author of American Flag Pledge; Mrs. Thompson, of Hyattsville, New Head.

A memorial to James B. Upham, as author of the Pledge of Allegiance to the Flag, will be sponsored by Job's Daughters, if a resolution introduced yesterday before the Supreme Guardian Council, in annual session here at the Wardman Park Hotel, is passed. A committee was named by Mrs. Elizabeth Warden, supreme guardian, to investigate the documentary evidence of his authorship of the pledge and to report at today's session.

The pledge, commonly attributed to Frank E. Bellamy, who was associated with Mr. Upham on The Youth's Companion at the time it was first published in that magazine, was actually written by the latter, according to William J. H. Butler, of Portsmouth, Va., who introduced the resolution. This fact was established, he said, following a report on the pledge at the convention of the supreme council two years ago, when credit for its authorship was given to Mr. Bellamy, said to be buried in an unknown gave. In an effort to locate Mr. Bellamy's burial place with a view to building a monument to him, investigators found evidence that he was not the author of the pledge. The committee, which is to report at today's session, includes Clyde T. Bowes, of San Francisco; Mrs. Edna Pauley, of Indianapolis, and Mrs. Clara Fletcher, of St. Louis.

Mrs. Thompson Heads Supreme Council

Mrs. M. Virginia Thompson, of Hyattsville, Md., was elected supreme guardian of the order, as had been forecast, moving up from the office of vice supreme guardian, and Edward H. Way, of Boise, Idaho, was advanced from the office of vice associate supreme guardian to that of associate. Nan Martin, of Omaha, Nebr., who has served for some years as supreme secretary and is one of the most popular officers of the council, was re-elected to that post. Mrs. Stella L. Jensen, of Colma, Calif., moves up from the office of supreme guide to that of vice supreme guardian; Louis C. Carl, of Arlington, Va., from that of supreme outer guard to that of vice associate supreme guardian; Mrs. H. B. Schlorff, guardian of the Omaha Bethel 13, largest in the organization, becomes supreme guide; Mrs. Hazel Bridges, of Newton, Kans., supreme marshal, and Mrs. Rosa Sneeberger, of Chicago, supreme treasurer.

The invitation of San Francisco for next year's convention was accepted. It was presented by Mrs. Ida B. Smith.

Picnic Luncheon Held at Zoo

In the morning, a large party of them hiked to the National Zoological Gardens where they had a picnic luncheon and were joined by the supreme officers at the close of the morning session. The picnic, which 100 of the girls attended, was served near Pierce Mill. Henry Yaeger was general chairman of arrangements and the luncheon was served by the mothers' club of Bethel 1, of which Mrs. Thomas Wrathall is president and that of Bethel 2, headed by Mrs. Florence Fleming.

The climax of entertainment for the day came with the bathing beauty contest in Wardman Park pool at 2:30 p. m., in which Agnes Bingham, of Bethesda, placed first, Eula Mae Gibson, of Emporia, Kans., second, and Dorothy Williams, of the District, third.

The majority degree was conferred last night on girls of the different bethels who have reached their twentieth birthdays. Marjorie Stein, queen of Bethel 1, acted as queen; Virginia Haight, queen of Bethel 2, as senior princess and Lucille McDowell, queen of Bethel 3, as junior princess in conferring the degree. Other offices were taken in exemplifying the work by Virginia Riley, Gertrude Thomas, Marirose Manning, Mildred Stanton, Dorothy Johnson, Betty White, Marjorie Plitt, Kathrun Blakenship, Audrey Newman, Edith Lewis, Jeanne Dunham, Mary Ellen Dowden, Evelyn Joyce, Evelyn Hayes, Florence Fleming and Evelyn Reynolds.

Those from Bethel 2 included Ethel L. Wolfe, Ruth Wallace, Lorraine Taylor, Betty Jane Stevens, Norma M. Smith, Dorothy May Smith, Anna Frances Smith, Elizabeth A. Prokas, Grace Parks, Mary Nevius, Ethel Cora Myers, Beatrice E. Mattack, Kathryn Magdeburger, Lulu Lipphard, Helen Gibb Kirks, Sarah K. Inman, Frances E. Hopkins, Alice Reid Hodge, Violette A. Hemming, Gladys E. Gaub, M. Gene Garland, Laura K. Gardner, Elizabeth C. Dungan, Clara L. De Lauder, Verona E. L. Dahl, Mary Virginia Conway, Doris Marie Brattain, Margaret L. Bittinger, Mildred D. Birch, Helen V. Bury and L. Elizabeth Baker.

From Bethel 3 there were Faye Dietz, Katherine Beach, Gertrude Stanton, Lucile McDowell, Alma Dunn; from Bethel 4, Doris Linz and Violet Karshem; from Bethel 5, Katherine Bruce and Margaret Eaton, and, from Bethel 12, of Seat Pleasant, Md., Myrtle Herbert.

Miss Hilda Siegel, as chairman, has announced that plans are under way for the opening social of Junior Hadassah, to be held on Sunday, September 11, at 3:30, in the Cafritz Auditorium of the Jewish Community Center.

A varied program is being arranged for the afternoon and an open invitation has been extended to all young Jewish women of the city. Miss Doris Raebach is chairman of the hostess committee. Miss Carolyn Berenter, president of the juniors, will preside at the meeting and the opening prayer will be by Miss Siegel.

Other officers of the Junior Hadassah are first vice president, Gladys Josephson; second vice president, Clara Berenter; third vice president, Miss Raebach; recording secretary, Leonore Gordon; corresponding secretaries, Sara Gross and Ruth Herman; treasurer, Ann Rubinstein, and financial secretary, Shirley Males.

Other plans for the season also have been announced. Thursday, September 15, a "paid up membership dinner" will be given at the Fairfax Hotel, Twentieth and Massachusetts avenue northwest, of which Miss Tillie Norwood is in charge.

Monday, October 3, the first regular meeting and program of the season will take place at 8:15 p. m. at the Jewish Community Center.

Sunday, October 16 a dance will be given in the form of "taxi-dancing" with refreshments, at the Jewish Community Center from 8 to 12 p. m. Miss Clara Berenter is in charge. On Wednesday, November 16, a fashion show and bridge will be given. Sunday, December 18, a sport dance is being planned. Two consecutive Bingo affairs will be given; on Wednesday, January 16 and Wednesday, February 18.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

CAPITAL CHATTER: A few of the younger foreign diplomats here have been indulging in pistol and rifle practice, out of respect to the August war crisis . . . Apparently the big league ball players are being closely watched for alien propaganda and monopolistic practices, judging by the presence of Congressional investigators at the ball park. (Washington's third-baseman made three errors the other afternoon and there was talk of hailing him before the Dies committee.)

Roberta Barrows . . . discreet

The anti-third-term campaign is getting ferocious. The learned Frank Waltman of the GOP has just quoted six paragraphs from Plato in a blast at FDR, which is probably the first time Plato has been injected into the 1940 or any other modern American campaign.

• • • •

One of the miracles of twentieth century cooking has been achieved by the ladies of the Congressional Club. To their cookbook the wife of Congressman Ed Eicher contributed a recipe for angelfood cake; but when the book appeared it had been transmuted to a recipe for jellied custard, for convalescents.

Incidentally, Mr. Eicher, who is on the monopoly committee, is adding a pinch of pepper to the monopoly probe by demanding: "How about the farmer?"

A brilliant lawyer, appointed to a lofty $10,000 job in the Treasury, thought he ought to read a book about the money problem. He selected one by a Viennese money wizard. He read it through three times and was half-way through it the fourth time when he discovered that, although he had been a brilliant student at Harvard, he could not make heads or tails of it. So he threw it violently out the window.

• • • •

Later he told one of the Treasury's money wizards that he had read the book 3½ times and asked him what was the inner meaning of the book.

"So you've read that book 3½ times?" said the American expert. "That makes you the world's foremost authority on that book."

• • • •

CAPITAL CAVIAR: President Roosevelt's Hyde Park house is roughly half a mile away from Father Divine's colored heaven on the Hudson; you can't hear the singing and the hallelujahs even with the wind in the right direction . . . Charming Roberta Barrows, of the White House staff, can't hear even the most innocent question about the White House.

"—Napoleon wrote he was back"

One of the flossiest documents at the Archives Building is a signed letter from Napoleon, couched in the most elegant lingo, informing President Madison that he was back from Elba and back in business as Emperor of the French . . . Though he lasted only 100 days that trip, he took his pen in hand and notified all other rulers he was on the job again, when he should have been in training for the Battle of Waterloo. Sounds like his own phraseology, too.

• • • •

They say the New Deal can create booms and depressions at will, but one eminent New Dealer has his doubts. With a little money to invest, he asked a Cabinet member for advice.

"Go ahead and buy," said the Cabinet member.

Then came the 1937 recession. In the spring of 1938 he asked the Cabinet member for more advice.

"Better sell," said the Cabinet member. "This will last a while longer."

Then came the 1938 boom.

POTOMAC PIFFLE: Like John (CIO) Lewis' son, the son of William (AFL) Green went to Princeton; he is also a fine young fellow, and is now with a leading Cleveland firm of corporation lawyers . . . There's a rumor that some young Wall Streeters are trying to boycott the brand of cigarettes Jimmy Roosevelt smokes.

C.I.O. Challenges Service of Papers In $1,000,000 Suit

Seeking a dismissal of a $1,000,000 suit, the Committee for Industrial Organization, Connecticut avenue northwest, and the United Office and Professional Workers of America, with headquarters in New York, yesterday in District Court challenged the validity of the service of papers by United States marshals upon some of the defendants.

In its answer to the suit, which was brought by the National Association of Industrial Insurance Agents, of Fifteenth and H streets northwest, the C.I.O. claimed it was an unincorporated association and could not be sued in its own name. The office workers presented the same claim.

Md. Pastor Faces Chicken-in-Jug Cruelty Charge

Experiment or Cruelty?

Westminster, Md., Aug. 24 (AP).—Police Magistrate Albert Mitten decided today it would take several days to determine if keeping a chicken inside a 5-gallon jar is cruelty.

He took the charge of cruelty filed against the Rev. Frank E. Williar by the Maryland S. P. C. A. under advisement after several physicians for the society testified the act was cruelty to the chicken. The Rev. Williar contended the chicken was placed in the jar for experimental purposes, and it thrived better than its mates outside.

D. C. Waiting For 'Advice' On Its Flag

The Flag Commission was all set yesterday to give the District its official emblem, deferring, of course, to "advice" from the Fine Arts Commission.

One entry, a flag designed after the plan of the original shield of George Washington, was to be adopted when they met yesterday in the office of Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, a member of the flag commission.

Then, a late entry appeared.

Mrs. George T. Hawkins, a member of the American Liberty Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, appeared to ask that her design be considered.

The commission considered, and said it was "very good." So was the other one, they said.

Both entries were sent to the Fine Arts Commission for "advice."

Mrs. Hawkins' design had a large center star on a background of blue. The star is composed of 13 portions, each representing one of the original colonies. Forty-eight stars encircle the center star. These are gold. In the very center is a design of the Capitol Building, which may or may not be used, Mrs. Hawkins explained. In its place could be the George Washington coat of arms.

The words "District of Columbia" appear on the bottom of the emblem. These may or may not appear, Mrs. Hawkins said.

Gaudy Paint On Curbs to Ban Parking

Yellow, Black, White to Tell Drivers Where Not to Stay.

'No Parking to Corner' Also Will Be Stenciled on Restricted Areas.

Traffic Director Van Duzer's system of parceling out parking space hit two sections of the District yesterday while the Commissioners worked out a gaudy scheme for telling citizens where they can't leave their cars.

Within ten days parking will be prohibited at all times on both sides of the center roadway on K street northwest, between Twelfth street and Connecticut avenue, and on the north side of the south roadway and the south side of the north roadway. Parking in the vicinity of the Mount Pleasant street car loop at Seventeenth and Lamont streets also will be prohibited.

Truly Gaudy Colors.

Furthermore, left turns cannot be made from either north or south driveways at any intersection on K street between Twelfth and Connecticut avenue. Between 7 a. m. and 6 p. m. parking on the right side of the slow traffic lanes on K street will be limited to one hour.

In place of the three yellow lines which designated the mythical "20 feet from building line," beyond which cars could not be parked under a recent regulation, curbs at corners will wear truly astonishing colors.

Today men with cans of yellow, white and black paint will start their rounds of Washington street corners. Some will paint curbs yellow; other will paint them white, and still others will daub them with black.

Another group will have stencils reading "No Parking to Corner," which they will smear at points fixed by regulation. A long streak of yellow, instead of the three short lines, will designate prohibited parking areas from curb to "line of building."

"That's Bad," Says Hazen.

In addition to revamping the method of marking areas prohibited for parking, the District Commissioners decided yesterday to do something about the many signs which tell the motorist what he cannot do.

Touring the city yesterday to check on the corner-parking situation, the Commissioners discovered no end of warning signs attached to trees, poles or just lying about without any apparent base.

"That's bad," they agreed.

So Commissioner Hazen said Congress would be asked to appropriate $25,000 from the gasoline tax to subsidize a system of neat metal signs throughout the city. Painting the city's curbstones, Hazen added, would cost about $8,000.

"But," said he, "I favor the stencil system, personally."

Post Staff Photos.

By the Associated Press

Chestertown, Md., Aug. 24.—Orin A. Downey, 55, mayor of Rock Hall, died here of Rocky Mountain spotted fever after an illness of several weeks. Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at the Rock Hall Wesley Chapel.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Weldon Kelley, of Rock Hall. Downey was an insurance company branch manager here and a member of the Masons.

George Kuster, 49, a resident of Montgomery County, died in a Washington hospital today also of the disease. He was the third Montgomery County victim of the malady in the past six weeks.

Youth Confesses Taking Gems to Hide Small Theft

Charles Duncan Francis, 19, of the 2000 block of Vermont avenue northwest, was charged last night with larceny and housebreaking involving $1,504 worth of jewelry because, police said, he attempted to camouflage a penny bank theft.

Detective Sergt. Dave Fletcher of the jewelry squad, said Francis confessed entering the home of Lester Strasburger, 3739 Military road northwest, where he had worked as a houseboy, to "get a suit of clothes" the night of July 22.

One hundred boys and girls last night splashed through their paces for some 2,500 spectators in a Navy Day water pageant at East Potomac Park pool.

The pageant, depicting life aboard ship, splashed off to a start as 12 McKinley pool girls in blue, commanded by a snappy young miss in yellow, held inspection, then went through morning exercises. The drill, carried out with Annapolis precision, called for marathon treading the water, but the sailorettes proved themselves quite equal to the task.

Seven tiny ladies from Sherwood Playground danced the "Sailor's Hornpipe," and four Georgetown belles imitated "Four Ship's Bells" in another precision aquatic exhibit. Anacostia girls showed they too had mastered the difficult timing technic in their month's practice with "Military Parade," a water ballet.

The McKinley pool waterpolo team, representing Navy, lost no time in scoring against their "traditional foes," Army, the boys from East Potomac. And Navy won, 15-0, in a heated contest.

Navy, elated by the victory, descended en masse upon the coach, John Hafferman, and tossed him—clothes and all—into the pool. Meanwhile, the Navy goat—whose legs looked suspiciously indeed like those of two lanky youngsters—stomped happily around the pool, while the Army mule followed dejectedly.

Nobody was sure who won the "crew race," but the consensus had it that the victory belonged to the four lads—swimming together—from Takoma, with Anacostia and Georgetown runners-up.

Lunacy Board Reversed by District Court

Former White House Driver Is Adjudged Sane and Released.

Reversing a prior decision of the Commission on Mental Health, newly created body set up by Congress to do away with the District's obsolete procedure for trying mental cases, a jury in District Court yesterday quickly found Alexander G. Pinard, 47-year-old former White House chauffeur, of sound mind and ordered him released from custody.

Two alienists and an attorney ordered Pinard, who had been taken into custody on his wife's complaint, held when they heard his case in Gallinger Hospital July 22. Jean M. Boardman, retained by the driver and a former army man, called for a jury trial in District Court and after a trial yesterday obtained his release when the jury reported he was of sound mind.

Pinard, in his testimony said he had driven for practically every member of the White House staff except Presidents Hoover and Roosevelt, under whom he served under Army orders. He said that he had voluntarily gone to Walter Reed Hospital for treatment and had subsequently been sent to Gallinger.

The case is the first to test the validity of a decision of the new commission, which involved a person cited before by District Court. The request for an investigation of Pinard's mentality was made by his wife, and he was taken by United States marshals to the hospital.

49,000 Jobless Must Be Wrong, Or Miss Pope, of Labor Unit, Is

The long, slim hands of Eugenia Pope, brunette, daily play over the 50,000 applications for jobs in the wage-hour division of the Labor Department and in off moments the same hands reach for telephone receivers to tell other job-hunters to go see the Civil Service.

That's what it means to be the new division's only employe.

It must be understood, before more is said, that the wage-hour division is currently the ripest plum in town for the job-seekers. Their letters pile on the office force, which amounts to Miss Pope, and their telephone calls rain on her ears.

Things became so busy yesterday that three girls from other parts of the Labor Department came in to help her. All that Edgar F. Puryear, PWA employer, went through in the last few months befalls Miss Pope; and besides she has to keep the too aggressive from bearding E. F. Andrews, the administrator, in his den.

She deals out appointments cautiously, like playing cards. The maximum time is 10 minutes, each.

This has gone on since last Friday, when Miss Pope became the wage-hour division's first employe. She says to all callers: "We're opening as soon as a staff can be assembled; the staff will be recruited through the Civil Service; Mr. Andrews is quite busy."

And then a couple of phones will ring and mail carriers will appear, heavy laden. More callers will come to the office and Miss Pope will say: "We're opening as soon as a staff can be assembled; the staff will be recruited through the Civil Service . . ."

Then she squeezes in a sigh and with one hand begins opening letters from job-seekers. Another hand grabs a telephone receiver, and there may come an instant for thanking the girls who come in to help out a little.

All the while, in the back of her head, is the definite knowledge that more applications than one girl can count are before her—and that only 1,000 jobs are obtainable.

She knows the Government and how to handle matters. Her experience goes back to 1934. Since then she has worked for WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, in the Census Bureau, and in September, 1936, was sent abroad as a secretary to the International Institute of Statistics. There she took time out to engage in a study of the crippled children in Athens. Of this she wanted to talk yesterday, but there were too many job-seekers, too many telephones.

District Applies For $1,375,000 More to PWA

Funds Would Be Used to Construct Fort Drive Linking Civil War Posts, for Health Center and Highway Department Garage.

With approximately $12,000,000 in PWA projects pending, the District Commissioners yesterday requested an additional $1,375,000 loan and grant to finance the construction of a health center, a highway department garage and the long sought Fort Drive linking all local Civil War fortifications.

Although some of the minor projects may be approved before the return of PWA Administrator Ickes, it was said the major projects would be acted upon when he returns from Alaska around Labor Day.

The Commissioners requested $1,080,000 to construct Fort Drive, which would extend from Conduit road in West Washington to Fort Totten east of North Capitol street, a distance of some 8 miles. From Conduit road the proposed drive would connect with the improved section at Fortieth street and Nebraska avenue and from there go on to Fort Reno Park.

District officials said the new health center would be constructed on a site opposite Homeopathic Hospital, at New York avenue and Kirby street northwest. A sum of $240,000 was requested for this project.

Health officials have been concerned over this locality, which is said to have the highest rate of mortality in the city.

For the highway department garage the Commissioners asked $55,000. The building would be constructed at Second and Bryant streets northwest.

To date, a total of $6,231,635 for local projects has been approved by Ickes. Under the terms of the PWA act, the District receives the money under a 45 per cent grant and 55 per cent loan.

Leader Urges 5-Yr. Plan for Playgrounds

She Requests $2,013,000 of Commissioners for Total Expenses.

Miss Sybil Baker, District Playground supervisor presented the District Commissioners yesterday with a five-year plan, designed to improve the municipal playgrounds at a total cost of $2,013,000.

For the 1940 fiscal year, the first year of the program, she requested $359,060, an increase of more than 70 per cent over this year's appropriation. She explained this amount was not exactly one-fifth of the total. She estimated $271,000 as the next fiscal year's portion of the plan, and charged $100,000 to the District as a "sponsor's contribution under WPA.

She stated:

"The recent amazing growth in public demand for recreational opportunity has forced the department to take responsibilities far beyond its capacity for effective service. Playgrounds are now so crowded that they need more leaders for safety, as well as good programs."

The five year plan includes establishment of 22 new grounds, showers and lighting for 20; landscaping for 50, fencing for 30, buildings for 25, wading pools for 16, swimming pools for 4, instruction pools at two playgrounds, grading and surfacing to cost $300,000, and a storehouse, yards and shops to cost $100,000.

3 Youths Accused In Sanford Death Give Girls Smiles

While a dozen adolescent girl friends waited outside, a coroner's jury yesterday ordered 18-year-old Leroy Evans and two companions held for grand jury action in the fatal shooting of George Edward Sanford, 20, the morning of August 13.

The youths grinned at the girls as police took them from the inquest back to jail cells. The grand jury will probably act next week.

After deliberating 10 minutes the jury ordered Evans held as responsible for the death of Sanford, who was dropped on an operating table at Childrens' Hospital. James David Posey, 22, 600 block D street southeast, and George Malloy, 18, 1100 block north Capitol street, were held as accessories.

Chief testimony came from Detective Sergt. John W. Wise of the homicide squad. He swore he had been given statements by all three of the boys. Evans told him, he said, that while he was beating Thomas Giles, colored, on the head with a .25 automatic pistol the gun went off. The bullet went through his hand and into Sanford's chest, he said.

Red Cross Names Mary Beard Head Of Nursing Service

Miss Mary Beard, associate director of the International Health Service Division of the Rockefeller Foundation, yesterday was appointed national director of the newly created unified nursing service of the American Red Cross.

In making the announcement, Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, said the various nursing services of the Red Cross would be placed under the supervision of Miss Beard. Miss Virginia Dunbar, assistant director of the University of California School of Nursing at San Francisco, has been appointed assistant director of the new service. Both Miss Beard and Miss Dunbar will take up their new duties October 1.

Miss Ida F. Butler, who has been identified with the Red Cross Nursing Service for more than 20 years, and who has been director of nursing enrollment since 1936, retires from active service this fall, Chairman Davis announced.

The Health Department ruled the children couldn't see the film at their outdoor theater, since malarial mosquitos have been discovered in the neighborhood. That proved but a momentary setback to Rudolph Berger, chairman of the welfare committtee of the District Tuberculosis Association.

He arranged with the Congress Theater in Congress Heights to put on a special show this morning, with the Capital Transit Co. to transport the 127 boys and girls two miles and return.

18 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, AUGUST 25, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The suspicion is that there actually isn't a team in the National League that is worthy of the pennant. Either that or the National League pennant contenders are being deterred by the prospect of having to meet the Yankees in another World Series. As you know, that's no fun for the National League entry.

Anyway, the National League pennant appears to be going begging. Any sort of a drive by any one of the first division clubs during the past two weeks and the coming two weeks would decide the race, but neither the Pirates, the Giants, the Reds or the Cubs appear able to gear up to the effort.

POVICH.

For a time it appeared that the Pirates would breeze in handily with their pitching staff clicking and a seven-game lead to show. The Giants were faltering, the Reds appeared to have shot their bolt and the Cubs were receding rapidly. But the Pirates have displayed no finishing punch. Until yesterday, when they beat the Bees, they had won only 12 of their last 24 games. That is no kind of a pace for a club with pennant ambitions.

Giants in Rut.

If there were a really good team in the league it would have come along to head the Pirates during the past three weeks, but there apparently isn't. The second-place Giants are floundering with Hubbell, Schumacher and Melton no longer able to win and both the infield and outfield worrying Terry.

The third-place Reds, forced to worry along without Johnny Vander Meer and Lee Grissom, are in third place, a half game behind the Giants, only because the Cubs under Gabby Hartnett have been a woeful disappointment. To date, the Cubs haven't even played .500 ball under Hartnett, what with their 18 defeats as contrasted with their 16 victories. The change in managers at Chicago apparently hasn't helped, to put it mildly.

Barring a miraculous form reversal by the National League contenders, the team that finally stumbles into the pennant will go into the world series against the Yanks as the longest-shot in world series history. There isn't a National League club whom the betting commissioners would rank in the same inhalation with the Yankees. This year, the National League truly has the miseries, despite its victory over the American Leaguers in the all-star game.

DiMaggio, Gehrig, Dickey, Rolfe, et al., with Gomez and Ruffing as their pitchers figure to make a shambles of the 1938 world series. If it is the Pirates who finally do win the National League flag and are sentenced to oppose the Yankees, the American Leaguers won't be asked to face a single outstanding pitcher in the 1938 series.

Three in Row.

At least in 1936 and 1937 when the Giants took their beatings from the Yankees in the world series there was always the possibility that Carl Hubbell or Hal Schumacher or Cliff Melton might make it tough on the Yanks. But Tobin, Blanton, Bauers, Klinger and Mace Brown—the Pirate pitchers—would certainly not cause any National League supporters to go into any mental handsprings of delight with a series against the Yankees coming up.

Contrast the awful fumbling of pennant chances in the National League with the sure-fire surge of the Yankees in the American League race. The Yankees didn't triffle when they were challenged three weeks ago by the second place Cleveland Indians. They went out and slapped the Indians down three straight times in what was supposed to be a "croocial" series, bounced into a long lead and virtually broke Cleveland as a pennant contender.

There certainly hasn't been any quit in the Yankees. Earlier in the season, when all the breaks were against them, they still managed to keep within expectorating distance of the lead. Remember the early months of the season when Gehrig couldn't make a hit if he were swinging a settee up there at the plate? When DiMaggio looked like something of a bum at bat after reporting late to the Yankees and missing spring training? When Lefty Gomez was pounded out of the box time after time and appeared to be so far gone that the Yankees were considering trading him to the Browns for Buck Newsom?

* * * *

Well, the Yankees were still continuing to win a respectable share of ball games and never did they permit the Injuns to get too far out in front. And fellows like Red Rolfe stepped into the breach and began hitting better than in any of his previous seasons in the big leagues. And guys Ikie Bump Hadley and Spud Chandler filled in nobly for Gomez.

Gomez in Form.

Sure, the Yankees took their bumps. Remember back in June when they met the hopped-up Cleveland team in another of those crucial series that would decide the lead. Those games were played in Cleveland and the Indians won three in a row. But did it cause the Yankees to fold? No, indeedy, it did not.

Far from quitting, the Yankees bounced back grandly after that series. DiMaggio started to hit and so did Gehrig. And when Chandler lagged as a starting pitcher, who should begin to come through for the Yankees but Gomez himself, with some of the grandest ball in his major league career.

And so today, the Yankees are out in front, merely breezing. They have a 12-game lead over the second-place club and nothing, barring plague, pestilence or train wrecks can keep the pennant out of Yankee Stadium. If the Yankees win only half of their remaining 40 games, the Red Sox must play .760 ball, or win 35 out of 46 games to tie for the pennant. Which ought to give you something of an idea.

And Cleveland? Have you noticed that the Indians are in third place these days? The Cleveland bubble is pretty well exploded by this time. The difference between this year's Cleveland team and Cleveland teams of former years is simple enough to detect. This year, Cleveland merely collapsed a bit later in the season. There are a lot of things that the Yankees might like to give back to the Indians, but one of 'em isn't the American League lead.

Eagles Win Over College Stars, 14-7

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, Aug. 24.—An 80-yard run by Dick Riffle, of Corning, N. Y., and a 20-yard forward pass, Dave Smukler to Jay Arnold, tonight gave the Philadelphia Eagles two touchdowns and a 14-to-7 victory over the Eastern College All-Stars before a crowd of 30,000 at Temple Stadium. The All-Stars scored in the last period on a 66-yard forward, Wendell Wear to George Matsik.

Except for their brief show of power in the last period, the All-Stars were no match for the Eagles, who piled up 15 first downs to 3 and gained a net of 252 yards from scrimmage against 53.

The Collegians scored within two minutes after turning aside a strong bid by the Eagles for a third touchdown by holding for downs on their own 19.

Wear, who starred for Penn State last year, smacked center for five, and then took a lateral pass from Art Raimo for a first down on the 34. On the next play Wear tossed a 26-yard forward to George Matsik, of Duquesne, who caught the ball on the Eagles' 40, worked his way into the open and ran the rest of the way.

Riffle, whose play for Albright last year won him a place on the Associated Press "Little All-American," provided the most spectacular play of the game early in the third period. Slashing off tackle on his own 20, he reversed his field and scampered 80 yards without a hand being laid on him.

The Eagles scored soon after the opening kickoff, capitalizing on a clipping penalty that gave them the ball on the All-Stars 6-yard line. Riffle and Dave Smukler could only gain a yard in two plays, then a 15-yard penalty for holding set the Eagles back to the 20. On fourth down, Smukler faded back to the 30 and heaved a forward to Arnold, who caught the ball on his fingertips on the goal line.

New Yorkers Now Lead League by 12 Games After Twin Bill.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 24.—Two big first innings gave the Yankees and Chicago White Sox their second straight doubleheader split today.

The Sox scored six runs in the first inning of the opener, featured by Manager Jimmy Dykes' homer with two aboard, and went on to an 8-to-5 victory. The Yanks flailed Frank (Gabbo) Gabler for seven tallies in the opening frame of the nightcap and coasted in with an 11-to-1 decision.

The split, coupled with Cleveland's victory in Boston, boosted the Yanks' American League lead to 12 full games.

A total of eight homers were hit in the twin bill for the entertainment of 13,781 fans. After Dykes started the four-base belting, Bill Dickey clouted two for the Yanks in the opener. Dickey also hit another in the nightcap, bringing his total for the year to 24, while Tommy Henrich walloped two and Joe Gordon clouted one in the second game. For the Sox, Gerry Walker lined one into the leftfield stands in the afterpiece.

Staked to his big first inning lead, Monte Stratton breezed in with his thirteenth win of the year in the opener, although he had to have help in the eighth inning from Lefty Thornton Lee, who went the full nine innings in whipping the Yanks yesterday.

In the nightcap, Monte Pearson spread five Sox hits through the nine frames, giving no more than one in any frame to chalk up his twelfth victory of the campaign. Despite his poor start, Gabler lasted the distance.

Rick Ferrell Hits Triple To Win Game

By Shirley Povich.

Thanks to Ken Chase, to Rick Ferrell and to Ed Linke, the Nats won an 8-6 victory over the St. Louis Browns and a firmer grip on fourth place in the American League vital statistics.

Also entitled to a nod from the Nats are the Philadelphia Athletics, who licked the fifth place Detroit Tigers twice up in Philadelphia yesterday.

The outcome at Mr. Griffith's ball yard yesterday was very uncertain until Chase, Ferrell and Linke took a hand. Because in the eighth inning the Browns reared up and interrupted Monte Weaver's four-hit pitching by pushing four runs across the plate and tying the score at 6 to 6.

Chase Began Badly.

When Weaver was finally waved off the premises by Manager Bucky Harris, the Brown not only had a tie, they had runners on first and third bases and none was out. The situation was exceedingly dark for the Nats when Chase took over the pitching, and it was darker when he walked the first man to face him and filled the bases.

But then he reformed immediately and pitched the Nats out of their miseries, forcing Mel Almada to pop up, striking out George McQuinn and extricating himself completely by causing McQuillan to fly out.

In the Nats' half of the inning, Linke and Ferrell got in their licks and won the ball game for the Nats. Linke walked into the game as the Brownies' third pitcher and walked right out again after walking Buddy Myer on four pitched balls to put the winning run on base. In came ancient Fred Johnson as the Browns' fourth pitcher, and his first act was to pitch a three-bagger to Ferrell, whose blow into right field scored Myer. A bit later George Case fetched Ferrell home with a fly to left field.

Eighth Monte's Waterloo.

All of a sudden, Weaver collapsed in the eighth inning. After giving up two runs to the Browns, he pitched six scoreless innings and from the second until the eighth, he pitched absolutely hitless ball. But in the eighth he lost his control, his effectiveness and his 6-2 lead.

That lead had been compiled for Weaver chiefly by the home-run hitting tactics of Buddy Lewis and Al Simmons off the pitching of young Bill Cox, the former White Sox right-hander whom Manager Gabby Street offered as his starting pitcher. Lewis produced his eleventh homer of the season and Simmons contributed his sixteenth.

Beau Bell's single past Lewis, the third Brownie hit of the first inning, drove two runs across the plate and set the Browns up in a lead, and then the Nats went to work on Cox.

Lewis' Homer Longest.

Lewis halved Cox's 2-0 lead in the first inning by swatting the longest homer of the year at Griffith Stadium—a terrific blast that cleared the fence near the rightfield scoreboard and sailed over the rooftops on U street.

Cox was no help to himself in the third inning when the Nats took a 3-1 lead. He walked Monte Weaver and then made a wild throw into centerfield in an attempt for a force play at second on Case's bunt. Lewis fetched Weaver home from third with a long fly to Bell, and then Simmons took a hand. He crashed a homer into the leftfield seats to deposit himself and Case at the plate.

They blasted Cox out of there in the fifth inning when Lewis, Simmons and Bonura singled before he could get a man out. West's long fly scored Simmons from third with

G. W. to Meet Colorado U.

Colonials to Travel for Game, Oct. 15.

George Washington's eleven will travel to Boulder, Colo., to meet the University of Colorado, October 15, Max Farrington, acting director of athletics, announced last night, confirming an exclusive story in last Thursday's Post that the game would be closed.

A contract, inclosed in an invitational letter which had been held in abeyance for more than a week, yesterday was returned signed to Harry Carlson, Colorado director of athletics.

The Colorado game, sandwiched between the Butler and Davis-Elkins contests, will not impose a burden on the Buff and Blue players and also affords an ideal period for the lengthy trip to Boulder. It will be Colorado's homecoming game of the season and Carlson expects a large crowd, inasmuch as Boulder is but 30 miles from Denver.

First negotiations for the Colorado game were inaugurated last spring when Farrington, anxious to have the school made famous last season by Whizzer White show in Washington, invited the Buffaloes to meet G. W. here on October 15. But, since they were called to play their opening two games on the road too, the Westerners declined the invitation.

September 30, Furman, at home; October 7, Butler, at home; October 15, Colorado, away; October 21, Davis-Elkins, at home; October 28, Old Miss, at home; November 5, Clemson, away; November 12, Kansas, at home; November 19, Bucknell, away; November 24, West Virginia, at home.

Pedro Stops Drouillard

Montanez Is Knockout Winner in 5th.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 24.—Pedro Montanez, Puerto Rican lightweight star got back on the boxing big time with a bang tonight by stopping Orville Drouillard, of Windsor, Ontario, in the fifth round of their ten-round bout before 6,500 customers in Madison Square Garden. Weights were 138¾ for Montanez and 137 for Drouillard.

Referee Arthur Donovan halted the fight after 2:14 of the fifth heat had elapsed to save the badly battered Canadian from further punishment. Montanez had fired a stiff right jolt to the body, quickly followed by a savage left to the head to send Drouillard to his knees when the referee intervened.

Drouillard clearly was no match for the fast-stepping Montanez who apparently has recovered all the cunning and socking power he demonstrated in rolling up 28 consecutive victories before being trimmed by the then Lightweight Champion Lou Ambers last September.

Using his right and left with equally devastating effect, Montanez, who is being groomed for a shot at Henry Armstrong's 135-pound crown, had the Canadian on the ropes in each of the preceding rounds and in the third floored him for a count of nine with a vicious belt to the stomach which followed two sizzling lefts and rights to the head.

Drouillard took a bad banging around in the first and second and but for his gameness and the fact that he seemingly wears a cast iron jaw, might have been knocked out in either of these sessions. He rallied in the fourth, for a time, but failed to hold his advantage when the brown skinned Puerto Rican began throwing leather in the fifth.

Miley Beaten In Golf Play

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 24. Lightning struck figuratively and literally in the Women's Western golf championship tournament today as Marion Miley, slim brunette from Lexington, Ky., defending champion, was blasted out of the second round played in drenching rain, thunder and blinding flashes.

The young defending champion, twice winner of the honor, was beaten 3 and 2 by Mrs. Burt Weil, Cincinnati, seasoned veteran, who took a long lead and withstood a determined last ditch rally by the Kentucky golfer.

Patty Berg, chubby Minneapolis redhead, winner of eight of eleven tournaments this year, who is strongly favored to succeed Miss Miley, easily conquered Phyllis Buchanan, Denver, 7 and 6.

Joe Hiestand Misses Title

Runs String to 966, but Miller Wins.

By the Associated Press.

Vandalia, Ohio, Aug. 24.—Joe (One-Man Show) Hiestand, the bashful bridgeroom from Hillsboro, Ohio, cracked 200 targets today to run his unfinished string to 966 without a miss, the greatest performance ever turned in by a clay disc expert, but failed to win the national Class AA championship, the day's top prize at the Grand American.

The crown went to Phil Miller, French Lick, Ind., who tied the Buckeye Bullet in the regular 200-target event and then beat him in the 100-clay extra shoot.

After going "straight" through the 200, the two marksmen mowed down 75 more from 16 yards, then moved back to the extreme handicap distance of 25 yards for the last round. Hiestand, 31-year-old farmer, missed five of the 25, while Miller failed on only one.

Hiestand's long-run world record, 254 above the previous mark was still intact and unfinished, however, because the shootoff targets do not count in records.

Hiestand, in breaking all 900 targets from 16 yards, established a record which can't be broken unless the program is changed. Only 900 of the 16-yard targets are trapped during the grand, the remainder of the program being made up of doubles and handicaps.

The Class A championship went to veteran Forest McNeir, of Houston, Tex., who, despite a crippled left arm which forces him at times to employ a "caddy" to load and unload his gun, broke 199 of 200, missing only the 157th.

Pro-Amateur Tourney On Indian Spring Card

Al Jamison will play host to the Middle Atlantic pros in a pro and three-amateurs tournament Monday at Indian Spring.

It is an added event to the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. schedule. The simon-pures will have the benefit of a half handicap allowance.

Pirates Defeat Bees, 6 to 2, And Run Lead to Six Games

Pep Young Triples to Launch Victory Attack; Bauers Allows 9 Hits and Wins Ninth of Season.

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 24.—The Pittsburgh Pirates belted the Boston Bees, 6 to 2, on seven hits today to take the series two out of three and reinforce their National League lead to six games over New York.

Pep Young tripled with the bases loaded in the fifth inning to spark a four-run rally which proved the margin of victory as Russ Bauers and Ira Hutchinson engaged in a slipshod pitching duel.

Hutchinson granted eight bases on balls to make the Buccaneers' sailing easier, forcing Young home once in the fourth frame with a walk to Lee Handley.

Bauers, in gaining his ninth triumph against 10 defeats, spread nine hits and struck out eight of the Bees, who caused him real trouble only once.

In the fifth the visitors bunched a single, a double and two passes to score one run and then fill the bases, but the big sophomore forced them to ground out.

The Pirates who lead the league in double plays, added another to their string today the hard way. In the eighth inning Elbert Fletcher doubled behind Debs Garms and Tony Cuccinello, who had singled. Garms scored but Cuccinello was cut off and headed back to third only to find Fletcher waiting a few feet from the bag. Both were run down.

Cubs Defeat Giants, 6 to 1.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—The Cubs' backed up Rookie Vance Page's four-hit pitching with a five-run rally in the fourth inning today to whip the New York Giants, 6 to 1, and gain an even break in the two-game series.

The defeat dropped the Giants six games out of first place and only a half half game in front of third.

Five hits and two walks made up the Cubs' big fourth inning, in which they drove Bill Lohrman from the mound. Rip Collins' single drove in two of the runs; Page sent another across, and Bill Jurges and Bill Herman batted one in apiece.

8 Places in National Amateur Are Open to Local Golfers

Goodman Tops List Of 882 in Tourney

Columbia Entries Top Those of All Other Local Clubs.

U. S., British Champs Exempted From Qualifications.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

By Bill Boni.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

McCARTHY.

GOODMAN.

Fifty of the finest amateur golfers in the District and surrounding States will play for eight places to the National championship in the sectional qualifying rounds Tuesday at Congressional, over the 36-hole route. The Amateur is September 12 to 17 at Oakmont Country Club, Pittsburgh.

The fifty entries from this section composed the fifth highest total in the country, and includes four entires from Hanover, Pa., and three from Virginia. Baltimore and its vicinity will send 12 applicants, the remaining 31 players will be from member clubs of the District Golf Association.

The largest delegation from a single club will represent Columbia, with Harvey Johnson, jr., Miller B. Stevinson and Maury Nee topping the entrants. The host course, Congressional, will be represented by only seven players.

The enry list is disappointing from the standpoint that at least 75 or 100 amateurs with handicaps of four and under were expected to play, thus boosting the number of places. Congressional members fell far short of their promised quota of 20 while not a single player is entered from Indian Spring, Chevy Chase, Woodmont, Washington, Burning Tree or Argyle, all members of the local golf body. Failure of the Indian Spring and Chevy Chase members was the most surprising.

Cushman Tops Outsiders.

Out-of-State players are topped by Walter Cushman, Farmington. Other Virginia entrants include W. B. Tomlinson, Hermitage, and Robert H. Schlessinger, Farmington, while Hanover, Pa., will be represented by J. W. Gitt, Mark Trone, W. Cyril Smith and Walter R. Newman.

C. Henry Cohen, Billy Houghton and George Molloy, from Capital; Martin McCarthy, Forrest Thompson and Fred Mott, first entrants in several years from the Glen Echo club., and Harry Pitt, Brownell and J. W. Harvey, of Manor, are the other trios representing local clubs.

Leading pairings for the rounds at Congressional pit Greiber and McCarthy, Shea and Stevinson, Nee and Yoder, Brownell and Steward, Overton and J. W. Gitt.

The field is dotted with former qualifiers from this section, including the three that were successful last year, Yoder, McCarthy and Shea.

Sectional rounds were originally scheduled for Richmond, Va., but an insufficient entry forced the U. S. G. A. to drop them and send the three entries here.

Pairings and starting times:

Pairings.

8:30 and 12:30—Commander W. S. Popham (Army and Navy) and C. Henry Cohen (Capital).

8:55 and 12:35—George F. Miller (Columbia) and George Molloy (Capital).

8:40 and 12:40—M. Parker Nolan (Congressional) and Capt. H. M. Turner (Columbia).

8:50 and 12:50—F. M. Goodwin, jr. (Congressional) and L. Stewart Barr (Columbia).

8:55 and 12:55—Robert L. Finkenstaedt (Columbia) and Billy Houghton (Capital).

9:00 and 1:00—Maurice Nee (Columbia) and Levi Yoder (Kenwood).

9:05 and 1:05—George M. Ferris (Columbia) and Robert J. Holland (Congressional).

9:10 and 1:10—Robert W. Brownell (Manor) and Luther C. Steward, jr. (Columbia).

9:15 and 1:15—Ralph Bogart (Army and Navy) and Lieut. Jesse Auton (Columbia).

9:30 and 1:30—Karl Corby (Kenwood) and Louis F. Fuchs (Congressional).

9:35 and 1:35—Henry A. Parr 3d. (Baltimore C. C.) and Earl McAleer (Congressional).

9:40 and 1:40—James C. Goodwin (Baltimore C. C.) and Lozar F. Brown (Rodgers Forge).

10:50 and 1:05—Spencer S. Overton (Rolling Road) and J. W. Gitt (Hanover, Pa.).

10:15 and 1:15—Martin F. McCarthy (Beaver Dam) and Otto Greiner (Rodgers Forge).

10:30 and 1:30—Robert H. Schlesinger (Farmington C. C.), Charlottesville, and Nathan H. Kaufman, jr. (Suburban).

10:35 and 1:35—W. B. Tomlinson, jr. (Hermitage C. C.), Richmond, and Forrest Thompson (Beaver Dam).

The letter group includes Johnny Fischer, anotner 1938 Walker cupper who took the crown at Garden City, N. Y., in 1936; C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville, of London, Ont., winner at Baltimore, in 1932; Francis Ouimet, of Boston, Walker Cup captain and champion in 1914 and 1931; Max Marston, who won in 1923; Jess Sweetser, 1922; Jesse Guilford, 1921; Chick Evans, 1916 and 1920, and S. Davidson Herron, 1919.

With 858 competing sectionally and 14 exempt, the other ten entries came in from Honolulu, where two players qualified on August 6. Neither, however, was in a position to make the long trip to Pittsburgh. The total entry has been exceeded only twice in 41 previous championships—in 1936, when the record was set at 1,118, and in 1935, when there were 945.

The largest sectional field and one of the strongest will play in the metropolitan New York district, at the Cherry Valley Club and Garden City Golf Club. Sixteen places are available to the 106 contestants, among them Walker Cupper Ray Billows, metropolitan and North-South Champion Frank Strafaci, New York State Champion Willie Turnesa, Tommy Goodwin, Tommy Tailer, George Voigt, Gene Homans, Eddie Driggs, Dick Chapman and three foreign entrants, Hardit Singh Malik, of Kashmir, India; the Hon. Michael Strutt, of Berhamsted, England, and Jack Cameron, of Montreal.

Of the other 1938 cup players, Fred Haas, jr., will compete at New Orleans; Charles (Chuck) Kocsis at Detroit, and Reynolds Smith at Dallas.

Behind New York in numerical strength of sectional entries come Pittsburgh, with 85 and 12 places; Chicago, with 11 places for a field of 58 that includes Wilford Wehrle, Canadian amateur champion, Ted Adams, of Columbia, Mo.; Gus Moreland, Johnny Lehman and Don Armstrong; Philadelphia, with 54 and 9 places, and Washington, with 50 and 8 places.

Ellsworth Vines, professonal tennis star who has threatened for some time to make a serious bid for amateur golfing honors, is one of 24 entrants from the Los Angeles area who will battle for five berths. His rivals will include Buell Patrick Abbott, 1936 Public Links champion, and Roger Kelley.

the second run of the inning and the Nats had a 6-2 lead.

Those were the figures when Weaver went into his eighth-inning swoon. McQuillan was the recipient of a gift double when his grounder hopped over Travis' head, and Clift drew a walk. Bell singled to center, Kress walked, Sullivan beat out a hit to Myer, and Heffner singled past Travis to drive in the third and fourth runs of the inning.

It was at this point that Harris inserted Chase with the score tied, none out and two on base. You know what he did. And you know, too, about Linke and Ferrell.

Men Win Over Bobbitt and Guernsey While Women Triumph Over Henrotin and Andrus.

By the United Press.

Chestnut Hill, Mass., Aug. 24.—The "kid threat" to Don Budge and Gene Mako failed to materialize today as the Californians breezed to a straight-set victory over Russell Bobbitt, Atlanta, Ga., and Frank Guernsey, Orlando, Fla., to reach the semi-final round of the National doubles championship.

Bobbitt and Guernsey were expected to give the international champions a tussle after upsetting the powerful Yugoslavian team of Ferenc Puncec and Franjo Kukuljevic yesterday, but they got a bad case of stage fright and succumbed, 6—3, 6—2, 6—3.

Extremely nervous against Don and Gene, the Dixie combination played miserably before a filled grandstand. They missed simple shots, and in the first two sets Bobbitt's service was broken three times and again in the first game of the third set.

The veteran team of Wilmer Allison and Johnny Van Ryn, of Austin, Tex., also won their quarter-final match today and will tackle Budge and Mako in the round of four.

Allison and Van Ryn, showing their old mastery of tandem tactics, competed with the wind in blowing Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, and Bryant Grant, of Atlanta, from the court, 6—1, 8—6, 6—2.

The women's quarterfinals were completed today with top-seeded Alice Marble, of Beverley Hills, Calif., and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Boston, joining three seeded foreign combinations in the round of four.

Mrs. Marble and Mrs. Fabyan, defending titleholders, had a real battle on their hands before quelling Mme. Sylvia Henrotin, of France, and Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of New York. In a match worthy of the finals, the Mable-Fabyan duo won, 6—4, 5—7, 12—10.

Semifinal opponents of the Americans will be the English team of Kay Stammers and Margot Lumb, who eliminated the Australian combine of Mrs. Harry Hopman and Dorothy Stevenson, 6—1, 1—6, 11—9.

In the lower half of the draw, Miss Nancy Wynne and Thelma Coyne, top seeded foreigners from Australia, defeated the California pair, Virginia Wolfenden and Pat Canning, 10—8, 6—2. They will encounter Jadwiga Jedrzejowska, of Poland, and Mrs. Rene Mathieu, of France, who breezed to a 6—2, 6—2, victory over Dorothy May Bundy, of Santa Monica, Calif., and Dorothy Workman, Los Angeles, second ranked domestic team.

Tigers Open Here Today

Battle for Fourth Spot Will Be Waged.

The battle for fourth place between the Nats and the Tigers will reach the hand-to-hand stage today when the Detroit club begins a three-game invasion of Griffith Stadium.

Only a game and a half removed from the fourth-place Nats, despite their double defeat at Philadelphia yesterday, the Tigers will be making their Washington debut under Manager Del Baker, successor to Mickey Cochrane.

Manager Bucky Harris, elated by Pete Appleton's impressive victory over the Red Sox at Boston, where he saved the Nats from a four-game rout, will send Appleton to the mound against the Tigers in the series opener today.

Appleton's role as a relief pitcher with the Nats appears to be at an end in view of his recent lack of success in that department and his victory as a starting pitcher at Boston.

Harry Kelley is slated to face the Tigers tomorrow and for the fourth game of the series Harris is of a mind to give young Joe Krakauskas another starting chance.

Old teammates quarreled at home plate in the eighth inning of yesterday's game and resulted in the banishment of Al Simmons. Simmons upbraided Umpire Ed Rommel, his former pal with the Athletics, following Rommel's decision on a called strike, and was given the thumb. He is liable to fine and suspension, but Rommel is expected to be lenient with him in his report to League President Harridge.

A visiting band from Abilene, Tex., near the home of Sammy West, found reason to applaud in the third inning yesterday. West dashed in from centerfield to make a sensational shoestring catch of Beau Bell's line drive and rob his fellow Texan of an extra base hit.

George McQuinn, the Ballston lad who is the Browns' leading hitter, didn't dally in running to 33 straight games his consecutive hitting streak. In the first inning he singled sharply to right. McQuinn is now only nine games short of George Sisler's all-time record for consecutive game hitting.

Joe Rodgers' 227-Yard Drive Wins At East Potomac

Joe Rodgers, public links golfer from Rock Creek, hit a tee shot 277 yards last night on the East Potomac driving range to win the driving contest by a 5-yard margin. Fifty-three entrants drove three balls each before some 300 fans.

Benjamin Campbell was next with 272, with Bobby Bowers, who defeated Rodgers in the Rock Creek tournament last week, third, hitting one 268 yards and 1 foot. Fred Mott, Beaver Dam's long-driving ace, and T. R. King were grouped at 268, with John Hurley a foot back with 267. The contestants hit between stakes 35 yards apart.

Matt Twomey, local fight manager, whose ability was highly touted, must have been off form as he was marked "out" on the scoreboard, while Bernie Phillips, highly regarded entry, could not get one past the 150 yard mark, and Tiny Ingram, another potential winner, was stopped at 240.

Charley Malone, the Redskin end, did not compete. The event was largely confined to public links golfers.

Brooke Grubb had a driving contest carded for Saturday night at his range in Silver Spring and Georgia avenue, extended. The event is open to all amateurs and three prizes will be awarded.

Davis Hurls 1-Hit Game

St. Louis, Aug. 24.—Curt Davis, the veteran right hander who was tossed into the Dizzy Dean deal just for good measure, came within a bunt and a couple of inches of a no-hit no-run game today as he pitched the Cardinals to a 5-to-0 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Washington Junior Golf Team Winner

Baltimore Bows 9 to 3 as Shea's 71 Paces Local Lads.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Following in the footsteps of the women and amateur golfers who trounced Baltimore in previous engagements, Washington's all-star junior team tripled the score on the Monumental City youngsters yesterday at Manor by a 9-to-3 margin.

Bobby Brownell, team captain from the host club, and Buddy Sharkey, of Indian Spring, scored 2½ points against Otto Greiner, Maryland and Middle Atlantic champion, and Nathan Kaufman, Suburban, in the feature match. Brownell was 3 over par, with a 73, and Sharkey helped on three holes for a best ball of 70. Greiner was off his game and required 77 strokes while Kaufman was of little assistance, although he halved a hole on the second nine that aided in gaining a half point. The winners took the 18-hole match by a 5-to-4 margin.

One-Sided Victory.

The District women's team had previously beaten the Baltimore representatives, 12 to 6, and the amateurs won, 17 to 7. Thus the juniors scored the most one-sided triumph of the season. The team match is expected to be taken over by the Maryland State Golf Association next year and made an annual affair.

Jimmy Thompson, the Columbia Club junior champion, and Ed Bodnar, Beaver Dam, and Billy Shea, District titleholder, and his partner, Ralph Bogart, scored clean sweeps over the invaders.

Shea had the lowest round of the day, a one-over par 71, as he and Bogart held a one-hole margin on each nine over Ashley Ogden and Charles Follmer, Baltimore Country Club stars. Shea was out in 35, perfect figures, and went over on the eighteenth hole to miss a par round.

Gets an Eagle.

Thompson and Bodnar, all even playing the ninth hole, went one up as the former, runner-up in the Metropolitan scholastic championship, knocked a brassie shot around the bend, on the green and dropped a 6-foot putt for an eagle. That accounted for the point on the first nine and they won the second and the eighteenth by a two-hole margin.

The Oriole City representatives scored 2½ of their 3-point total in the third foursome when Gene Rice and Jack Bierman, Rolling Road, upset Jack Robinson, Indian Spring, and David Ross, Capital. The locals were two down at the ninth hole and although halving the back nine could not make up the deficit.

Lady Wrestler Arrives in Town

Women Wrestlers Headline Griffith Stadium Mat Card

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The 1938 version of beauties and beasties will be presented tonight at Griffith Stadium where Ruby Allen, comely brunette from St. Louis and Teddy Moran, another easy to look at damsel from Boston, meet in the feature of a triple-header wrestling bill.

Cliff Olson and Bibber McCoy, a couple of tough hombres who don't believe in rule books and referees, will supply the beasty angle in their bout, billed as the "villains' title match" of the season. And for those fans who prefer quantity to quality the promoter has arranged a five-man "battle royal."

The Misses Allen and Moran will compete for the ladies welterweight championship of the world and the hair is expected to fly. The girls exercise every woman's prerogative of scratching, hair-pulling, kicking and even biting—in addition to orthodox wrestling holds. Some of the ladies even have resorted to screaming on occasion, but records prove that this is poor strategy.

Miss Allen is hailed as the greatest feminine grappler who ever indulged in the sport, and in the Midwest enjoys a large following. This is her first Eastern invasion. Miss Moran is a comparative newcomer to the sport, but has made rapid strides and is expected to go far.

One of the season's best duels is expected when Olson and McCoy square off for their match. Both Harder and Campbell Pair to Beat Boston.

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 24.—Bruce Campbell's big bat and Mel Harder's stingy hurling gave the Cleveland Indians a 5-to-3 victory over the Boston Red Sox today, but the Sox retained a bare percentage hold on second place in the American League.

Campbell boomed out two four-baggers and a double to push in three runs. The homers, both off starter Bill Harris, were his tenth and eleventh of the year. Both went into the right field pavilion and traveled fully 525 feet. One came with a mate aboard.

5,000 See Marlboro Opening; Mama's Boy Wins Feature

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, Aug. 24.—It used to be "ask Mr. Foster;" now it's "just query Quigley."

They call Ernie Quigley "Supervisor of Umpires" for the National League. But actually he has become baseball's big puzzle man, the question-and-answer guy to whom fans, writers, players, officials and umpires present their diamond dilemmas.

JACK CUDDY.

Ernie's "supervisor" department is less than 2 years old, but already his daily mail approaches that of a radio or movie star. His correspondence is not restricted to the United States. He gets queries from Canada, Latin America, Europe, Japan, Australia and even South Africa.

Ernie's department seems to have done a Corrigan. It was inaugurated to handle the 12 umpires in Ford Frick's circuit and to provide authoritative solutions for problems confronting those umpires. But now it seems that virtually everyone in baseball, excepting persons connected directly with the American League, is writing to 57-year-old Quigley.

* * * *

The minor leagues, semi-pro organizations, industrial leagues, colleges, high schools and teams in foreign countries are calling upon him for authoritative information. This is in addition to the raft of correspondence from sport writers and fans.

We were chatting in his little office high up in the RCA Building. His cubicle is between prexy Frick's sanctum and Bill Brandt's publicity bureau. Ernie's efforts do not compete with Brandt's department. Rather they lend Bill a welcome assist.

Quigley, a robust fellow who packs 210 pounds of well-distributed brawn on a 5-foot 11-inch frame, said: "I get more questions about batting out of order and about the infield fly than any other problems. From umpires as well as others. Sometimes they seem complicated, but they're always easy to answer."

* * * *

He spoke of the infield fly, which is a ball lofted so that it has a definite arc and which descends where it could be handled "reasonably" by an infielder. He has received many queries asking who is out when an infield fly hits a baserunner. If the baserunner is standing on a bag when hit, only the batsman is out. But if the runner is off the bag, both he and the batsman are out. At least that's the National League ruling.

Batting out of order has many ramifications and is not generally understood by the fans. In the first place, Quigley emphasized this violation is one of the four "appeal" cases on the diamond, in which the umpire can take no action until he has been asked to take action by a player on the opposing team. The umpire can take no action without the appeal even though he notes the violation.

The other appeal cases are (2) leaving the base too soon before a fly ball is caught, (3) missing a bag while running the bases, and (4) being caught off base after over-running first base and making an attempt to go to second.

* * * *

When a player bats out of order, a member of the opposing team must appeal to the umpire behind the plate before the first ball is pitched to the next batsman. Otherwise there is no violation. If the appeal is made correctly, the "proper" batsman—the man who should have been batting instead of the one who went out of turn—is called out. The "proper" batsman is penalized because he was asleep and let someone else take his place. Naturally, in such case whatever the "improper batsman" accomplished, even a home run, doesn't count, because the man who should have been batting is out.

Then, of course, comes the question: "Who is up next, if two or three men in the batting order have been skipped?"—etc. Ernie can answer that and all other questions pronto. But we can't go into the answers now.

Jungo Takes Willard Race; Pays $18.10

Mama's Boy, Washington Owned Horse, Returns $4.60 Price.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 24.—Horse racing returned to a clearing in the woods on the outskirts of this Prince Georges County town to be greeted by an enthusiastic crowd of 5,000 turf fans. With yellow and black for the District of Columbia tags predominating on the parking grounds, the sport of kings began a ten-day showing at the plant of the Southern Maryland Agricultural Association.

With Washington supplying the chief support, it was only fitting that a Capital-owned horse should take down the Upper Marlboro Purse, the day's outstanding event. Mama's Boy, owned and trained by W. H. Denham, drove to a two-length victory over Brainchild, to win the 5½-furlong sprint. Third money in the field of eight went to Patsy Begone.

Mama's Boy, a $4.60 favorite, had to be much the best to win. Under the handling of Jockey Cecil Coffman, of Cumberland, Mama's Boy broke far behind the leaders and took the long route on the outside. Despite the handicap, the 3-year-old son of Supremus was running easily while collecting chief money.

Brainchild bothered Patsy Begone going to the first turn and then went on to get to the front of the pace-making Flickering. But along came Mama's Boy and from that point it was all over but the skimpy payoff.

Mama's Boy turned in the fair time of 1:09 2-5.

The day's secondary feature, the Willard Hotel Purse, went to Jungo, an $18.10 shot, in a thrilling finish that saw Ardor second, beaten three-fourths of a length, with Happy Chase third, a half length away. Irish Vote was installed the favorite in the mile and a sixteenth test and ran nowhere in particular.

Grunt, owned by Amil Booker, scored a lucky victory in the first race to bring his backers a $10.70 mutuel. Hope, which ran second, was in front and apparently headed for victory when Jockey Hacker lost his stirrups. He was forced to finish as if he was dogging a steer. Arachne, a paddock tip, was third.

Bernard Bond's Sure Miss made good for the favorite players in the second race. The filly shook off Red Wings, the pace setter, to win going away by two lengths. Red Wings held on to be second ahead of Home Hunter. The winner paid $6.70.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRUNT, $10.70, $5.40, $3.60; HOPE, $3.70, $2.90; ARACHNE, $4.00.

GRUNT, forward factor from start, saved ground entering stretch to take command and was kept to drive to end. HOPE, off poorly, was rushed to contention, took command when asked, but Hacker lost stirrups and could not do mount justice in closing stages. ARACHNE took lead at break and weakened gradually after chasing ROVING EYE'S pace.

SECOND RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:49. Off 2:50. Winner, Bernard Bond's b. f. (2), by Swift and Sure—Barefoot. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:10 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SURE MISS, $6.70, $4.00, $2.50; RED WINGS, $4.20, $2.80; HOME HUNTER, $2.70.

SURE MISS, closest to pace of RED WINGS from start, worked way up on outside of latter to take command nearing stretch and drew out nicely. RED WINGS went to front under hustling tactics, saved ground, but was no match for winner. HOME HUNTER, off sluggishly, responded mildly when placed to a drive.

Daily Double, Grunt and Sure Miss, Paid $41.10.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:25. Off 3:28. Winner, C. E. George's br. m. (7), by Runantell—Miss Vaal. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:27 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOANTELL, $10.00, $5.40, $2.90; HIGHDEAR, $12.60, $4.40; VERITAS, $2.70.

GOANTELL, steadied along after breaking poorly, responded to intermittent punishment to dispose of HIGHDEAR in closing strides. HIGHDEAR set and forced pace with speed that was difficult to overcome, but could not resist winner. VERITAS was hard used while racing with HIGHDEAR and weakened. LADY CIREK, half way in gate and squeezed back directly after break, circled wide to improve position and closed stoutly.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:02. Off 4:06. Winner, A. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUNGO, $18.10, $8.80, $5.60; ARDOR, $17.00, $7.50; HAPPY CHASE (Moore-Feltner entry), $4.30.

JUNGO, in thick of contention from start, rallied when placed to drive, disposed of HAPPY CHASE and held ARDOR safe. ARDOR, forced to race wide throughout, moved up with good courage, but swerved in final sixteenth. HAPPY CHASE, rushed to front going to first turn, settled while setting pace and weakened right at end.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:43. Off 4:44. Winner, W. H. Denham's b. c. (3), by Supremus—Mammy's Girl. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $325; second, $100; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 1:09 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAMA'S BOY, $4.60, $4.10, $3.60; BRAINCHILD, $11.60, $5.30; PATSEY BEGONE, $3.20.

MAMA'S BOY, much the best, was off in tangle, was taken to outside while improving position, disposed of BRAINCHILD and was opening a gap at end. BRAINCHILD forced pace of FLICKERING, but could not cope with MAMA'S BOY while kept to drive. PATSEY BEGONE was in close quarters when bothered by BRAINCHILD going to first turn and rallied in closing test.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start poor from stalls. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:17. Off at 5:19. Winner, Mrs. G. Hutchins' lt. ch. f. (4), by Golden Broom—Early Vote. Trained by E. Brining. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 1:57 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—EARLY BROOM, $8.90, $5.00, $3.60; LUNA BRIGHT, $10.00, $5.00; CANYNGE, $4.20.

EARLY BROOM, nicely rated while within striking distance of leaders, responded when shaken up and disposed of LUNA BRIGHT while put to strong hand ride through stretch. LUNA BRIGHT went to front with bold rush and held on stoutly in closing stretch. CANYNGE was forward factor while racing wide. LITTLE WACKIE was rated test, when unable to get to front of early pace of MEGAI and stopped badly when real test came.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stalls. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:51. Off 5:52. Winner, J. Bishop's br. m. Stop Selling Topples Wheat In Last Hour

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 24.—Wheat lost 2 cents a bushel today when a wave of stop-loss selling struck the pit in the final hour. Liquidation here was touched off by a drop of almost 3 cents at Winnipeg.

Chicago prices rose about a cent at the opening and during the first hour remained fairly steady but thereafter selling increased and when quotations slipped a large number of orders to stop losses were forced into execution. The extreme drop from the early highs was almost 3 cents. Winnipeg prices were at new lows for the season while Chicago quotations were little more than a cent above five-year lows made a week ago.

Reports that an Anglo-American trade agreement and a revised treaty between the United States and Canada were near settlement were believed by many dealers here to have affected the Winnipeg market. Recent talk of an export subsidy program in this country has affected the Canadian market bearishly inasmuch as both countries are competitors in the world trade. There also have been rumors of temporary withdrawal of the 6 cents import duty on American wheat into Great Britain.

Chicago wheat closed 1⅜-2⅛ lower, compared with yesterday's finish, September, 61¾-62; December, 63⅞-64; corn, unchanged to 1⅛ lower, September, 51; December, 48⅝-48¾; oats, ⅛ off; rye, ¾-1 down; lard, unchanged to 10 lower.

Steel Activity Continues Rise To 43 Per Cent

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 24.—Operations at the Nation's steel mills this week are at 43 per cent of capacity, a rise of two points over last week, Iron Age estimated today.

"At Pittsburgh, new business is running 18 to 25 per cent ahead of July bookings, and the past week's orders were approximately 10 per cent better than those of the week before," the publication said.

Pittsburgh operations were reported 3 points higher at 33 per cent, while the nearby Wheeling-Weirton district rate has advanced to 79 per cent, far exceeding the highest rate elsewhere. Chicago output is reported up 2 points at 38 per cent, Cleveland-Lorain up 5 points at 45 per cent, the Youngstown district up one point at 43 per cent, and Buffalo up 6 points at 46½ per cent.

"The most uncertain factor in the present steel situation is that relating to wages and prices," the organ added. "With larger shipments, some steel companies are sustaining larger losses, a situation that may not be rectified on the basis of present costs and selling prices until operations have reached 60 per cent or higher. Admitting the impracticability of raising steel prices with operations at their present low point, steel companies have as yet given no inkling as to what action, if any, may be taken to check their heavy losses. If a wage cut is being seriously considered by any important company, it is a closely guarded secret."

The auto industry, entering the 1939 model year, "offers the most immediate prospect for further improvement in steel volume," the publication said.

Vigorous Opening Fails to Hold Although 53 Issues Made New 1938 High.

New York, Aug. 24.—Sharply higher prices at the opening of the stock market today failed to hold and the market backed away before it reached the average tops established late in July and early in August. Although 53 individual issues were carried through to new high prices for the year, the market as a whole encountered heavy going after leaders had opened on big blocks ranging from 1,000 to 5,000 shares. The close was near the worst of the day but up 0.08 point for the composite average.

This was disappointing to the bullish forces, after the bulge of Tuesday and the early indications today that the move would continue. The poor action of the final hours led to predictions of a technical reversal before another try at the highs of earlier in the month can be made. Trading expanded on the recation, the turnover of 1,235,160 shares being the largest since August 12.

The forward move of the morning was again under the leadership of shares of the motor and accessory lines and in view of the better reports coming from this industry the street looks to this group of stocks to set the pace if the bullish forces are to be successful in pushing the stock market through to a new high. Both Chrysler and General Motors opened at new highs for the year yesterday and the move spread out to include other motors. The tire companies and the long list of concerns which supply parts for the manufacturers.

The opening was as sensational as anything Wall Street has witnessed in recent months. A few of the big blocks that changed hands shortly after the first gong included 3,500 steel, up 1 1-2; 5,000 radio, unchanged; 2,100 Packard, up ⅛; 1,800 Bendix, up ½; 3,000 Chrysler, up ⅝; 2,000 Bethlehem, up ⅝, and many others. In a good proportion of the active stocks, however, the first prices were the best.

Motor Shares Active.

General Motors, Briggs, Motor Wheel, Timken, Studebaker, Hudson and Goodyear Tire closed unchanged. Motor and allied stocks which more than lost their early gains and closed with slight recessions included Chrysler, United States Rubber and Yellow Truck. Gains ranging from small fractions to a point were retained by other leaders in the industry, including Borg Warner, Budd, Electric Auto Lite, Goodrich, Greyhound, Houdaille B, Packard, Kelsey, LOF Glass and Motor Products.

There were a few other odds and ends of bullish news today which were seized upon by the bullish forces as growing evidence that we are getting near the fall upswing in business. Carloading reports from individual roads indicate that the total for the week ended last Saturday will be the best thus far this year, and power production was at a new high since January 8.

Commodity markets had a disappointing day and helped unsettle the securities markets. A 3-cent break in Winnipeg wheat prices was followed by a decline in Chicago, which touched off stop orders, bringing about net declines of 1⅜ to 2½ cents. Traders associated the weakness in Winnipeg with reports of an Anglo-American trade agreement. Cotton lost Tuesday's gains and went to its lows of the season, ending the session down 6 to 8 points as the trade awaited official word from Washington on the new cotton loan and its terms.

Rail Bonds in Demand.

Speculative railroad bonds showed modest strength in the listed market today, but a degree of uncertainty prevailed otherwise. Local tractions had a bad day, and the wavering equity market occasioned a late decline in other speculative bonds. Best-grade money market obligations were well maintained. In the foreign section movements were irregular. Turnover in all bonds was $6,490,000, which is above the totals of recent sessions but still under the normal.

Fresh inquiry developed for various bonds of Southern Railway, Baltimore & Ohio and other systems that are moving to adjust financial commitments. The intermediate-priced bonds of New York Central, Southern Pacific, Nickel Plate and similar roads were marked 1 to 2 points upward. Some of the default carrier issues again did well. The speculative rail and utility holding company bonds were uncertain. Local tractions fell 2 to 5 points on small trades. Communications bonds and some of the commodity issues improved sharply.

United States Treasury obligations hardly varied, with trading restricted as dealers and investors awaited the return of Secretary Morgenthau and disclosure of the September financing decision. Telephone debentures were off fractionally, but Best Grade Power & Light operating bonds remained firm, as did such leading industrials as United States Steel debentures. The few genuinely high grade rails were firm.

Argentine bonds showed fractional gains in the foreign section, while Canadian, Australian and Scandinavian issues were steady. The Japanese group resumed the modest rally from recent lows, but Italians were dull. The German group reflected the usual repatriation buying, while Latin-American default bonds were neglected

Shortage Seen For New Autos In Low Stocks

New York, Aug. 24.—Because of the strenuous attempts to reduce their dealer stocks of new automobiles over the past seven months coupled with the extremely low rate of assemblies this month, the Standard Statistics Company says today that it is altogether probable that there will be shortages of new cars in many centers in the next few weeks.

The survey points out that domestic field stocks of new cars were reduced by some 160,000 in the first half of 1938, in contrast to an increase of about 132,000 in stocks in the first half of last year, when production delays threatened by strikes and impending price increases caused heavy forward buying. Allowing for the further expansion of car stocks in the second half of 1937, it is indicated that dealers' inventories on June 30, 1938, were about 86,000 less than a year earlier.

Reliable estimates suggest that dealers' stocks of passenger cars alone were moderately above 400,000 at the end of 1937, and that they had been brought down to little more than 260,000 by mid-year. These stocks are believed to have been reduced by perhaps 60,000 more in July, and with August output the lowest, by a substantial margin, for any month this year (even allownig for beginning assemblies on 1939 models of a few lines), a further sharp reduction by September 1 is expected.

Moreover, the reduced rate of new car sales has given dealers an opportunity to sell a markedly larger number of used cars than have been taken in trade for a number of months past. By mid-year, used car inventories held by new car retailers had probably been cut to roughly 550,000, more than 25 per cent under the peak set earlier in the year. Before active production on 1939 models is under way, it is expected that stocks will be well below that figure.

Foreign Markets.

London, Aug. 24 (AP).—Stock market traders were more cheerful today following the sharp upward swing in Wall Street late Tuesday. Artificial silk shares were well supported and the industrial group likewise displayed a firm tone. Coppers and other base metal issues were prominent in the upward move and the oil and rubber groups sold higher. Home rails recovered some of Tuesday's losses. Gilt-edged securities and American shares improved, with the latter gaining 1 to 2 points.

Paris, Aug. 24 (AP).—The bourse closed firm, aside from irregularity in rentes which were 20 centimes down to 20 higher. Industrials sold fractionally up. Royal Dutch gained about 120 francs and Suez Canal advanced 75. Bank of France finished with a loss of 55 francs.

Liverpool, Aug. 24 (AP).—Early advances in cotton futures today were later lost as hedge selling against outside growths encountered tapering demand. Final prices were unchanged to 1d lower. Wheat futures moved erratically to end ½d higher to 1-4d lower. A rally on British milling demand and short covering was undermined by late realizing.

Towers on Board Of Lincoln Service

Frederic N. Towers, of the law firm of Frost, Meyers & Towers, was elected director of the Lincoln Service Corporation. Mr. Towers is general counsel and a director of the Liberty National Bank.

Directors declared the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents and an extra dividend of 1¾ per cent was declared on the 7 per cent preferred stock and the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent was declared on the 6 per cent participating preferred stock. All dividends are payable September 12 to stockholders of record August 31.

Charles Delmar, president of the corporation, reports an increase of 21.59 per cent in the volume of business for the first six months of 1938 and an increase of 12.15 per cent in the net earnings for the first six months as compared with the like period of 1937.

Herbert Lawson, of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., chairman of the membership committee of Washington chapter, American Institute of Banking, has announced the personnel of the committee to assist him during the year. Serving as vice chairman will be George R. Galleher of the Lincoln National Bank. The other members of the committee are: Thomas J. Norris, Bank of Commerce & Savings; Jeannette Fuchs, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Kenneth O. Hulse, Hamilton National Bank; Luis F. Corea, Riggs National Bank, and L. T. Savage, American Security & Trust Co.

German Law Financial Sadism, Says N.Y. Judge

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—Ruling that German devisen laws were "highly repugnant to our sense of honor and decency, and a reflection of financial sadism at its worst," State Supreme Justice Meier Steinbrink granted Pan American Securities Corporation summary judgment for $188,947, with interest and costs, against Friederick Krupp, Inc., German munitions manufacturers.

Plaintiff sought in the action to recover the principal amount of bonds issued by the defendant German company which came due February 1, 1937. Defendant, through counsel, contended devisen (foreign exchange) laws had prevented it from making payment.

Foreign Selling Lowers Cotton

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—Foreign selling and liquidation caused cotton to turn easier today following mid-morning steadiness. December sold off from 8.36 to 8.28 and finished at the low, with closing prices 6 to 8 points net lower.

Opening prices were 1 to 3 points lower in a limited response to easiness at Liverpool. Selling was generally light while the trade absorbed contracts. After early Liverpool selling here let up, prices sold up close to the previous close.

Three Shipyards Bid On Training Ship

The Maritime Commission received bids yesterday from three shipyards for the conversion of the steamship Edgemoor into a training ship for the United States maritime service. The base bids were:

Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, $1,098,000; Newport News Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., $1,172,000; Atlantic Basin Irionworks, Brooklyn, $1,129,000.

Power Output At Year's High

New York, Aug. 24.—Electric power production in the United States for the week ended August 20 totaled 2,138,517,000 kilowatt hours, a gain of .2 of 1 per cent over 2,133,461,000 in the preceeding week but a drop of 7.2 per cent under 2,304,032,000 in the comparable 1937 week, the Edison Electric Institute estimated today.

The more than seasonally expected advance carried the associated press index of power production to a new high for the year at 113.1, the third consecutive week in which a new 1938 peak had been recorded. The previous week the index, which uses 1929-30 as 100 and is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 112.6 and a year ago at 124.3. The range for recent years follows:

First Mexican Oil Here for Refining

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—The first shipment of oil purchased from the Mexican government for refining in the United States since the expropriation of American and foreign oil holdings last spring was delivered yesterday in Houston, Tex., the Eastern States Petroleum Co., said today.

The shipment amounted to 40,000 barrels of crude oil of about 29 gravity, the company said. The oil did not originate in the expropriated fields, the company declared, but came from wells of government-owned Petromex, in the Poza Rica field.

St. Lawrence Seaway War Is Revived

Steel Industry Sees Peril to Markets, Says Trade Authority.

Cleveland, Ohio, Aug. 24.—Renewed effort by the National Administration to effect a treaty with Canada for a Great Lakes-St. Lawrence seaway and power development is rousing strong opposition on the part of American industries, according to Steel magazine today. This follows the recent action of Secretary Hull in again transmitting to the Canadian government a draft of a treaty virtually the same as that which was rejected by the United States Senate in 1932.

The iron and steel industry considers the proposal a threat against its markets. To place the great Midwestern area tributary to the Great Lakes on a parity with ports on the Atlantic seaboard would, steel men say, open the way for dumping iron and steel from Europe and India at prices far below those possible for American producers to meet, operating on the wage scales now in effect.

While President Roosevelt's drive for waterpower development is seen to underly the pressure for the project, independent studies of this phase of the problem indicate that present and potential industrial demands for power in the St. Lawrence and tributary areas are insufficient to make the project practical.

Wage Cuts Predicted.

Leading steelmakers believe completion of a seaway accommodating ocean-going ships would dislocate the entire industry, bring on ruinous competition among producers and consumers. Direct result, steelmakers say, would be lower wage rates, with all the economic ills that follow low wages and low prices.

Further harmful effects would come from the fact that at best the waterway would not be usable more than six months out of the year, requiring railroads and other carriers to maintain sufficient service to take care of the off-season peak load, and suffer the consequent loss of business during the open season of the waterway.

Surveys indicate that the total traffic likely to use the seaway would probably not exceed 10,500,000 tons a year, including local traffic, and making liberal allowance for expected growth. Grain would comprise over 60 per cent of the total; two-thirds of the grain would be of Canadian origin. Annual overhead charges for interest and depreciation were figured conservatively at $40,000,000 per year, paid from national funds, about $3.50 per ton, contributed for the benefit of shippers using the route.

Cost of the project to the United States, estimaed at about $1,000,000,000 since it is to be a free channel, would be paid from the public treasury and would be a subsidy to whatever interests could make use of it. Most of these interests would be foreign.

Archibald Near Crown

Armstrong's Pilot Opens Gate to Joe

Meade Says Champion May Quit Ranks of Feathers.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

With $1,000 in cold currency reposing in the New York State Athletic Commission's strong box as a guarantee of his good faith in challenging Henry Armstrong for the featherweight title, Joey Archibald is applying the pressure as he polishes his heavy artillery for Monday night's bout with Tony Dupre at Griffith Stadium.

That one grand which Manager Al Weill turned over to the New York group is bona fide United States money, and Weill's act was no idle gesture. Archibald holds the upper hand in the scramble for the 126-pound crown, and Weill was quick to recognize that fact. Armstrong must sign within 15 days to defend the title, or it will be declared vacated, and when such action occurs Weill will pounce on it like a dog on a beefsteak, and claim it for Archibald's very own.

Armstrong Manager Eddie Meade stated yesterday at Los Angeles, possibly will surrender the crown without a fight very soon. When Meade uses the word "possibly" he means positively, for it is a known fact that dusky Henry can't make the weight and still walk into the ring under his own power. That's all Weill was waiting for. He placed his bet with the New York commission at the strategical hour, and it looks as though his dough is going to pay big dividends.

New York possibly will order Joey to meet Mike Belloise over the 15-round route, but Weill will decline, pointing out that Joey whipped Michael in Washington earlier in the summer. And if New York decides to hand the palm to Belloise, Weill will scream to the high heavens and the National Boxing Association. He hasn't exactly got heaven on the spot, but he has got the N. B. A. where he wants it. That body announced it would recognize Archibald's victory over Belloise as a step toward the featherweight title. Hence, all Joey has to do now is avoid Belloise until further notice, and when Armstrong abdicates Joey can lay rightful claim to the N. B. A. toga.

Of course there's still Dupre to be disposed of, which accounts for Joey's strenuous eight-hour training day. Dupre may have Archibald's number, as he claims, which probably accounts for the mental strain Joey is under. The point is, however, that Archibald must whip Dupre Monday night or all of Weill's clever maneuvering has been in vain.

Leo Rodak will follow Dupre—if Joey survives Monday night, but he doesn't figure to give the Providence puncher as much trouble as Tony.

boys specialize in foul tactics and if a good, clean hold is used tonight by either party the fans undoubtedly will squawk. This is the kind of a match the customers can sit back and enjoy because they don't care how much either suffers.

McCoy is a former Mount St. Mary's athlete, starring in three sports at the Emittsburg School. He was a star catcher on the baseball team and later went up to the majors for a two-year soujourn with Detroit. Wrestling, however, is his favorite pastime.

General admission tonight has been reduced to 55 cents, with box seats selling for $1.10.

Municipal Southpaw Tourney Win by Tyler

Claude Tyler, young public links southpaw, won the East Potomac left-hander tournament yesterday with a 165 total, from rounds of 82 and 83.

Mrs. N. J. Waldron Wins Beaver Dam Tourney

Mrs. N. J. Waldron and Sally Upstart tied in the ladies day golf tourney at Beaver Dam yesterday, with net 87s. Mrs. Waldron won first prize in the draw.

Anne Drew, Indian Spring, had low net score among the visitors with an 88, while Mrs. J. C. Dale, Kenwood, had 92.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald,
(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month."

Four Nats figure in the award of points in the Man of the Month race on the basis of yesterday's play, with Rick Ferrell and Ken Chase meriting the largest shares.

To Ferrell, three points, because his second hit of the game, a triple on a hit-and-run play, won the ball game in the eighth inning.

To Chase, three points, because he gave a masterful performance in holding the Browns scoreless after relieving Weaver in the eighth inning with none out and men on first and third.

To Buddy Lewis, two points, because he drove in the Nats' first two runs with his homer and long fly.

To Al Simmons, two points, because he wiped out the Browns' 2-1 lead with his third-inning homer with a man on base.

The Score:

Zeke Bonura	41	Ken Chase	10
Buddy Myer	23	Monte Weaver	9
George Case	18	Sammy West	9
Cecil Travis	17	Taft Wright	8
Al Simmons	17	Ossie Bluege	8
Harry Kelley	16	Angelo Giuliani	5
Dutch Leonard	15	Pete Appleton	4
Joe Krakauskas	13	Rick Ferrell	4
Buddy Lewis	11	Elon Hogsett	2

Edwards Lost To Redskins

Tackle Is Out Few Days With Bad Elbow.

Two happenings of distinctly different nature yesterday served to leave Redskin Coach Flaherty with mingled feelings of joy and sadness as the Washington professional eleven engaged in its second contact workout at Ballston Field.

Of welcome interest to Flaherty was the zip and spirit shown by George (Automatic) Karamatic, the Gonzaga back who had been counted on to partially fill the big gap left by the departure of Cliff Battles, league's leading ground gainer in 1937.

But counterbalancing this good fortune was the temporary loss of Capt. Turk Edwards, big tackle and backbone of the Redskin line. Edwards has a slight abscess under his left arm, which, while not of a serious nature, will force him to rest for several days.

After the workout, Coach Flaherty and Redskin Owner George Marshall left for Philadelphia for the All-Star game and failed to announce a second cut of players, which was expected to follow the practice. Flaherty is expected to make known the cuts on his return here today.

A morning workout will be held today, but the afternoon drill will be pushed back until tonight, when the arc lights at Ballston will be turned on. This is being done to accustom the players to night action, such as they will face in the All-Star game in Chicago, August 31.

After today's workouts a one drill a day schedule will be followed until the Chicago game.

Golf Champ Is Defeated

Bruce McCormick Beaten in Cleveland Play.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Aug. 4.—The longshots set a blistering pace which ran one favorite after another—among them the defending champion—out of the National Public Links Golf Championship race today.

The 1937 title winner, Bruce McCormick, of Los Angeles, headed a group of highly regarded entries who were blasted to the sidelines in first and second round match competition which saw "unknowns" take almost complete command of the annual working man's classic.

McCormick, the firefighter who won the championship at San Francisco, was a first-round victim, bowing to Lloyd Nordstrom, of Davenport, Iowa, 1 up over 19 holes. Other "Well liked" players to fade were Walter Burkemo, the curly-headed medalist from Detroit; Don Erickson, of Los Angeles, medalist and runner-up a year ago, and David A. Mitchell, of Atlanta, Ga., a former champion.

Nordstrom, tourney medalist in 1935, chipped for an easy putt on the nineteenth hole to trip McCormick and then came back in the afternoon to defeat William F. Cady, of Santa Monica, Calif., 1 up. Burkemo fell 1 up, 19 holes, in the second round before Alton "Cannonball" Age, of Louisville, Ky., who won his first round match from Mike Cestone, of Newark, N. J., 5 and 3.

Erickson was eliminated on the nineteenth hole of the first round by Vash Hromyak, Sharon, Pa., who in turn was defeated by Ralph Evans, of Santa Monica, Calif., 2 and 1, in the afternoon skirmish. Louis Cry, railroad worker from Portland, Oreg., tripped Mitchell, 2 and 1, and then beat a fellow townsman, Wes Berner, by the same margin.

Two 16-year-old youths advanced spectacularly. Bart Taro, newsboy from Seattle, Wash., downed Joseph Higgins, of Dayton, Ohio, 2 up, and Chase Fannon, of Chicago, 4 and 2. Charles Lind, Denver High School star, tripped Ronald Williams, Dearborn, Mich., 3 and 2, and Pat Mucci, Newark, N. J., 1 up.

McIntyre Will Pitch.

Lefty McIntyre and Woody Godfrey will form the battery for the St. Mary Celtics Sunday afternoon, when the locals invade Annapolis for the fourth game of the seven-game series.

Reds Defeat Phils, 3 to 1

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Aug. 24.—The Cincinnati Reds combined five hits and four Philadelphia errors for a 3-to-1 victory today to sweep the two-game series and place them one-half game behind the Giants.

Lefty Lee Grissom was forced to retire when he suffered a sprained ankle sliding into second in the second inning, but was credited with the victory. Jim Weaver relieved him and allowed five hits. Weintraub scored in the ninth to save the Phils from a shutout.

Legal Notices

R. G. SHURE, Attorney,
Citizens Bank Bldg.

IN THE MUNICIPAL COURT OF THE District of Columbia. J. Arthur Walters, trading as Takoma Funeral Home, 277 Carroll street northwest, Washington, D. C., plaintiff, vs. Adelaide Shupp, defendant. No. 371-415. Order of publication. The object of this suit is to recover judgment against the defendant, Adelaide Shupp, for funeral services rendered, pursuant to her order of June 16, 1938, to the deceased Mrs. Anna Elizabeth Boyle, in the sum of two hundred seventy-five ($275.00) dollars, and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is, therefore, this 10th day of August, 1938, ordered that the defendant appear in this court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. ELLEN K. RAEDY, Judge. A true copy. Test; (Seal.) BLANCHE NEFF, Clerk.

HENRY S. GOODMAN, Attorney,

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Alice Malone O'Keefe, 1231 Penn street northeast, Washington, D. C., plaintiff, vs. Francis H. O'Keefe, 1409 Perry place northwest, Washington, D. C., defendant, No. 67669, Equity. The object of this suit is to obtain an absolute divorce by the plaintiff, Alice Malone O'Keefe, from the defendant, Francis H. O'Keefe, on the grounds of desertion for more than two years. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 17th day of August, 1938, ordered that the defendant, Francis H. O'Keefe, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default, provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. JAMES M. PROCTOR, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By H. B. DERTZBAUGH, Assistant Clerk. 18.25.1

HERBERT PITTLE, Attorney.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED States for the District of Columbia. In re the application of Barney Goldstein, Max S. Goldstein, Florence Goldstein, Rae Goldstein, Norman J. Goldstein, Sylvia Goldstein and Daniel Goldstein for change of name. No. 67948, Equity Doc. Barney Goldstein, Florence Goldstein, Max S. Goldstein, Rae Goldstein, Norman J. Goldstein, Sylvia Goldstein and Daniel Goldstein having filed a petition praying for a decree changing their names to Barney Pelkin, Florence Pelkin, Max S. Pelkin, Rae Pelkin, Norman J. Pelkin, Sylvia Pelkin and Daniel Pelkin and having applied to the court for an order of publication of the notice required by law in such cases, it is, by the court, this 24th day of August, A. D. 1938, ordered that all persons concerned show cause, if any there be, on or before the 13TH DAY OF SEPTEMBER, A. D. 1938, why the prayers of said petition should not be granted, provided that a copy of this order be published once a week for three consecutive weeks before said day in The Washington Post newspaper. F. DICKINSON LETTS, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By H. B. DERTZBAUGH, Assistant Clerk. 25.1.8

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia Yetta Becker, trustee, et al., plaintiffs, vs. Louis Becker et al., defendants. Equity No. 44751. Order nisi. Yetta Becker, trustee under the last will and testament of Max Becker, deceased, having reported to the Court that she has received an offer from S. A. Gentry to purchase lot 1 in square 2933 improved by premises known as 1201 Kennedy street nw. in the District of Columbia, at and for the price of Fourteen Thousand Five Hundred Dollars ($14,500) subject to a commission of Five Hundred Dollars ($500.00), and it appearing that a report has been filed by three appraisers appointed by the Court stating that said offer is fair and reasonable. It is by the Court, this sixteenth day of August, 1938, adjudged, ordered and decreed that the said sale be ratified and confirmed unless cause to the contrary be shown on or before the TWENTY-NINTH DAY OF AUGUST 1938; provided a copy of this order be published in The Washington Post newspaper for 10 successive days and the Washington Law Reporter for two successive weeks. (Signed) JAMES M. PROCTOR, Justice. A true copy. Test (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By H. B. DERTZBAUGH, Assistant Clerk. 18-27

815 Fifteenth Street Northwest.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia, holding an Equity Court. Eva A. Krey, plaintiff, vs. Charles A. Wilson et al., defendants. Equity No. 67658. Order of publication. The object of this suit is to establish of record the title of the plaintiff by adverse possession to lots 24 and 25 in J. F. Callan's subdivision of lots in square 480, as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia in Liber N. K. at folio 258; lot 24 being improved by premises No. 1341 Sixth street northwest, and lot 25 being improved by premises No. 1343 and 1345 Sixth street northwest. Upon motion of the plaintiff, it is this 17th day of August, 1938, ordered that the defendants, Charles A. Wilson, William Wilson Ketcham, William Emery Ketcham, Bessie or Elizabeth Taylor, Cora E. Ketcham, Laura G. Foote and Charles K. Westbrook, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise as to them, this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. It is further ordered that the defendants, the unknown heirs, devisees and alienees of said Charles A. Wilson, William Wilson Ketcham, William Emery Ketcham, Bessie or Elizabeth Taylor, Cora E. Ketcham, Laura G. Foote and Charles K. Westbrook, and the unknown heirs, devisees and alienees of Dewitt C. Wilson, deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring after the expiration of forty days, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, from the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise as to them, this cause will be proceeded with as in case of default, provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks before said day in The Washington Post, longer publication having been dispensed with for satisfactory cause shown. By the court: JAMES M. PROCTOR, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By H. B. DERTZBAUGH, Assistant Clerk.

How to Torture Your Husband.

Bob Burns Says—

In almost every catastrophe, you'll find unsung heroes. The bravery medal usually goes to the fella who hollers the loudest and gets everybody excited when it should go to the quiet fella who informs the people of the danger they're in without gettin' em excited.

When my Uncle Orchie was clerkin' in a hotel, a nervous lady called down one night and said she couldn't sleep with a bunch of men runnin' up and down the hall. In a quiet voice, Uncle Orchie says "Well, if you can sleep while the hotel's on fire, a few firemen runnin' down the hall shouldn't bother you much!"
